CITY OF BOSTON.

Organization of the City Government, JAN. 6, 1873.

The Mayor and members elect of the two branches of the City Council met in the City Hall at ten o'clock this morning, for the organization of the City Government for the present municipal year.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen was called to order by the City Clerk.

A message was received from the Common Council informing the Board that a quorum of members was present, ready to be qualified.

The Board went into convention with the Common Council, for the qualification of the members of the City Government.

Common Council.

The Common Council was called to order by George A. Shaw, senior member, in service in 1857, who on taking the chair, addressed the Council as follows:

Gentlemen of the Council—I had the honor to be a member of the Council for the year 1857, and that term of service being anterior to that of any other member elect, it becomes my duty to call the Council to order. In doing this I may be permitted to say, that the constant growth of the population of our city, the steady and permanent increase of our mercantile, commercial, and mechanical interests, the improvements constantly required in the development of our more newly acquired territory, as well as for changes and improvements upon the old, add year by year to the labors of the City Council, but at no time since the organization of the City Government under its charter, have its duties and responsibilities been as important as at this present time.

The terrible calamity which has recently fallen upon us, and by which so many of our most enterprising citizens have seen the accumulations of years of industry crumble away, and which for the time being almost paralyzed their energies, has yet developed the recuperative powers of our people; and the liberality bestowed upon the unfortunate, and the encouragement they have received both at home and from abroad, have enabled them to renew their labors full of hope and courage. But very much yet remains for the supervision and co-operation of the City Government in restoring to its wonted uses the devastated territory.

I think we may congratulate ourselves that the General Court of our State has met, with a liberal hand, the desires of the city in granting such legislation as will enable the carrying out of the requirements necessary to rebuild the now desolate ruins, and it will be our duty as it will be our pleasure as a co-ordinate branch of the City Council to aid in every proper and legitimate manner in such measures as will best promote the public good, in improving and rebuilding the burnt district, that it may be even more than ever the pride of our business marts.

There may be and no doubt are required many reforms in the management of the municipal affairs of our city, but nothing calls for more immediate and decided action than the thorough revision of the Department of Health, especially when we consider the fearful ravages of the disease now so prevalent among us, and I can have no doubt that every member of the Council will use his personal influence to the end that it may no longer be said that because of differences of opinion among the members of the present Board of Health upon the matter of locating a receptacle for the diseased, and no sufficient provisions been heretofore made available for their care, or for the protection of the community, the disease itself has thereby been allowed to spread and continue.

Although this Board has but a concurrent voice in such matters, yet the community has a right to expect of us the exercise of our best energies and positive action, in pushing forward all wise measures of relief, and that with all possible despatch.

Let us see to it that, so far at least as this branch of the Government is concerned, they shall not be disappointed.

CREDENTIALS OF MEMBERS.

On motion of Mr. Thacher of Ward 15, Messrs. Thacher of Ward 15, Burditt of Ward 16, and Wells of Ward 3 were appointed a committee to receive the certificates of members.

The committee reported that they had received the credentials of fifty-eight members, by which it appeared that there was a quorum of members present, and on motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the report was accepted.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 was appointed a committee to inform the Mayor and Aldermen that a quorum of members was present.

Mr. Blackmar soon reported that the Mayor and Aldermen would immediately meet the Common Council in convention for the qualification of members.

In Convention.

The Mayor and Aldermen came in for a convention, as agreed upon, accompanied by ex-Mayors Quincy, Rice, Wightman, Norcross and Gaston, and several other gentlemen.

Prayer was offered by Rev. James H. Means.

The oaths of office were administered to Hon. Henry L. Pierce, Mayor elect, by Hon. Horace Gray Jr., Associate Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court.

The oaths of office were then administered by the Mayor to the members elect of each branch of the City Council.

The Mayor then delivered his Inaugural Address.

The Mayor concluded the reading of his address at half-past eleven o'clock, having occupied forty-five minutes in its delivery.

Two additional members of the Council were qualified, when, the business of the convention being concluded, the Mayor and Aldermen withdrew.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the Council proceeded to the election of President. Messrs. Page of Ward 9, Powers of Ward 4 and Hall of Ward 10 were appointed a committee to receive and count the votes, and reported the result as follows:

Whole number of votes 62, all of which were for Edward O. Shepard.

The President was conducted to the chair by Messrs. Pickering of Ward 6 and Dean of Ward 12, when he addressed the Council as follows:

ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT.

Gentlemen of the Common Council—The only return I can now make you for this honor, and this generous expression of your favor and confidence is to say with all heartiness I thank you, and to assure you that I undertake this office deeply sensible of its responsibilities and difficulties, and conscious of an earnest purpose to discharge all of its duties with fairness to you and with faithfulness to the public interests.

At the outset I invoke your charitable judgment upon the mistakes I may unwittingly commit, and your constant assistance and coöperation, without which all my endeavors will prove unsuccessful.

I take pleasure in testifying openly that in the private assurance of support which most of you have so kindly volunteered to me during the past few weeks, there has been no word of selfish request for preferment of place, which it is in the power of the President to bestow, but all having at heart the public trust committed to your charge, more than any private aims, have purposely left me to enter upon the duties of this office without a trammel.

If the same subservience of private to public interests shall characterize the conduct of each member throughout the year, as I confidently trust it will, there will follow such harmonious action, such far-sighted economy, and such wise legislation, as will more than fulfill the high expectations which the people have placed upon the City Council of 1873. And if those of you to whom the division of this body into working parties, which its committees are, shall seem in any respects erroneous, will judge of it by the same unselfish standard, I will cheerfully abide the result.

While committees must be the "eyes and ears," and, to some extent, the "head and hands" of an assembly like this, it has often seemed to me that after they have digested the details of the various matters committed to them, they should always place before this body such explanations and such reasons for the conclusions they report, that every member may be able to vote understandingly upon the merits of the question.

The circumstances of the destruction of a large part of the business portion of our city by fire will render the year upon which we are entering one of the most important in the whole history of Boston, and as momentous as any that is likely ever to occur. The loss of this immense amount of taxable property and the crippled condition of many branches of trade will make imperative unusual prudence in the expenditure of the public money.

On the other hand, the opportunity for long-needed improvements to the streets and grade of the district now lying in waste is so favorable, and the courage and faith of our citizens remain so unshaken by untold losses and widespread disaster, that you will doubtless be called upon to exercise, in regard to all subjects that concern the solid growth and prosperity of our city, that wisest economy which regards not only the immediate municipal necessities, but has an eye also to the greater Boston which every succeeding year will certainly behold.

The people have manifested their view of the importance of a wise Administration of the municipal affairs of the current year by electing and placing in these seats the men whose high character and large experience distinguish this Common Council above most of its predecessors.

I enter with you into this field of arduous labors that stretches over the next twelve months with the expectation that wisdom and honesty of purpose will prevail in all our acts and deliberations; that the high trusts confided to our care will be faithfully discharged; that devotion to the public interests will brighten all our official duties; and that harmony and good will will have unbroken sway in all our intercourse and proceedings.

ELECTION OF CLERK.

On motion of Mr. Pickering of Ward 6, it was voted to proceed to the election of Clerk.

Messrs. Pickering of Ward 6, Risteen of Ward 10, and Davis of Ward 14 were appointed a committee to receive and count the votes for Clerk, and reported the result to be as follows:

Whole number of votes 63, all of which were for Washington P. Gregg.

The oaths of office were administered to the Clerk by Hon. John P. Healy, City Solicitor.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, a committee was appointed to inform the Board of Aldermen of the organization of the Common Council, by the choice of Edward O. Shepard as President and Washington P. Gregg as Clerk.

Mr. Perkins was charged with the message. A message was received from the Board of Aldermen informing the Council of the organization of the Board by the choice of Leonard R. Cutter as Chairman.

A proposition from the Board of Aldermen for a convention forthwith for the election of City Clerk, was concurred in.

ELECTION OF CITY CLERK.

The Mayor and Aldermen came in for a convention for the election of a City Clerk.

Alderman Gaffield and Messrs. Prescott of Ward 9, and Dacey of Ward 2, of the Council, were appointed a committee to receive and count the votes.

The committee reported the whole number of votes to be 74, of which 67 were for Samuel F. McCleary, 5 for F. H. Underwood, and 1 each for J. M. Bugbee and E. W. James.

The oaths of office were administered to the City Clerk by the Mayor.

Objections were made by Messrs. Perkins of Ward 6 and Shaw of Ward 5 to the passage of an order referring matters to committees which have no existence as yet; but in answer it was said, by Messrs. Prescott, Mahan of Ward 5 and West of Ward 16, that it was a customary order.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That a joint special committee consisting of three members of the Board of Aldermen, and five members of the Common Council, be appointed to take charge of the smallpox hospital on Swett street, until the new Board of Health is appointed and organized, as provided by the ordinance relating to the public health, passed Dec. 2, 1872; and that said committee be authorized to complete said hospital building, and provide all the necessary furniture and fixtures, the expense to be charged to the appropriation for a Smallpox Hospital.

Aldermen Sayward, Gibson and Bigelow were appointed on said committee.

COMMITTEE ON ACCOUNTS.

The Board proceeded to an election of Committee on Accounts, when John T. Clark, Thomas Gaffield, and Solomon B. Stebbins were chosen on the part of this Board.

Adjourned to Monday next at four o'clock.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE MAYOR RELATING TO SMALLPOX.

CITY HALL, Boston, Jan. 9, 1873.

To the Honorable the City Council: Gentlemen—I transmit herewith for your consideration the opinion of several distinguished physicians in regard to the present condition of the hospital accommodations for persons sick with smallpox in this city. It appears that the hospital on Swett street is capable of receiving only one hundred patients. There are at the present time at least eight hundred persons sick with the disease. The larger number live in tenement houses, boarding houses or hotels. It will be impossible to eradicate the disease unless the persons so situated are sent to the hospital and the principle of isolation fully carried out.

It is imperatively necessary, therefore, that additional hospital accommodations should be provided for temporary use. The building known as the "Old Almshouse," in Roxbury, is the only one within my knowledge which can be made available immediately for the purpose desired. In the opinion of the physicians there would be no danger to persons living in that vicinity or on the lines of communication.

The exigency is such that I consider it my duty to ask you to furnish the means for putting the building in proper condition for the reception of smallpox patients without delay. If the authorities are not obstructed in the discharge of their duties I believe the epidemic can be promptly suppressed.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

To Drs. George Derby, J. N. Borland, C. E. Buckingham, H. W. Williams, Henry I. Bowditch and R. M. Hodges: Gentlemen—In order that prompt and efficient measures may be taken to eradicate the epidemic now prevailing in this city, I venture to call upon you for information upon the following points:

1. Is the building just erected on Swett street (Ward 13) in a proper condition for the reception of persons sick with smallpox?

2. Are additional hospital accommodations required, and if so, to what extent?

3. Would the building known as the Old Almshouse in Roxbury be suitable for temporary use as a hospital?

4. If proper care were taken in the transportation of the sick and in the management of the hospital, would there be any danger to persons living on the line of transportation or in the vicinity of the hospital?

I am, gentlemen, with great respect,

Yours truly,

HENRY L. PIERCE.

The following reply was received:

BOSTON, January 7, 1873.

To his Honor the Mayor of the City of Boston—We have received your communication of January 6, and respectfully present the following reply:

In answer to the first question, we are of opinion that the Pine Island Hospital is very faulty, both in its location and construction; but that under the present exigency it can at once be used with great advantage to the public health. It should be banked up to prevent the effect of frost upon the water service, and better arrangements should be made for warming the wards and water closets, for protection against fire, and for washing. A detached building for the purpose of disinfecting bedding and clothing is very essential.

In reply to the second question, we answer that additional accommodations to those offered at Pine Island are certainly needed, to what extent we have no certain means of judging. The Pine Island Hospital is capable of receiving one hundred patients.

In reply to the third question, we find that the Old Roxbury Almshouse is well adapted for the immediate reception of one hundred and fifty patients.

In reply to the fourth question we answer, after examination of the premises, that if proper care be taken, residents on the line of transportation or in the vicinity of these hospitals will not be exposed to danger.

CITY HALL, BOSTON, Jan. 9, 1873.

To the Honorable the City Council: Gentlemen—I desire to call your attention to the necessity of amending the ordinance relating to the public health, passed the second day of December, 1872, by striking out the provision in the fifth section which prevents the members of the Board of Health from engaging in other business. While the members will be required to give all the time necessary for the proper performance of their duties, it can hardly be expected that active business or professional men will consent to give up everything else to accept an office of an uncertain tenure.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

Ordered to be sent up.

PETITION PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Patrick Doherty and others, for a recount of the vote of Ward 2 for members of the Common Council. Referred to the Committee on Elections.

RULES AND ORDERS.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, from the committee appointed to prepare rules and orders for the government of the Common Council during the present municipal year, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the rules and orders of the last Common Council be adopted as the rules and orders of the present Common Council, with the following amendments, namely:

Insert in the first line of the seventh section, after the word "whatsoever," the words "whether before or after the previous question has been ordered"; also by striking out section 39 and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 39. Standing Committees on Elections, Police and Paving shall be appointed at the beginning of the municipal year, and shall consist of five members each.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he thought the report was well enough so far as it goes, but he believed that rule 7, requiring one-fifth of the members to order the yeas and nays, and rule 36, providing that no rule shall be suspended except by a two-thirds vote, should also be amended. It was often seen during the last year, that the whole body of the Council did not vote, as, for instance, in the case of the Burrill claim, when two-thirds of the members in their seats did not vote for a suspension of the rules. It was a practice of the President to count the members in their seats, and to state that two-thirds of the members present did not vote, while in his opinion the count should be the members who rise in response to the call for a vote.

It should not be assumed that those who were in their seats and did not vote were opposed to a measure, but if twenty voted in favor and ten against, it should be assumed as carried. He would move, therefore, to add after the word "present" in those rules the words "and voting thereon." Questions unimportant often come up, when no one would take the trouble to insist upon requiring all the members to vote. He would move, therefore, to add after the word "present" in rules 3 and 36, the words "and voting thereon."

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 hoped the amendment would not prevail, for it was too often the custom to move a suspension of the rules, and it proved injurious in hurrying through business. In too many cases were the rules suspended, and he hoped the check, by requiring a two-thirds vote, would not be taken away.

The vote being taken and all the members not voting, Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 called for the enforcement of the rule, in requiring all of the members to vote.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 called for a division of the question.

The Chair ruled that it was too late, the question being on solving a doubt.

Mr. Dean suggested that a division might be entertained by general consent.

The Chair stated that the rule required the question of doubt to be settled without debate.

The motion to amend was lost, by a vote of 23 to 33.

The rules as reported were adopted.

JOINT RULES AND ORDERS.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, from the joint special committee appointed to prepare rules and orders for the government of the City Council during the present municipal year, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the rules and orders of the last City Council be adopted as the rules and orders of this City Council with the following amendment, namely:

Insert in the first section, at the end of the list of joint standing committees, the following: "A Committee on Health Department, to consist of two Aldermen and three members of the Common Council."

"A Committee on Armories and Military Affairs, to consist of two Aldermen and three members of the Common Council."

"A Committee on Salaries, to consist of two Aldermen and three members of the Common Council; and it shall be the duty of said committee to report to the City Council, in the month of February or March, orders establishing the salaries of the several city officers for the ensuing year; and the report of said committee shall designate particularly the changes, if any, proposed in said salaries."

The report was accepted, and the joint rules and orders, as amended, were adopted.

ELECTION OF COMMITTEE ON ACCOUNTS.

Mr. Page of Ward 9, from the special committee to nominate candidates for a Committee on Accounts on the part of the Common Council, made a report recommending the election of the following-named persons:

William E. Bicknell, Henry W. Pickering, Washington L. Prescott, James J. Flynn, Frederick Pease.

The election was taken up by special assignment, at eight o'clock, when Messrs. Perkins of Ward 6, Wilbur of Ward 9 and Doherty of Ward 2 were appointed a committee to receive and count the votes, the result being as follows: Bicknell, Pickering, Flynn and Pease by 58 votes each, and Prescott by a vote of 56.

ELECTION OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6, from the special committee appointed to nominate candidates for the Committee on Finance, made a report, recommending the election of the following-named persons:

William H. West, George P. Denny, Charles Darrow, Joshua Weston, Wilmon W. Blackmar, Benjamin Dean, Charles E. Powers.

The Council proceeded to an election, by special assignment, at 8 1/2 o'clock, Messrs. Pickering of Ward 6, Jones of Ward 14, and Martin of Ward 7 acting as a committee to receive and count the votes. The result was the choice of Messrs. West, Denny, and Dean, by a vote of 56 each, and of Messrs. Darrow, Weston, Blackmar and Powers, by 57 votes each.

REPORTS ON RECOUNT OF VOTES.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Special Committee on Elections, to whom was referred the petition of N. C. A. Preble for a recount of the votes cast for members of the Common Council at the last municipal election in Ward 3, made a report that they have carefully recounted the original ballots in the possession of the City Clerk, with the following result:

George P. Kingsley had	687
Thomas J. Anderson	539
Jacob Abbott	517
Michael F. Wells	468
N. C. A. Preble	468
T. B. Towne	436
D. G. Macnamara	342

Frank B. Clock	222
George R. Curtis	135
E. W. James	112
P. O'Doherty	92
R. S. Brown	19
John B. Bailey	16
A. R. Holden, C. C. French, T. B. Gaskill, S. Canning, Jr., P. H. Shea, and John E. Quinn, each	1

It appears therefore, that George P. Kingsley, Thomas J. Anderson, Jacob Abbott, and Michael F. Wells, who now occupy seats in the Common Council, were duly elected.

The report was accepted.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Committee on Elections of the Common Council, to whom was referred the petition of Theodore Parsons and others, asking for a recount of the votes cast for members of the Common Council, at the last municipal election in Ward 5, made a report that they have carefully recounted the original ballots in the possession of the City Clerk, with the following result:

John W. Mahan had	405
Francis M. Hughes	372
George A. Shaw	349
Robert McCue	314
Charles H. Bush	308
Alphonso J. Robinson	270
Horace Loring	256
George S. Bartlett	245
Ames L. Noyes	163
George F. Walcott	28
John A. Duggan	22
William F. Watson	14
G. H. Walcott, Daniel Falvey, E. F. Maynard, J. J. Murphy and George W. Busted, each	1

In the box containing the ballots there was a sealed envelope upon which were written the words "Not counted." The envelope was found to contain eleven ballots pressed together in a peculiar manner, and bearing the appearance of having been fraudulently cast. The committee are of opinion that the ward officers acted rightly in excluding these ballots from the returns, and they are not included in the result given above. It appears, therefore, that John W. Mahan, Francis M. Hughes, George A. Shaw and Robert McCue, who now occupy seats in the Common Council, were duly elected.

The report was accepted.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 offered the following ordinance:

Ordinance to amend an ordinance relating to the public health.

Section 1. The ordinance relating to the public health, passed the second day of December, 1872, is hereby amended by striking out, after the word fourth, in the seventh line of the fifth section, the words—"they shall devote their time to those duties, and shall not actively engage in any other business."

Mr. Perkins stated that this was a part of the measure to make the Board of Health effective, as proposed by the Mayor. He had been informed by the Mayor that it was determined to submit the nominations of members of the Board of Health to the Council this evening, but this was prevented by the declination of one of the proposed number. The health ordinance was passed hurriedly by the last City Council, and as this Council could not be considered as committed to the special provisions proposed to be struck out, he hoped the ordinance would be passed.

The ordinance was read twice and passed, and a motion to reconsider was lost.

COMMITTEES TO NOMINATE PUBLIC OFFICERS.

Committees were appointed as follows, on several motions, severally to be joined by the Board of Aldermen, for the nomination of candidates for the offices named:

On nomination of Superintendent of Streets—Up- ham of Ward 16, Martin of Ward 7, Flatley of Ward 4.

On nomination of Superintendent of Sewers—Thaehcr of Ward 15, Kingsley of Ward 3, Lamb of Ward 7.

On nomination of Superintendent of Public Buildings—Wilbur of Ward 9, Bicknell of Ward 4, Tower of Ward 1.

On nomination of Superintendent of Common and Public Grounds—Dacey of Ward 2, Perkins of Ward 6, and Edwards of Ward 16.

On nomination of Superintendent of Fire Alarms—Jones of Ward 14, Whiston of Ward 8, Hughes of Ward 5.

On nomination of Board of Directors for Public Institutions—Prescott of Ward 9, Burt of Ward 16, Bowles of Ward 12.

On nomination of Directors of East Boston Ferries—Perkins of Ward 6, Caton of Ward 11, Tower of Ward 1.

On nomination of a Water Board—Page of Ward 9, Weston of Ward 1, Dean of Ward 12.

On nomination of Trustees of Mount Hope Cemetery—Blackmar of Ward 11, Shaw of Ward 5, Upham of Ward 16.

On nomination of Superintendents of Bridges—Burditt of Ward 16, Mahan of Ward 5, Warren of Ward 12.

On nomination of Ballast Inspectors—Anderson of Ward 3, McKenney of Ward 1, Collins of Ward 2.

On nomination of Harbor Master—Whiston of Ward 8, Hall of Ward 10, Madden of Ward 7.

On nomination of City Messenger—Thacher of Ward 15, Pease of Ward 1, Brackett of Ward 10.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 offered an order for the appointment of a committee to nominate a City Physician, upon which the Chair stated that the election of City Physician was provided for under the Health ordinance.

Mr. Marston of Ward 10 offered an order for the appointment of a committee to nominate a Chief and Assistant Engineers of the Fire Department.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 suggested that action at the present time was not desirable, while the investigation into the management of the late fire was uncompleted. He hoped this order would lie over.

On motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14, the order was laid on the table.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 offered the following order, which was read once:

Ordered, That the joint special committee appointed to prepare rules and orders for the government of the City Council be authorized to print said rules, together with the rules and orders of the two branches and the organization of the City Government, and furnish copies thereof, suitably bound, to the members of the Government; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9—

Ordered, That the several heads of departments and boards of directors of the various institutions be authorized to submit their annual reports in print, under the direction of the Superintendent of Printing.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be and he is hereby directed not to grant permits to build in Water street within the burnt district until authorized to do so by the City Council or the Joint Standing Committee on Streets.

Mr. Perkins stated in explanation that the Committee on Streets and the Street Commissioners last year agreed to certain plans made by the City Engineer in regard to widening Water street, and as he presumed those members of the committee who were now members of the Council had not changed their minds, and the citizens who were in favor of the measure would not wish to have them take a back track, this matter of the widening of the street should be held in abeyance until the Committee on Streets has fully considered it. To correct the action of the Street Commissioners, he had offered this order.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 wished to know whether the Council could control the action of the Street Commissioners in street widenings.

Mr. Perkins replied that under the statute of last year the City Council could order the Street Commissioners to carry out street improvements.

The order was passed.

ANOTHER SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 offered the following order:

Ordered, That the joint special committee appointed under an order passed January 6, 1873, to take charge of the smallpox hospital on Swett street, be authorized to repair and furnish the building known as the Old Almshouse in Roxbury, in a manner suitable for the purposes of a smallpox hospital; and also to provide all the supplies necessary therefor; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for a Smallpox Hospital.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 15 stated that this measure was before the Council last year and was defeated, and he moved the indefinite postponement of the order.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11, replied that a similar order was before the City Council last year, and did pass this branch, but was killed down stairs by the Board of Aldermen. The necessity of the measure was very pressing, and as he stated in the last Council the neglect to provide a suitable hospital for smallpox patients was a terrible crime. They were our citizens, and have a right to be cared for.

The old almshouse, he had understood, had already been used as a pest house, and it was in every way a proper place for a hospital. The Mayor had not acted hastily in recommending its use for the purpose, for he had consulted the best medical talent, carefully conferring with them, and there should be no delay. Even should there be delay for investigation, it would be a loss of a week or ten days, which was of vital importance in stamping out the smallpox, as had been done in a sister city. The Mayor had asked them to act at once, and it would be in accordance with their former action, while the Board would not dare to thwart the action of the people in carrying it out.

Mr. Kelley said he had made a little mistake in his statement, but the taking of the almshouse for a hospital had been defeated in one branch of the City Council, and it made no difference, for it ought to be defeated. If more hospital accommodations were needed, they might increase the capacity of the present hospital, or if necessary have a hospital in every ward in the city.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said it was undoubtedly true that every member of the Council would prefer not to have a hospital near his own residence, and the gentleman from Ward 15 believed he was looking after the interests of his constituents in objecting to the proposed use of the almshouse. But we have pest houses in every ward, now, and to establish another hospital would be but concentrating these many pest houses into one. How stands the matter now? There are from 600 or 700 to 1500 cases of smallpox in the city, and estimating five or six to each family or household where these cases exist, and these persons going abroad and mingling with others, we have some thousands of persons who are liable to spread and widen the extent of the disease.

They could not wait for an increase of the disease before establishing another pest house. To enlarge the present one would require ten or twelve days, and it was a poor place not fit for a human being. The only spot we can find, is where the Mayor recommends. Walking or riding, the disease meets us everywhere, and is constantly spreading. If it was only in the ward of the gentleman who objects, would he not say it was better to have one place for it? but they could not have a pest house in every ward. There was but one place and this was the only one. There would be the same argument and the same objection if it was to be located anywhere else. The exigency was such that it was utterly impossible to hesitate a single moment, and there could be no excuse for not passing the order.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said there was no one who was not in favor of stamping out the disease, if that was the term, and the order should not be indefinitely postponed. We have a hospital at Pine Island, yet there are 600 or 700 more patients who should be provided for somewhere. There could not be hospitals in every ward, and with two we could make a good beginning towards stamping out the disease.

The motion for indefinite postponement was lost, when the order was passed.

A reconsideration was moved and lost.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 offered an order providing for the appointment of a committee of one from each ward on the part of the Council, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, for the purpose of extending aid to needy persons as may be deemed necessary; to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 said there was no necessity for the passage of such an order. He was on a committee of a similar character, after the fire, and after a thorough consideration of the subject, its duties were transferred to the Citizens' Committee, whose management had been satisfactory to all who solicited aid. He had had no personal applications to him as a member of that committee, and believed that all the aid needed could be had from the Charity Bureau. He hoped, therefore, that the order would be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Mahan replied that the committee of last year may have been an excellent committee, yet there were many persons in his ward who needed aid. He did not however care to press the order now, but hoped it would lie over to a future meeting, that it may be acted upon understandingly.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 referred to the recommendation of the Mayor, on providing means of relief to the needy through the Overseers of the Poor.

Mr. Page withdrew his motion, when the order was laid over.

Adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
JAN. 10, 1873.

A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at twelve o'clock, noon, today, Alderman Cutter, the Chairman, presiding.

The Chair stated that the Mayor had called a special meeting of the Board for the purpose of acting on several papers from the Common Council.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The order from the Council for the adoption of the rules and orders of the City Council of last year until otherwise ordered, was passed in concurrence.

The ordinance to amend the ordinance relating to the public health, by striking out the provision in section 5, that the members of the board "shall not actively engage in any other business," as passed by the Common Council, was considered.

Alderman Power said that, as he understood the order, it was designed to provide that members of the Board could engage in other kinds of business. As he had something to do with drawing up the ordinance, the provision proposed to be struck out was considered to be the most important one in the ordinance.

To make the Board of Health efficient, it was believed that the members of the board should devote their entire time to the duties of the office. There should be some defining of the duties of the office, otherwise the duties will not be properly done. If the salary is not sufficient to get the right kind of talent, then increase the salary.

Alderman Gibson concurred in the views of Alderman Power. If the members of the Board were to sit still and listen only to the reports of their runners, then the business will not be well done. They would not be willing to spend more of their time than the members of this Board now do, for no compensation.

Alderman Clark favored the amendment as essential to the efficiency of the board. There could be no objection to allowing a physician, merchant or other person from attending to a little other business which might not interfere with his relations to the Board of Health, and which might not take up much time. The provision in question had been in the way of getting such a class of men as were needed, as shown in the efforts of the late Mayor. If they fail to do their work properly, they may be turned out of office.

Alderman Sayward said it had been objected to the Board of Aldermen as a Board of Health, that they had too much business to attend to, and neglected health matters. He would accordingly insist that the members of this board should devote their whole time to this business.

Alderman Power concurred with the remarks of Alderman Sayward relating to the complaints against the Board of Aldermen, and he thought the members of this board should be required to give their whole attention to the duties of the office. He would not object to a man's attending to his domestic affairs, and he believed that efficient men could be had at a salary of $4000 a year. He had understood a competent man, who had been engaged in a similar line of duties, was willing to take the office at the present salary.

Alderman Quincy believed it would be better to have the efficient services of a man half the time rather than not to have efficient men in the office. He was willing to make the effort in establishing the board under the most favorable circumstances, and was in favor of the amendment.

Aldermen Clark and Power continued the discussion on the point as to the extent which a man's services would be required in the duties of the office. The last named said that although heads of departments devote their time to the interests of the city, and are at their offices during the hours of the day when they are expected to be there, it did not prohibit their doing private business at home.

Alderman Quincy suggested that an amendment should be made to provide that the duties of this office should be paramount to all others, and with such duties well defined, there would be no difficulty relative to the performance of the duties of the office.

Alderman Gaffield referred to a question raised as to who were to be the judges whether a man rightly discharged his duties or not. There was a Board of Health last year, and it was supposed some of them were remiss in the discharge of their duties, and the people had shown their regard to such remissness.

There were three classes of persons who would judge whether their duties would be well performed or not, and if the Mayor and City Council did not see any work of efficiency, the people would demand their removal.

Alderman Sayward further spoke on the subject of remissness in the discharge of duties in relation to health. Great complaints had been made against the Board of Health of last year. Yet, after a discussion of six months, and before anything was done, they ask for a change in the ordinance.

Alderman Hulbert said he had an impression that too much stress had been laid upon scientific attainments. There was work enough to do, and while this city had a good reputation for cleanliness it could not be considered beyond the reach of criticism. The city was growing fast, and much work was to be done in keeping the city in the condition in which it should be. Good, practical men should be secured, and reliance should not be placed on a Board to sit in the City Hall and give orders. He was opposed to the amendment.

Alderman Gibson did not believe that parties should be employed at large salaries to sit in the City Hall and employ others to do the work. They should be men who will be willing to go through the streets and alleys of the city, and see to the performance of all the duties of the office.

The ordinance was passed in concurrence, by a vote of 7 to 5, as follows.

Yeas—Bigelow, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Quincy, Stebbins.

Nays—Brown, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Sayward.

The Chair submitted a communication of the Mayor, appointing as members of the Board of Health, the following-named persons:

Alonzo W. Boardman to hold office to 1st Monday in May, 1876; Dr. S. H. Durgin to hold office to 1st Monday in May, 1875; Albert T. Whiting to hold office to 1st Monday in May, 1874.

Alderman Gaffield moved that the nominations lie over, to allow members of the Board to become more familiar with their qualifications, believing that nothing would be lost by the delay, because the action of the Council could not be had until after the next meeting of this Board.

Aldermen Sayward and Clark opposed delay, believing that the nominations should be acted upon at once, since a demand had been made for a new Board of Health, and they were willing to trust the Mayor as to the qualifications of the persons named.

Alderman Clark said there could be no doubt of the qualification of Dr. Durgin, whose services had been very valuable to the city, and Mr. Whiting was well-known as a retired business man.

Alderman Sayward said he had known Mr. Whiting for many years, and believed him to be well qualified for the office.

Alderman Power further objected to acting upon nominations without knowing the qualifications of the persons nominated.

Alderman Hulbert said he should never give his vote for any nomination without personally knowing something of the qualifications of the persons to be appointed. He should therefore vote to lay the nominations over.

The motion to lay the nominations on the table prevailed.

NEW SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

The order from the Common Council providing for taking and fitting up the old almshouse at Roxbury for a smallpox hospital, was taken up for consideration.

Alderman Power said he was sorry to be obliged to vote against the first recommendation of the Mayor. A similar order had twice been defeated by the Board, the last time unanimously, when the exigencies were supposed to be greater than ever before.

It had been stated, as he understood, by some persons who objected to the Sweet-street hospital, that it was unfit because it was a swampy location. But the same objection could be made to the whole of the Back Bay. The accommodations on the Sweet-street territory could be greatly enlarged, if necessary, and more land could be had at the same rate of cost. There were no special reasons in favor of the Almshouse, and another hospital could be created as soon as this can be altered to make it fit for a hospital.

Alderman Power further objected to the locality on account of its proximity to the Academy of Notre Dame, where pupils must be scattered by the establishment of a hospital there, and the property in the neighborhood would be ruined. It would be an outrage to plant a hospital there, and the order should be rejected, as it was before.

Alderman Gaffield said he was in favor of this recommendation of the Mayor, because he believed it to be a good one. Objection had been made that 200 or 300 persons might be accommodated, yet there were 200,000 who were now accommodated and exposed to smallpox. The fact of the passage of the order so unanimously by the Common Council was some reason in favor of its passage here, and he hoped it would be concurred in.

Alderman Hulbert said he felt to be in a delicate position, as a resident of the Highlands, in opposing the passage of this order. Yet he believed he should oppose this were he not a resident in that section. The people in that section of the city had been much excited on the subject, and if this place should be used as a hospital, others would be required. There were, in many sections of the city, isolated houses which might be used as pest houses, and he hoped this order would not be passed.

Alderman Quincy compared this disease to that of a conflagration, which might be controlled in the outset, but which if neglected, would get beyond control. The last Legislature passed an act allowing persons to be removed from hotels, boarding houses, tenement houses, etc., but no removals could be made from private dwellings. There was a need of the hospital for temporary purposes, and he hoped the order would pass.

Alderman Power objected to setting fire in a new place because buildings were on fire, and as to accommodations there was room enough in the Swett-street locality. It was remote from other places; there was no objection to it, and it was the most fit place for a hospital.

Alderman Quincy read from the communication of the physicians consulted by the Mayor, as tending to show that there was no danger to the residents in the vicinity of the Almshouse, in locating a hospital there.

Alderman Power said the feelings of physicians could be appreciated in such matters, and while they might not have any fear, other people were afraid.

Alderman Gibson opposed the order, believing that all the hospitals should be together, for their better management. Before taking action, a visit should be made to the locality.

Alderman Power further opposed the order, contending that the subject should be looked into more fully before action was taken.

Alderman Sayward did not doubt but more hospital accommodations would be needed, and on the occupation of the Swett-street hospital, no more persons would be willing to go to Gallop's Island.

Alderman Gibson advocated erecting wings or other buildings at Swett street, to accommodate all who might need hospital facilities.

Alderman Clark believed the Board should visit both locations. He was satisfied that the Swett-street location was the best which could be had, and if the first building had not been burnt, it would have afforded accommodations for two hundred persons. He had twice voted against the occupation of the almshouse as a hospital, and did not wish to inoculate any other neighborhood with the smallpox. His belief was that a flag should have been displayed wherever the smallpox existed, and if it had been done, the disease might have been stayed. He did not know whose fault it was that the measure was not adopted.

On motion of Alderman Power, the order was laid on the table.

It was voted to visit the hospital this afternoon, and the suggestion being made that it might be occupied with patients today, the assurance was given that it would not.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following order, which was adopted:

Ordered, That the City Physician be requested to communicate to this Board whether additional hospital accommodations are needed for the reception and treatment of persons suffering from contagious diseases.

Alderman Clark offered, as an amendment, an inquiry why smallpox flags had not been displayed where the disease prevailed, in accordance with an order of the Board.

The amendment was rejected.

QUARTERLY REPORT OF THE PORT PHYSICIAN.

The quarterly report of Dr. S. H. Durgin, Port Physician, for the quarter ending Dec. 31, 1872, gives the following statements:

The whole number of vessels examined during the quarter was 97—steamers, 12; ships, 7; harques, 27; brigs, 32; schooners, 19. No sickness of a contagious character was found on board these vessels and no unusual detention caused at the station.

There were remaining in the smallpox hospital at Gallop's Island on the 1st day of October, 15 patients. There have been admitted during the quarter 338. Total number treated during the quarter, 353. Of these 130 have died; 135 have been discharged, and 88 remain in hospital January 1, 1873. Smallpox is the only disease admitted to the hospital during the quarter. In 66 cases vaccination had never been performed at all, and in 22 others it was found to be very doubtful. Five had smallpox once before. Only four of the whole number presented scars of vaccination within two years. $623 have been collected ($10 of which proved counterfeit) on account of fees for boarding vessels, and paid to the City Treasurer. A large number of board bills for smallpox patients are now in process of collection, many of which belonging to the State, will be paid in a few days.

MILITARY PAYMENTS.

Alderman Quincy offered the following order:

Ordered, That there be paid to each member of the Volunteer Militia embraced in the organizations recited in the certificate of the Adjutant-General, dated January 7, 1873, the amount allowed to him thereby for special duty in this city in November last, the whole amounting to $11,250; to be charged to the appropriation for Militia Bounty.

Alderman Power inquired whether this order had been considered by any committee, or came from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Alderman Quincy replied that the payment was in the usual form under a certification from the office of the Adjutant-General.

Alderman Power moved its reference to the Committee on Military Affairs, which was carried.

Subsequently, on motion of Alderman Power, the reference was reconsidered, and the order was passed.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

Alderman Clark offered the following order:

Ordered, That the joint special committee appointed to take temporary charge of the Smallpox Hospital on Swett street be authorized to erect additional hospital buildings on the lands owned by the city on Swett street; and that they be further authorized to purchase buildings already erected and remove them to said lands; and also to furnish the buildings erected or moved upon said lands suitable for the purposes of a smallpox hospital; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for a Smallpox Hospital.

Alderman Gaffield urged that before the order should be passed, the order which had been laid on the table for taking the old almshouse in Roxbury for a hospital, should be taken up and acted upon. Since the former action of the Board, they had visited the new hospital at Swett street, which he considered a marvel of construction for the short time in which it was built, and it reflected much honor upon the last Board of Aldermen and the committee which had it in charge. The building was warm, well ventilated, and in good condition.

On this subject they were getting new light every day, and he confessed he had changed his opinions. While he believed that additional accommodations could be secured adjoining the new hospital, he thought they should not make them until they had taken the almshouse for a hospital. In regard to the almshouse he had consulted with citizens of Roxbury, and was urged by others, to take that building. In no way, except by a heroic act of immediate action, could they succeed in stamping out this dreaded disease.

Since he made his remarks at the last meeting of the Board he had been asked if he expected to go to Heaven after such a speech. He had no fears of any scorching in this kind of weather, nor so long as he conscientiously discharged his duty, as he believed he did in this matter. After consulting with the City Physician and others, he was of opinion that they should take the almshouse. With reference to the objections by the people of Roxbury, before annex-

Physicians of good standing had told him there was no danger from smallpox at a distance of fifty feet, and others had said there was no danger at even less than that distance. There had been undue fear lest the disease could be taken by passing vehicles with patients, in the street, but there could be none with proper care, and such care there would be. The citizens require that this Board should today and now take effective measures for the suppression of this disease. Although he had modified his opinion twice he was ready to stand by his views expressed in favor of taking the almshouse.

Go where they might, there would be objections to the location of a hospital, and if they did not soon do something, it would soon affect the business of the city. There were wrong impressions as to the extent of the disease, there being but 400 or 500 cases. The City Physician was of opinion that there were not over 550 cases, and the Chief of Police agrees upon very nearly the same number. The two hospitals would accommodate about 250 persons. In making use of the almshouse, it would not be necessary to tear it to pieces, for there were both large and small rooms, and it ought to be taken today. If not done, it would be a great mistake, and it would excite the indignation of the community.

Alderman Quincy favored the measure of taking the Roxbury Almshouse. Were the Board providing for a state of things which might come a month, three weeks or a fortnight hence, he would advocate the enlargement of the Swett-street Hospital; but there was no denying the fact that the exigency was one calling for instant action. The disease, though exaggerated in some of the papers, was spreading from hour to hour, and the duty of the City Government to employ without delay the means actually under their hands to avert it was recognized most unmistakably by the public. That a clamor should be raised against the measure by those who live near the building proposed to be taken was but natural; but if the interests of the whole city involved in the spread or check of the disease is shown to be in the other scale, was it not clearly the duty of the Board to disregard such clamor, whether it came from Roxbury, Beacon street or the Black Sea? It was a mistake to assume that the disease was only raging at the North End, and that the establishment of this hospital would be like setting fire in a new quarter. The disease reached the Highlands ten days ago, cases then having come to the speaker's knowledge near the corner of Milmont street. How far it had since spread he did not know, but thought it not unreasonable to assume that it might be found if not within a stone's throw, certainly within a rifle shot of the building proposed to be taken. Every building within the city which now contains cases of smallpox unknown to the public is a pest house of the most deadly nature, for it is one into which our daily avocations may take us unsuspectingly at any instant, and with the children from which our boys and girls may be now playing in the street. It seems that the display of the red flag cannot by law be compelled by the City Physician, and what tradesman, for instance, whose shop is in his dwelling, wishes to inform his customers that he has a case of smallpox up stairs. Now do the citizens of the Highlands prefer to risk the indefinite multiplication of private pest houses into whose open doors they may walk daily without suspicion rather than to regard from afar one large, isolated building, known, feared and avoided by all, a building into which not even the foolhardy who desired it would be allowed to enter unless on urgent business and with every precaution, a building whose necessary intercourse with the outside world would be subjected to every safeguard which the resources of science have at command? No, sir. It is the pestilence which walketh in darkness which is now ravaging our city, and to those whose local interests lead them to oppose the measures by which it is to be dragged to light and stamped out, we should turn a deaf ear. If the temporary occupation of this building should for a time seriously affect the price of real estate in its vicinity, is that a consideration which should outweigh the salvation of human life?

Alderman Clark said he did not expect his order to call forth such eloquent remarks, for it was a question only of making additional accommodations at the Swett-street locality. In ten days they could have accommodations for one hundred more patients. There was one building which could be purchased which would accommodate sixty, and it could be moved and fitted up in six days; and the old smallpox hospital could be moved and accommodate twenty-five or fifty more. It was not a question of the Roxbury Almshouse, but of making preparations at once for additional accommodations, and his object in offering the order was that the committee might commence tonight in securing the possession and removal of the buildings he had referred to.

It may be that the City Physician thinks the number of cases will not exceed 650, but something should be done to allay the feelings of the public. It might be necessary that the Roxbury Almshouse should some time be taken, but there was room on Pine Island, and it might be desirable to have a hospital somewhere else—back of the jail or even the Sailors' House—yet the question was now whether they should increase the accommodations at Swett street.

Alderman Power said it appeared to be of no consequence in the views of some gentlemen to sacrifice the property of citizens, but he believed the sacrifice should be made by the city and not by individuals, as it would be to go to Roxbury. There was no reason why they should go to Roxbury, for the additional facilities at Swett street would be ample. There were but thirty patients in that hospital, and before it would be filled they could put up additional buildings.

Alderman Stebbins said he wished to say a word on the other order, which was on the table.

The Chair said there would be no objection, since the discussion had been quite general.

Alderman Stebbins said he would like to ask a few questions of Dr. Webb, the Superintendent of the Swett-street Hospital, with the consent of the Board.

Alderman Cutler inquired why he did not call the City Physician.

Alderman Stebbins said he would, but he was desirous of asking Dr. Webb some questions, and at his request a motion was put and carried to allow the questions to be asked.

Dr. Webb, in answer to these questions, said there were thirty-two patients in the hospital this morning, and five had been added since. The hospital at Swett street was not all that was desired; did not know how much more ground there was in the vicinity which might be occupied for additional hospital purposes, but there was none within the fence; the place was not suitable on account of its low and damp situation, the sewers constantly emptying in there; and its effect would be greater in warm weather.

A hospital located in the old almshouse would not endanger the health of residents in the neighborhood, with the use of ordinary care, and it would be better for the health of the patients; the Swett-street Hospital has no small wards; the bad smells spoken of are outside of the yard; the building is not so high and is nearer to the water than the old one on Albany street; a new building would not be safe except on piles, and the health would be much more likely to be restored elsewhere than at Swett street; did not think favorably of the Swett-street location, nor of the arrangement of the wards, there being but two with fifty beds in each; cases in different stages of the disease should be separated by different wards, while now, those who were dangerously sick and the convalescent, were all together, and the moral effect is bad where the dying are in full view of those who are slightly sick.

In one case he said there was a woman there who did not have the smallpox, and in answer to Alderman Power, he said he was not the admitting physician, and did not know who sent her there, or where she came from. The difference between this and the City Hospital was that they had a variety of rooms, in which they could classify the patients.

Alderman Power called for the previous question, to which Alderman Stebbins replied that he had not yielded the floor, and the motion was withdrawn.

Dr. Green, City Physician, was called, and in answer to various questions replied that he did not believe that the Swett-street Hospital was in a desirable location, and he was not consulted in regard to it. The popular impression, he thought, greatly exaggerated the danger of carrying patients through the streets. In a close calculation he thought there were about 550 cases of smallpox in the city, excluding those in the hospital; there were about 100 in the hospitals. In the Highlands there were not more than 20 or 25 cases, and a great many cases of persons who would go to a hospital if there was a good one, would not now go. Every day he met with such persons, who would leave their own houses so as not to expose their families, if they could have a room to themselves in a hospital.

The Roxbury Almshouse could be fitted up in twenty-four or forty-eight hours to be in condition for use. In reply to Alderman Clark, he said he had not been there for two years, and did not know particularly about the drainage, heating, etc. He did not apprehend much danger from smallpox, if the person was kept isolated in a dwelling house. Knew nothing about the Swett-street Hospital, and had thought it was time enough to give an opinion when asked for such an opinion. He believed it to be better than nothing, but not to be compared with the almshouse for a hospital; should have selected that in preference to Swett street for a location.

In answer to various questions, he said he did not know that the same effect was produced on the sewers by the tide there as at Beacon street. The Swett-street Hospital was objectionable on account of the large wards, and of having no rooms for nurses or for convalescents; but the principal objection was from the locality. There was danger that a building there would be washed off if not on piles, the tide often coming up to the road. It was the best hospital the city has, and he could not compare it with others; he did not believe there was danger in conveying patients through the streets from the North End; the almshouse could be heated by stoves until other means could be provided.

To Alderman Gibson he replied that patients could not recover so well in a damp locality as on dry land; in some cases he thought patients were better off not to be removed at all; in many instances it was objectionable to remove patients to Gallop's Island, on account of the condition of the weather, and of the stage of the disease; even with the best facilities, of covered carriages, not taken out on being taken to the boat, removal might be objectionable, and not so well as to be conveyed to a hospital without crossing the water.

Alderman Stebbins in a few concluding remarks said he visited Swett-street Hospital on Sunday, when the ice was floated up to the street, and he was told by a gentleman that it was common for the whole place to be covered by ice in winter, and there might be danger to a building by floating off if not put up on stilts. He went also to the old almshouse, where it appeared there was some heating apparatus, which needs repair, but can be repaired in a short time. He visited a lady in the neighborhood, and without knowing her opinion, she volunteered it by saying that the people in the vicinity would not object to taking the almshouse.

The people of East Boston were more exposed to smallpox by the constant passing of patients not only to the wharf adjoining the ferry, whence they are sent to the island, but also by patients crossing the ferry, than the people of Roxbury could be by locating a hospital at the almshouse, and the Roxbury people ought to be willing to yield something in staying the prevalence of the disease.

In Portland, where there were twenty cases, accommodations had been provided in an isolated place for 450 patients. But what had been done here? Or rather what had not been done? A physician said within his hearing in the City Hall some days since, that for want of action 500 lives had been lost, and 500 more would be lost because effective action was not taken to check the disease. In a matter of duty of this kind he did not wish to be responsible for the loss of one life, and he would rather sacrifice property than lives. As a lower consideration, he mentioned that many people were kept away from the city and business was likely to suffer on account of the neglect, and for the credit of the city he hoped there would be no further delay.

Alderman Gibson said it was simply a difference of opinion as to location which was in dispute, while they all wished to do all they could to arrest the disease. His experience in relation to sewerage was that men living in the vicinity of the outlet of sewers were not subject any more to disease than elsewhere. The Swett-street locality he believed to be as good a place as was that of the residences of one-half the people in the city, while the difficulty was, as he supposed, the hospital was not elegant enough, with spacious accommodations to please every one.

Alderman Clark said he did not suppose his order would induce so wide a range of discussion. The facts were that more accommodations were needed. They had one building, and it would be better to have the increased accommodations there. So far as related to the ground, it was much the same as that on which a large class of the people lived. He had the assurance of physicians that this was a most excellent location, the best which could be had, and what had been said only showed that physicians differed, as they did in relation to free vaccination. He hoped, therefore, that this order would be passed, even should the almshouse be used in the future.

Alderman Gaffield objected to using new buildings put up in a few days, when a building could be had which could be put in order in a short time. He felt assured that the people demanded the taking of the almshouse, and they had it recommended by the Mayor, with that of competent physicians. Those recommendations had been almost unanimously concurred in by the Common Council, and he would move as an amendment to substitute for the order under consideration that which was passed by the Council, to take the Roxbury Almshouse for a hospital.

Alderman Clark declared that the question under consideration had nothing to do with the Roxbury Almshouse; it was a question merely of improving the facilities on the Swett-street locality, in providing additional and better accommodations there.

Alderman Power said he would renew his motion for the previous question.

Alderman Clark asked for the yeas and nays on the question.

The Chair stated the question to be on the motion of Alderman Gaffield to substitute the order of the Common Council for that under consideration.

Alderman Power raised the question that his motion was upon the passage of the order of this Board, and desiring to speak in explanation, the Chair stated that no remarks would be in order, yet he would not press the rule if the Board were willing to allow remarks or explanations.

The Chair read a remonstrance from Frederick Guild and others, and Alderman Power presented remonstrances from the Notre Dame Academy, S. C. Cobb and others, R. Worthington and 44 others, Michael Kellion and 25 others, James W. Kellion and 37 others, Jacob Jacobs and 37 others, W. H. French and 17 others, E. C. Bemis and 12 others.

Alderman Cutter moved to lay the order on the table for the purpose of taking up the nominations for members of the Board of Health.

The motion was carried.

Alderman Emery moved that the nominations be acted upon separately, which was carried.

Alderman Hulbert offered an ordinance to repeal the amendment of the ordinance passed at the last meeting of the Board, in striking out so much of the original ordinance as requires the Board to devote their whole time to the service.

Alderman Hulbert advocated the restoration of the ordinance to its original condition, as essential to the effective carrying out of the design of the board, believing that the members should devote their time mainly to the duties of the office. The remarks of Alderman Clark on the passage of the ordinance were read, to show the design in its passage.

Alderman Clark said he had changed his opinion in relation to the matter, because of the difficulty in obtaining the services of competent men.

The proposed ordinance was rejected.

The question being upon the confirmation of the several nominees—

Aldermen Gaffield and Clark expressed as their expectations in the confirmation of the nominees, that they will make the duties of this office paramount to all others, the last-named saying that as honorable men they will devote themselves to the interests of the city.

Alderman Hulbert said he brought the subject up because of the necessity of making the performance of the duties of the office effective, and he wished the members of the board to devote their time to it as the City Clerk does to his, and not to practise their professions, as he had heard it suggested some of the members would.

The nominations of A. W. Boardman and S. H. Durgin were unanimously confirmed, and that of Albert T. Whiting was confirmed by a vote of 11 yeas to 1 nay—Alderman Hulbert.

Alderman Cutter moved that all subjects relating to health be referred to the Board of Health.

Alderman Gaffield objected to the motion, as a shrinking from responsibility after the subject had been considered by the Board of Aldermen without definite action.

The Chair stated that there was as yet no Board of Health, the Common Council having concurrence with this Board in acting upon the nominations.

Alderman Stebbins moved to take from the table the order to provide additional accommodations for smallpox patients.

The motion was carried.

The Chair stated the question to be on the motion of Alderman Gaffield, to adopt the order to take the almshouse, as a substitute for the order of Alderman Clark.

The question was taken, and the substitute was lost, by a vote of 5 to 7, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Emery, Gaffield, Quincy, Stebbins.
Nays—Brown, Clark, Cutter, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Sayward.

The question recurring upon the passage of the original order—

Alderman Stebbins moved to amend by adding authority to the committee to "purchase or hire suitable buildings in any other part of the city."

Alderman Emery said he was in favor of this amendment, for it might be necessary to procure some other buildings in other localities, in an emergency.

Alderman Hulbert regarded the amendment as most sensible, for with the increase of the accommodations at Swett street, provision might also be made elsewhere. It would be any easy way out of the difficulties, and relieve the Highlands from the anxieties in regard to location of more hospitals in that section.

Alderman Brown also advocated the amendment, when it was accepted as a portion of the order, and the order, as amended, was passed by an unanimous vote.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Clark,

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be requested to report to the City Council, as early as practicable, whether sufficient precautions against fire are taken in the preparation and arrangement of scenery and other theatrical effects used at the several theatres in this city, and what legislation, if any, is necessary for the public safety.

Alderman Clark stated that he offered the order in consequence of the fact that last week the scenery in one of the theatres in this city took fire, and it might have proved very serious had it not promptly been extinguished. In Europe he had been assured that a preparation was used by which the scenery could not take fire, and this precaution was worthy of consideration.

Ordered, That the Joint Special Committee on Smallpox Hospital be requested to confer with the Chief of Police with a view to procure accommodations at the north part of the city for smallpox patients.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Whereas, It appears to this Board that the following persons, viz., John Cronin, 6 Webster place; John Nichols, 10 Emmet place; Henry O. Kelly, 6 Chilton place; Dennis McCarty, 22 Lowell street; Cornelius Lang, 21 Nashua street; Mary Reardon, 55 Oswego street; Charles Mulden, 130 Silver street; Major Jones, 1 Grover place; Sarah White, 251 Gold street, are affected with smallpox, and are occupants of tenement or boarding houses, and should be immediately removed; therefore, it is therefore hereby Ordered, That the City Physician, with the aid of such police force as may in any case be necessary, cause each of the above persons to be removed as soon as possible to one of the smallpox hospitals heretofore established by this Board.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Whereas, under an order of the City Council, passed the 11th of October, 1872, a joint special committee of the City Council was authorized to erect a building suitable for the purposes of a smallpox hospital, on land owned by the city on Swett street, Ward 13; and whereas, the said committee did on the 30th day of December, 1872, enter into a contract on behalf of the city with William Smith & Co. for the erection of a building, and did agree to pay said Smith & Co. the sum of $9000 upon the completion of said building, in accordance with the plans and specifications, in ten days from the date of the contract, and also the sum of $200 for each and every day that the building is completed before the time specified in the contract; and whereas, said Smith & Co. did complete said building in six days from the date of said contract as certified by the architects; and whereas, the said contract after being properly executed was mislaid or destroyed so that the amount due the contractors cannot be paid without further action on the part of the City Council; it is therefore Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to William Smith & Company the sum of $10,300, in full compensation for work done and materials furnished by them in the erection of the smallpox hospital on Swett street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for a Smallpox Hospital.

On motion of Alderman Emery—

Ordered, That the physicians having in charge the subject of vaccination be authorized to continue and complete the vaccination of persons in the several districts, agreeable to the instructions given them by the former Board, or until otherwise directed.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following order:

Ordered, That the City Physician be requested to provide suitable warning cards on which shall be printed in plain letters upon both sides, "Smallpox"; such cards shall be placed upon the bell handle, door handle, or upon the door of every house where a case of smallpox or varioloid may exist. In case the owner or occupant of such houses object to placing such cards as aforesaid, or shall remove the same, the City Physician shall forthwith declare every such house a hospital, and establish a guard over such house to warn and prevent the public from entering the same. He shall also present to this Board, for their action, the names of all such persons as shall refuse to allow such warning cards to be applied to their doors. The expense attending the carrying out of this order shall be charged to the appropriation for Health.

Alderman Clark believed that it would be better to carry out the original idea of the Board, in placing a red flag upon buildings, which would be much more effective as a warning.

Alderman Stebbins said he had had some conversation with the City Physician on the subject, and he was himself of the belief that the placing of a card upon a door would not only be less objectionable to the inmates of a house, but would be more likely to remain, and prove as effective as a warning to those who visited such places.

Alderman Sayward preferred the display of a flag for in many cases there would be no door bell to which to affix a card.

The order was amended to give discretionary power to make use of a card or a flag, and as amended was passed.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Health, under the direction of the Committee on Health, be directed to provide at once a convenient and suitable room, in some central locality, for the temporary reception of persons suffering from the smallpox. The room so provided shall be open day and night, and a suitable person shall be in constant attendance to render such assistance as may be necessary. The expense attending the execution of this order shall be charged to the appropriation for Health.

Alderman Sayward objected to the order as incurring an unnecessary expense and calculated to draw more smallpox patients to the City Hall, where they are now too often seen.

Alderman Stebbins replied that it did not necessarily follow that the room should be in the City Hall, and its location would soon become known to physicians and others.

The order was passed.

Alderman Stebbins also offered the following:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Health be directed to thoroughly fumigate, once a week, or oftener if deemed necessary, all the public school-houses in the city, the Court House and the City Hall; the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for Health.

As at first proposed, under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Buildings, objection was made to the order by Alderman Sayward, who said the matter properly belonged to the Board of Health and not to the Superintendent of Public Buildings; when the order was amended and passed.

On motion of Alderman Clark, an order was passed for an apportionment of betterments for Shawmut-avenue assessments upon N. B. Doggett and others.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, an order was passed for the abatement of a nuisance at the corner of Portland and Travers streets.

Alderman Stebbins offered an order requesting the Mayor to call a meeting of the Common Council, for the purpose of acting upon the subject of a smallpox hospital, and of the nominations for a Board of Health. Objections being made by several Aldermen that the order was unnecessary, as interfering with the duties of the Mayor, whose interest in the subject would prompt him to take all measures necessary on the subject, the order was withdrawn.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

JANUARY 14, 1873.

A special meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at 7½ o'clock, Edward O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

On motion of Mr. Thacher of Ward 15, the roll was called, when the following-named persons answered to their names.

Barnes, Bicknell, Blackmar, Bleiler, Bowles, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Dacey, Darrow, Dean, Denny, J. H. Doherty, Edwards, Flatley, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Hughes, Jones, Lamh, Mahan, Marston, Martin, McCue, McKenney, Morse, Page, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Shaw, Shepard, Thacher, Train, Upham, Warren, Wells, West, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

The following communication from the Mayor was read:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL,
BOSTON, Jan. 14, 1873. }

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Boston—Under the authority vested in me by the forty-sixth section of the city charter, I have summoned this meeting of the Common Council to take action upon the appointment of members of the Board of Health and upon other matters from the Board of Aldermen relating to the preservation of the public health.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

Ordered to be placed on file.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

The nominations of members of the Board of Health, as follows, were taken up, the question being upon their confirmation, in concurrence with the Board of Aldermen:

Alonzo W. Boardman, to hold office until the first Monday in May, 1876.

Sammel H. Durgin, to hold office until the first Monday in May, 1875.

Albert T. Whiting, to hold office until the first Monday in May, 1874.

On motion of Mr. Thacher of Ward 15, the question was taken on each separately, and the nominations were unanimously confirmed.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

The order from the Board of Aldermen authorizing the erection of additional hospital buildings on the lands of the city on Swett street, to purchase and remove buildings already erected, and to furnish said buildings; also for the purchase or hire of suitable buildings in any other part of the city, was taken up for consideration.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 stated that the order of the Board of Alderman was passed before the appointments of the members of the new Board of Health were confirmed, and as it gives the committee power for temporary purposes only, it should be voted down and a new order take its place, and he moved its indefinite postponement.

Mr. Thacher asked for the yeas and nays on the question.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 agreed with the gentleman from Ward 6 that a new order should be passed.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 inquired who has power to recommend measures under the new organization of the Board of Health—whether it was the Board or the City Council.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said he supposed the motion to indefinitely postpone left the whole question open for argument, and it was nothing improper, on the part of any member of the Board who has any order or preferable proposition, to make known such alternative proposition. If there was any such proposition, he wished to be informed before taking any action, so that he should get all the information on the question desirable.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said he intended, at the proper time, to offer a new order, which he read, as follows:

Ordered, That a smallpox hospital be established in the building known as the Old Almshouse in Roxbury, and that the Joint Standing Committee on the Health Department be directed to make the necessary repairs on said building without delay, and provide such furniture, fixtures or supplies as the Board of Health may require for the maintenance of said hospital; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for a Smallpox Hospital.

Mr. Flynn stated in explanation that this was offered inasmuch as the power of the committee under which the first hospital was built, ceases from and after tonight.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 hoped the motion would prevail for after the exhibition in the Board of Aldermen yesterday,—and he did not mean to say anything indecorous—after the statements made by the City Physician and the Superintendent of the Smallpox Hospital, that the place was wholly unfit for a hospital, the order should not be passed. The statement had been sent over the wires and through the country—of such unfitness, and it was humiliating to be found in such a predicament.

A year ago application was made to the General Court for additional authority for the suppression of the smallpox; there were then but a few cases in this city, and legislation was granted. Since that time not a week, day nor hour but the disease had been on the increase, and our citizens were dying by the thousand, yet nothing effectual had been done, and the City Government in one branch had allowed the people to die without preventing the spread of the disease. One person in four or in three died from it, and this was in the nineteenth century and in the city of Boston.

The question of opening the Public Library on Sunday had been debated as affecting the public morals, but in a case involving the lives of the people the two branches differed as to where they should place the sick. Competent physicians state that the place where the present hospital is located is an improper one, yet it is proposed to build another one there. Noxious vapors rise there which would make a well man sick, and while there were places enough for a hospital he would vote for an indefinite postponement of the order. Something had been said about taking private property for a hospital, and he believed that under the law, if necessary, the Tremont House might be taken for a hospital.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 inquired whether the gentleman had ever visited the location of the Swett-street hospital, and where he got his information in relation to it.

Mr. Shaw said he was familiar with the locality, but had not been there since the building was put up.

Mr. Wells said he knew the location, and was satisfied that those who spoke against it knew nothing of it. For construction, warmth, comfort, beds and bedding, and everything desirable, it was all that could be wished. Matched boards, two thicknesses of tarred paper between the floors and on the inner and outside of the boarding, with tarred and gravelled roof, and good heating arrangements, with hot and cold water and everything for comfort.

From what he had seen, a better place could not have been selected for a hospital. As to stench, it was all wrong, for stench could not be expected to come from water where the ice was eighteen inches thick. The cesspool was eight inches below the floor, and the draining was perfect. The building was so constructed that wings could be added, so that it might form a hollow square, and be made ample for all cases. If the physicians would go among the poor and represent the building properly it would be filled today.

Objection had been made that the hospital was built in five days; so, too, objection was made against the Gallop's Island hospital, of which he knew something, but the man who was afraid to go down there and work was the londest brawler about the City Hall against the Swett-street Hospital. If overloaded, he did not doubt they could add to the building and provide plenty of room for all who needed it. It was easy of access, and if any physician after a fair examination would say it was not a fit place, he would go, and where they might say.

Mr. Perkins said he did not think it was worth while to give in charge the building of a hospital to a committee at the first meeting of the Council, when the Board of Health was about to be organized. This committee was now dead, or will be in twenty-four hours, and they should not load a committee with powers which could not belong to them.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 stated some of the duties of the Committee on Health under the new ordinance, and he favored the indefinite postponement, that they might have an opportunity to vote for the order as provided for through a committee under this ordinance.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 read the provisions of the ordinance relating to the duties of the Board of Health. Under the statute and the ordinance, he supposed that the Board of Health, with two justices of the peace, if agreed, might require the sheriff to take possession of any building, impress any persons and take such supplies as might be necessary in the care of a hospital for smallpox patients. Such powers the new Board of Health has, and if so they may take the almshouse or any other building they may believe necessary for their purposes. What can or what can they not do? The statute gives them the largest possible powers for the discharge of their duties.

Why may not the Sheriff take possession of any property necessary for the safety of the people? This he said without being an advocate of the Board of Health. There had been a great many articles written in the papers, and much clamor, but the reasons for it were not in accordance with his judgment. The discussion and action had been of a character to take away the responsibility of an efficient Board of Health. Once the Common Council had concurrent action in health powers, but this was lost in a revision of the city charter, and the two branches could act with greater vigor than they could separately.

The articles and the discussion had not been in accordance with his judgment. It was not wise, for the reason given by President Lincoln, that you should not swap horses while crossing a stream. The discussion had paralyzed the Board of Aldermen as a Board of Health, and as the two branches differed in their action the disease spread. We had now got a new board and this board has supreme power, and may take houses, stores, attendants, nurses even, for the general safety. If they act right, it is well enough, as we are, but if they have not power enough they may apply for more.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said it was doubtful how far the powers of the committee could go. The Board of Aldermen had taken a certain stand, and the public had taken a different one, and it was desirable to throw the influence of the Council in favor of taking the almshouse. In that case the Board of Health will be more likely to take it if backed up.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 said he agreed that the Board of Health had unqualified power in this emergency, yet he agreed with the gentleman from Ward 6 in his views in relation to the position of the question. The various votes of the two boards were cited by him, and it appeared that the arguments of the Board of Aldermen resolved themselves into three propositions: that the Swett-street Hospital was erected in six days, and another could be built in that time; that the taking of the almshouse would greatly depreciate the value of property in the neighborhood; and that the people there were opposed to taking it.

If the hospital could be built in six days, it could never be available for hospital uses; the location is a swampy place, the tides sweep over it, and some morning the hospital may be found outside of Boston Light. The present building was built of green timber, the sap comes out at the head of the beds of patients, and it was a disgrace to the city. As there were no good reasons against the use of the almshouse, its opponents must suggest something. The location at Swett street exposes fifty people where one would be at the almshouse, and it was but 1800 feet from the St. James Hotel.

It was some argument in favor of the almshouse that the Mayor had recommended it, not carelessly but conscientiously, on due consideration, backed up by some of the best men in the city, whose opinions were in writing. The Council had twice by its vote fixed upon that location, and it was due to its dignity that it should adhere to that choice, and the new order comes up as an excuse for further delay. They were then right and ought to adhere, that the people may respect their motives and that they may command respect as a branch of the City Government. The hospital at Swett street was hardly fit for a barn in which to put a horse, and should not be a place for a citizen because he has the smallpox. It was not the way in which they treated prisoners. It was a wet, unhealthy, miserable place, and it was a shame and a crime, and they were guilty if they supported such action.

Mr. Wells denied that there was any sap oozing from the boards, which were all kiln dried. That the land was marshy in the neighborhood and the tide flowed over it, he would admit, but where the tide ebbs and flows, it must keep the locality clean and purify it, as was contended by certain individuals who wished to secure the tidal basin on the Back Bay for an ebb and flow of water. The ebb and flow of water must increase health instead of injuring it. As to the charge of marsh and bad air, there was a height of two feet in piling, with a space underneath the building.

Mr. Thacher of Ward 15 said with reference to a statement that there had been a pest house on the almshouse lot, that it was not so, but there was formerly a hospital there for ship fever. In relation to the Swett-street Hospital, and of its being too cold for horses, the thermometer had stood at 70 there with the ventilators open, while 62 was considered to be high enough. Before the wharf was purchased by the city it was used as a lumber wharf, and he never heard of lumber being washed away.

Mr. Flynn said he failed to see, in what had been said, any argument why the order should not be indefinitely postponed. The gentleman from Ward 3 had built two smallpox hospitals, and was desirous of building two more.

Mr. Wells said his statements were true in regard to the Swett-street Hospital, and if he should have the smallpox he should desire to be taken there.

The Chair stated in answer to an inquiry, that the hospital would remain in the charge of the joint special committee until the new Board of Health was organized.

Mr. Dean said it would be but a temporary life for a committee, and not long enough for them to erect any additional buildings. That might furnish a reason why the order should be indefinitely postponed. No member of the Council could wish to enter into any contest in such a matter with the Board of Aldermen, for they were all desirous to do what they could to prevent the spread of disease. If the committee goes out of service so soon it was not worth while to give it new power.

Mr. Perkins stated that the Alderman who offered the order expected the committee having in charge the hospital would go out and be superseded.

The motion to indefinitely postpone was carried, and the order of Mr. Flynn was offered.

The Chair announced the appointment of the Committee on Health under an order of the Board of Aldermen, and in concurrence joined to the committee on the part of the Council, Messrs. Denny of Ward 9, Pickering of Ward 6, and Flynn of Ward 7.

Mr. Dean said further that the Board of Health had the power to take such buildings and other measures as may be necessary to prevent the spread of smallpox, and he supposed they mean to do it. If so, why should any special provision be made or order passed by the City Council. Such a course would be unnecessary and unwise. Why not leave the new organization untrammelled? Then if they wished for any additional powers to enable them to carry out the duties of their office with efficiency, it would be time enough to pass such an order. He would offer the following:

Resolved, That the Board of Health is hereby requested to make application to the City Council for any powers or facilities, if any, which they may find necessary and convenient to enable them to discharge their duties with efficiency.

Mr. Flynn moved to lay his order on the table, which was carried.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 opposed the new proposition as only tending to delay, and before proceeding the new Board of Health would be obliged to come to the City Council for more authority. It was due to the character of the Council that having twice passed an order for taking the almshouse, it was but right that they should stand up here and assert the rightfulness of their action. It was due also to the people who sent them here that they should show that they did nothing to cause delay and the spread of the disease.

Mr. Flynn said his object in laying the order offered by him on the table, was for the purpose of allowing the new Board of Health an opportunity to take the responsibility of using the almshouse. If they did not take that responsibility by Thursday night, he would take up the order and pass it.

Mr. West of Ward 16 suggested, as an answer to a question about delay, that should the order of the gentleman from Ward 7 be passed, it would not be concurred in by the Board of Aldermen, and delay would be the consequence.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 believed it to be desirable that the course of the Council should be right from the start, and while he was satisfied with the course pursued by the Council hitherto, as being the right one, as the Board of Health had full powers, he would not lift one feather from their shoulders. The proposition of the gentleman from Ward 12 seemed a proper one, and it could be passed, leaving the responsibility where it belongs.

The resolution was passed.

The order to provide a convenient and suitable room in a central locality for the temporary reception of smallpox patients, to be open night and day, with suitable attendance thereon, was considered.

Mr. Perkins asked, Why not dispose of this as they did the other, the Board of Health having full powers to provide a room?

The order was passed by a vote of 37 to 5.

The order upon procuring accommodations at the north part of the city for smallpox patients came up for concurrence.

Mr. West of Ward 16 objected to its passage as being no sense in it, after their action on the other order.

Mr. Wells moved its reference to the Committee on Health.

Mr. Flynn said the committee would die in twenty-four hours, and moved the indefinite postponement of the order.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 moved to lay the order on the table, which was carried.

The order for the fumigation of schoolhouses and other public buildings came up for concurrence.

Mr. Wells moved that it be laid on the table, which was lost, when the order was rejected.

The order providing, under a misplaced contract, to pay William Smith & Company the sum of $10,300, for work done and materials furnished in the erection of the smallpox hospital on Swett street, being under consideration—

Mr. Anderson of Ward 3 moved a suspension of the rules for its passage.

Mr. Holmes opposed a suspension of the rules generally, and particularly in this case.

The motion to suspend the rules failed, by a vote of 25 to 16—not two-thirds.

REPORT ON ELECTIONS IN WARD TWO.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Committee on Elections of the Common Council, to whom was referred the petition of Patrick Doherty and others, that the votes cast for members of the Common Council at the last municipal election in Ward 2 may be recounted, made a report that they have carefully recounted the original ballots in the possession of the City Clerk, with the following result:

In presenting the report the committee desire to call attention to the fact that the practice has obtained of ordering a recount of the votes cast for members of this board simply upon the petition of a number of voters in any ward. Such proceedings are not in accordance with the provisions of the statute. It is necessary that some person who received votes should first serve upon the City Clerk, within sixty days after the election, a written notification claiming an election to the office, and declaring his intention to contest the right of some other person who received a certificate of election to occupy his seat at this board. Upon that notice the City Clerk is required to retain the ballots under seal until called for by this board or its committee. And the contestant must give notice to the Council, upon its reorganization, that he claims the seat occupied by a certain member of this board, and that he rests his claim upon the evidence furnished by the ballots in the possession of the City Clerk.

In the present case the rights of the sitting members were not contested; and although it was expected that gross errors would be shown in the returns of the ward officers, there was not the slightest probability that the result would be changed, and the petition appears to have been presented merely for the purpose of satisfying the curiosity of certain parties as to the correctness of the count made by the ward officers.

The report was accepted.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR CHARLES-RIVER AND WARREN BRIDGES.

A communication was received from J. M. ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF STREET COMMISSIONERS.

The annual report of the Board of Street Commissioners was laid before the Board, in print.

The report gives a schedule of the various measures before the board during the year for the laying out, extension and widening of streets, with the action of the board thereon, comprising sixty-six different projects. The estimated expense of the various measures upon which action was taken, comprising the widening of streets in the burnt district, is $3,935,250 93.

The following statement is given:

The Board of Street Commissioners have given hearings during the past year, either on petitions or orders of notice, upon most of the improvements referred to in the table herewith transmitted.

The important and long-sought-for improvement, the extension of Washington street to Haymarket square, urged by our most energetic business men and largest taxpayers, furnishes a direct, nearly straight, and for the most part very commodious street from one end of the city to the other, from the Charles River to the West Roxbury line; and by the widening of Warren street from Dudley to Washington street, in the Highland District, which may be called an extension of Washington street, provides a direct avenue from the Charles to Neponset River. The building of the extension of Washington street northwardly from Cornhill will, in consequence of the recent fire, be delayed beyond the time originally contemplated, because it was deemed inadvisable for the present to dispossess the occupants of stores on the line of the extension until the rebuilding of the burnt district shall, in some degree, be completed.

The widening of South Market street and its extension to Atlantic avenue, at an expense of $282,453 50, seemed to be absolutely demanded for the greatly increased business in that locality. This improvement was previously submitted to the Council by resolve and order, but did not receive its sanction, nor did the contemplated extension of Commerce street.

The widening of Wilson's lane to a width of fifty feet for the extension of Devonshire street, which had been rejected by the Council, was again submitted to it and sustained by great unanimity. This extension of Devonshire street will afford great relief to Washington street, furnishing, as it does, a parallel roadway from Dock square to the extreme south end of the city, on a nearly level grade, generally sought for by heavily laden teams. A resolve and order for the widening of Beach street on the southerly side, was sent to the Council and rejected, with a request to furnish an estimate of the cost of widening the street on the northerly side, which was promptly furnished by the Commissioners; but the Council took no further action in the premises. It is admitted by all that the public necessity imperatively requires the widening of this street, being now scarcely thirty feet wide, while all the horse cars coming from South Boston pass through it, together with great local travel, the only question at issue being where the widening should be made.

The widening of Emerson street, and extending it westerly to Second street, effectually makes the latter a continuous and level street from Federal street to the "Point," affording much needed facilities for heavily loaded teams from the city proper to South Boston Point.

The widening of Cottage street, in the Dorchester District, has been called for by every consideration of public safety for years, being, as it was, dangerously narrow at points where it curved, and where at times it was considerable of a thoroughfare.

The County Commissioners of Norfolk and the selectmen of Dorchester had this widening under advisement, with a settled determination to make it, at the time of the annexation of Dorchester to Boston.

The pressure has been great upon the board to widen and straighten streets on the "burnt district," some persons contending that the streets should be made very much wider than formerly; while others contend equally strong that these streets were sufficiently wide for all the purposes for which they were or are likely to be used. The board has pursued a conservative course, widening where an exigency seemed to exist, and straightening when necessary, keeping in view the future wants of the public, endeavoring to furnish the requisite facilities demanded by increasing business and travel, with the least possible injury or inconvenience to the abutters. Thus Washington street has been widened on the burnt district to a width of sixty feet. Summer street has been made a nearly uniform width of sixty feet from Washington street to Broad street, it being somewhat wider at what was "Church Green." High street has been widened to a width of fifty feet between Congress and Pearl streets, to make it conform to the width at other points, and the widening of Purchase street, commenced prior to the fire at its southerly end, has been continued northwardly to Oliver street, making the street a uniform width all the way.

All the street improvements contemplated for the devastated territory have been already made by this board, as far as the surveyor has furnished the necessary plans.

Ordered to be sent down.

Prentiss streets, contains about twenty-eight acres, being nearly as large as the Suffolk-street District. The city was authorized, by an act of the Legislature of 1872 to take the estates within this territory, and raise the grade of the streets and lots in a similar manner to the improvements made in the Church and Suffolk street districts. The general grade of the interior portion of the territory not built upon, which is mostly marsh, is at grade of about ten feet above mean low water. It is proposed to fill the cellars and yards to grade 14,—two feet higher than those of the Church and Suffolk street districts, in order to insure a proper fall in the sewers to tide-water,—this territory being much farther from the outlet of the sewers than either of those districts. The grades of the streets will be fixed according to circumstances, but nowhere below "18."

The City Surveyor was directed by the committee on drainage of the low districts, early in the year, to make surveys and plans of the entire district, showing all the estates and buildings; and also profiles with proposed grades, showing the height each building is to be raised.

This survey was commenced, and a great amount of time and labor spent upon it; but the work was delayed on account of the difficulty found in determining the boundary lines of estates, as many of the landmarks were obliterated by the filling of the creek, and there being many disputed lines of ownership.

The survey would have been completed, however, before the close of the year had it not been for the great fire of the 9th of November.

The Burn' District. Immediately after the fire, this department was called upon for a plan of the whole district, for the use of the Street Commissioners and City Government, showing the streets, estates, and owners' names.

Such a plan was soon made, by compiling information already in this department; it being, however, only approximately correct, as no accurate survey of the whole district had been made.

As it was soon decided that the entire territory could not be taken by the city and relaid out into a new system of streets and avenues, the City Surveyor was called upon to propose a scheme of improving the existing streets by widening, straightening, and extending them.

These proposed street improvements were drawn without sufficient time being allowed for careful consideration of the subject, as there was a great desire to have something proposed at once; and the lines as proposed on this plan were shown more as a suggestion than as a plan to be finally adopted. The result has been that several of the proposed lines have been considerably modified, although some of them have been adopted as originally drawn.

Great difficulty has been met with in the surveys, in determining the old lines of the streets, as in many cases the front foundation walls were entirely demolished and the sidewalks broken down by the falling of buildings, leaving no vestige of where the former fronts of the buildings existed. Also the division walls between estates were so buried up by the debris of buildings destroyed by the fire, as to cause considerable additional time and labor in making the surveys.

The following-named streets were surveyed, the takings accurately measured previous to the first of January, and the orders widening them have since passed the City Government, viz., Washington, Summer, High, Purchase, and Lindall streets.

Surveys of several other streets within the district have been partially completed, and will soon be ready for action by the Street Commissioners.

Eight entries have been made in the record book during the year for determining the true meridian line, and the average variation recorded is 11° 09' 47" west of north. The foregoing statement of surveys, plans, etc., was but a portion of the work performed during the year, much of the work being of a miscellaneous nature. The City Surveyor still acts as Secretary of the Committee on Streets of the Board of Aldermen.

The classification of indexed plans gives the number as 3827, besides which there are many plans not indexed, comprising a set of fifty-two of the streets of East Boston, forty of the streets of South Boston, also plans of twenty-foot streets in South Boston, and the bound volumes of plans and profiles have been increased by additions of copies of plans by the annexation of Roxbury and Dorchester. These comprise seventeen which are classified as "Old," thirty as "New," and three volumes of insurance plans, showing widths of streets and location of buildings in Boston proper, and parts of Cambridge, Charlestown, Roxbury, East Boston and South Boston.

Ordered to be sent down.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, made reports on applications relating to stables as follows: Leave to Lorenzo D. Benner to occupy a wooden stable for two horses rear of 124 Dudley street; leave to withdraw on petition of H. A. Stevens and others against the stable of Robert Crosby on White street, action having been taken Dec. 5, 1872. Severally accepted.

Graves, to manufacture spirituous and intoxicating liquors; New York Circus, to give exhibitions in this city, South Boston and East Boston, in May next; Henry O. Dockham and J. H. Morie, to keep an intelligence office. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, reported an order confirming an assessment on Orleans street, amounting to $502 12. The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Alderman Sayward from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, acting upon an order from the City Council dated October 30, 1872, namely, to purchase a lot of land on the corner of Winslow and Dudley streets and erect thereon an engine house for Engine Company No. 12, made a report that they have purchased the land agreeable to the above order for the sum of $9736, leaving a balance of $18,264 from the special appropriation for the purpose of $28,000.

They having received estimates for the erection of the building and find that, owing to the advance in building material since the fire, the unexpended balance will not be sufficient to complete the building; but that an additional appropriation of $3000 will be required.

In order that the building may be commenced as soon as possible, as the old building is soon to be demolished, they would recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $3000; to be added to the appropriation for Engine House No. 12.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed. Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Comity Accounts, to whom were referred the petitions of Thomas L. Hallworth and Caroline T. Norris, to be paid for land taken to widen Washington avenue in Chelsea, made a report as follows:

In 1871, the County Commissioners for the County of Middlesex, acting under the authority conferred upon them by the General Statutes, sect. 34, chap. 17, established a highway in the city of Chelsea and the town of North Chelsea, and subsequently made a requisition upon the city of Boston for the payment of the expenses chargeable to the County of Suffolk. This assessment was in accordance with an arrangement entered into between Boston and the other portions of Suffolk County in 1831, the substantial provisions of which were incorporated into the General Statutes of 1859, as follows:

"Sec. 3, chap. 17. In the County of Suffolk the real and personal estate which on or before the 23d of June, 1831, belonged or was deemed and taken to belong to said county, shall belong to or be vested in the city of Boston and the city of Chelsea and towns of North Chelsea and Winthrop shall have no right, title of interest therein."

"Sec. 6, Ibid. In the County of Suffolk the court houses, jails, house of correction, fire-proof offices and other necessary public buildings for the use of the county shall be provided by the city of Boston, and said city shall pay all county charges."

Although requisitions for the payment of expenses for laying out county roads had been assessed upon this city previous to 1871, the amounts assessed were so small that the attention of the Government had not been attracted particularly to the subject. In this case the assessment amounted to about $34,500, and the Government of last year recognizing the injustice which was being done to the taxpayers of this city, applied to the Legislature to be relieved from future assessments for such purposes. An act was accordingly passed, chap. 91, 1872, adding to the sixth section, as quoted above, the following words:

"No part of the expenses incurred by the laying out, widening, alteration, discontinuance, building or repair of any highway, bridge or other way of travel in the city of Chelsea, or the towns of Revere and Winthrop, shall be assessed upon the county of Suffolk, in the city of Boston."

A portion of the damages estimated by the Middlesex County Commissioners, in their requisition on the first Tuesday of January, 1872, was paid last year, and for the purpose of completing the payments, the committee recommend the passage of the accompanying order, covering all the cases in which certificates have been received from the proper authorities showing that possession has been taken of the property for which damages were allowed:

Ordered, That there be paid to the following-named persons the sum set against their respective names for damages caused by taking land for the purpose of widening Washington avenue in the city of Chelsea, by an order of the County Commissioners of the County of Middlesex, passed on the first Tuesday of January, 1872, upon their giving an acquittance and discharge for all damages, costs and expenses caused to and incurred by them, on account of said takings; said sums to be charged to the appropriation for the County of Suffolk, viz.:

William Christy, $75; Samuel F. Nottage, $52; Henry H. Hall, $47; John Dodd, $44; J. T. Bailey, $49; Caleb Pratt, $56; Oren W. Fiske, $47; Thomas L. Hallworth, $38; George E. Colesworthy, $35; Tarrant M. Beal, $95; Henry C. Clayton, $65; Louisa J. Manuel, $65; Caroline T. Norris, $65; George A. Patrick, $65; Hosea Hsley, Jr., $70; Mary E. Center, $80; David E. Mayo, $325; Thomas H. Carruth, $190; Joseph H. Sanford, $235; Mary M. Fawcett, $70; J. D. Farnum, $80; J. E. M. Gilley, $205; William H. Hollis, $150; A. J. Hilbourne, $500; heirs of Joshua Carter, $3000; William G. Thwaite, $200; J. W. Cookson, $200; Joh H. Wilkinson, assignee of J. O. Blake, $675; William Boyden, $350; George C. Bosson, $1500; James Blaisdale, $350; John Magee, $500; Chelsea Highland Company, $1620; Hamlet Bates, $1500; William H. Low, $180; J. H. Kibbey, $180; Oliver Calef, $600; Henry Slade, $180; Thomas H. Greeley, $550; Silas K. Curry, $450; Mellen Chamberlain, $800; Ivory Wells, $100; Charles E. Ordered, That the Superintendent of Public Buildings, under the direction of the Committee on Public Buildings, be authorized to partition the large Committee Room in the City Hall, and place folding doors in the same; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

Alderman Power wished to know the reasons for the proposed division of the committee room, which was none too large for many hearings, being often crowded, and the division of which would mar the building. He had heard that it was for the purpose of giving a room to the Committee on the Burnt District Loan. Rooms for committees might be provided up stairs, and accommodations could be provided outside, particularly in cases like that of the Committee on the Loan, having no connection with the ordinary action of the City Government, and for which such provision is not necessary.

Alderman Sayward replied that it was not designed to mutilate the building, but the proposed alteration was at the request of the Mayor and heads of departments, while it was in part to accommodate the Loan Committee. His experience had been such as never to know the committee room to be crowded, while it frequently occurred that when there was a meeting of a committee that room and the room of Mr. Bugbee were both occupied. Further accommodations outside of the City Hall would be necessary to provide for the business of the several departments; but in this case it was designed simply to run a partition through the centre of the room, the present doors serving as an entrance to each, and the two rooms to be connected by folding doors of twelve feet, by which they may be thrown into one when necessary. When a larger room was needed the Common Council Chamber could be used.

The order was passed.

Alderman Gibson offered the following order, which was referred to the Committee on Fire Department:

Ordered, That the Committee on Fire Department consider the expediency of authorizing the Mayor to appoint a Fire Inspector and three assistants, whose duty it will be to examine all buildings, public and private, with a view to ascertain the condition of matter stored, the proximity of woodwork or other combustible material to heating apparatus, and the degree of carefulness or carelessness, as the case may be, exhibited by the owners and occupants, and who will be empowered to enforce such precautionary measures as may tend to lessen the number of conflagrations in this city.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Paving, together with the Committee on Licenses, constitute a Special Committee of this Board to consider and report what additional rules can be made for regulating public travel on Tremont and Washington streets below Boylston street, and in Dock square, with a view to prevent blockades and interruption to travel in those streets, and to afford necessary facilities to builders upon the easterly side of Washington street.

Alderman Stebbins, in support of the order, said it was framed like some others which had been passed, by the union of two committees, to devise some plan by which the crowding of the streets could be obviated. Very soon in the rebuilding of the burnt streets there will be much cumbering of the streets with building material, and something should be devised by which the travel may be improved. It might be necessary to prohibit the running of the horse cars below Boylston street, or this side of Hanover street, or a remedy provided in the appointment of special policeman to prevent the blockade of the streets.

Alderman Clark objected to the passage of the order at this time, and it was laid over.

ANNUAL REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF LAMPS.

The annual report of the Superintendent of Lamps was laid before the Board in print. It contains a table showing in detail the expenses of the past municipal year, a table showing the comparative expenses for six years, tables showing the number of lamps and comparative increase during the same period, with some general information and suggestions.

During the year lamps have been replaced on the Suffolk-street district, and lamps have been lighted on Dorchester avenue from Field's Corner to the Lower Mills, and on a continuation of Beacon street, on Brighton, Western and Longwood avenues, and on many shorter routes.

No change has been made in the contracts with the gas companies, except on the reduction from the removal of the United States tax on gas, which will amount yearly to $20,000. The prices paid for gas for public lamps is as follows:

City proper, five sixths of one cent per hour, or $2 08 1-3 per thousand feet; South Boston, one cent per hour, or $2 50 per thousand feet; East Boston, one cent per hour, or $2 50 per thousand feet; Roxbury, one cent per hour, or $2 50 per thousand feet;

Dorchester, one and one tenth of one cent per hour, or $2 75 per thousand feet; Brookline, one and one tenth of one cent per hour, or $2 75 per thousand feet.

The burners in use are known as Tuft's regulators, by which the consumption is fixed at four feet per hour. The lamps are burned every night, and a total of about three thousand eight hundred hours each.

The men who light the gas lamps are paid at the rate of 2 1/4 cents per lamp per night, for each lamp lighted in the following sections of the city: City proper, 45 men; South Boston, 9; East Boston, 5; while in Roxbury, 18 men; Dorchester, 12 men; Brookline, 1 man.—they are paid at the rate of 1 67-100 dollars per day.

Where the men are paid by the lamp, the average of lamps to each man is seventy-seven, and those paid by the day average fifty-seven lamps; but the lamps are considerably further distant from each other, which is a full equivalent to the number of lanterns in charge.

The men employed to light the fluid lamps are paid at the rate of three cents per lamp per night, and the kerosene lamps are furnished with oil, trimmed, lighted and taken care of at the rate of $20 per annum for each lamp. The price for fluid for use in the city lamps is at the rate of one-tenth of one cent per hour with the exception of a few naphtha lamps furnished at a price of eighteen cents per gallon. The number of lanterns reported broken during the year was seventy-six hundred and thirty-one, and a considerable number were condemned as unfit for service.

The number of gas lamps is 6344, and the increase was 110 in 1868, 626 in 1869, 365 in 1870, 483 in 1871, and 456 in 1872. The increase last year in the several sections of the city, was 82 in the city proper, 18 in East Boston, 51 in South Boston, 148 in Roxbury, 112 in Dorchester, and 45 in Brookline. There were located on the territory burned over in November 175 gas lamps, which would have given the increase 631.

The number of oil and fluid lamps is 840, there being a decrease in the year of 139, 68 in the city proper, 37 in South Boston, 27 in Roxbury, 5 in Dorchester, and 2 in East Boston.

The appropriation for the financial year ending on the 30th of April next was.....$370,500 00
Amount expended to date..... 256,937 39

Balance unexpended.....$113,562 61

An amount more than sufficient to meet the payments for the remainder of the financial year.

The expenditures have increased from $219,517 55 in 1867 to $272,982 88 in 1868, $276,064 71 in 1869, $324,580 47 in 1870, $337,129 07 in 1871, $359,085 99 in 1872.

Ordered to be sent down.

The notice of the appointment of Ephraim Emerton as the Mayor's clerk was ordered to be placed on file.

The petitions of Horace C. Rose, Joseph L. Watson, David H. Sampson, Ira B. Orentt, Smith & McGarigle, Henderson Inches, J. A. & N. Harwood, J. E. Tilton & Co., Thompson, Bigelow & Brown, Ebenezer E. Hill, Mercantile Savings Institution, Hartford Steam Boiler Company, the Assistant Port Physician, and of the Commissioner of Charles-River and Warren bridges, for an additional appropriation for bridges, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The order authorizing a partition to be made in the large committee room in the City Hall, and folding doors to be placed therein, being under consideration,—

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 inquired of the Chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings the necessity for this measure.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4 replied that more committee rooms were needed, this room could be easily divided, and with sliding doors such a division could be made.

Mr. Flynn said it was well known that there were times when a large room was needed, and when quite a number of people were in attendance upon committees. The room of Mr. Bugbee was not large, having accommodations only for five or six persons at a time. This was the only room of a large size, and it would be unjust to old and infirm people to require them to come up here to the Council Chamber for hearings.

He hoped, therefore, that the room would be retained as it is.

Mr. Bicknell said he would not object to have the order lie over.

Mr. Flynn replied that he proposed to have it disposed of now, and moved that it be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was carried.

REPORT OF COMMISSIONER OF CHARLES-RIVER AND WARREN BRIDGES.

The annual report of the Commissioner of Charles-River and Warren bridges was laid before the Council in print.

The report refers to the provisions of the act of 1870, requiring the draw in Warren Bridge to have a clear opening of thirty-six feet, and to the extensive improvements on the Charles-River Bridge which prevented the commissioners from proceeding with the work on the Warren Bridge. The plans for repairs, which would have been done within the estimates, were objected to by the Harbor Commissioners, which necessitated the adoption of what is known as the "counterbalance pivot" draw, and this involved the building of a foundation pile pier in the centre of the bridge, and the raising of the grade of the bridge two feet, to allow the draw to pass over the water pipe on the north side. It was necessary, also, to remove the buildings on the piers, as the new draw would require much of the space occupied by them, and for the purpose of replanking the whole pier, which was also required to be extended about seventy feet. The buildings, with the exception of the dwelling house of the Superintendent, were too old and dilapidated to be worth preserving, and they were accordingly demolished, and new ones have been erected at a cost of $2000.

The raising of the roadway has been very expensive, as it required the taking up of a large quantity of dock mud, originally laid over the timbers, which had become very dry and hard to remove. The expense was also enhanced by the necessity of raising the curbstones on brick foundations, and the elevation of the sidewalks and bulkheads. In short, the bridge, instead of being repaired as was contemplated by the Commissioners in their estimates, has been, with the exception of the piles and floor of the bridge, entirely rebuilt. The Commissioners, however, are gratified in being able to state that all the work has been done in a most thorough manner, and, they believe, at a less cost for material and labor than was anticipated, and that it will be many years before this bridge will require any extensive repairs.

Notwithstanding the bridge has been almost entirely reconstructed during the past four months, the public travel was interrupted for only five weeks.

On account of the strong wind and tidal currents, it has frequently been difficult to pass a vessel through the draw without much delay and inconvenience to the public travel; the Commissioners have therefore decided to try steam, instead of horse power, as the former can not only be used to open and close the draw, but by means of an attached windlass, afford powerful aid in the passage of vessels through the bridge. If the experiment does not prove satisfactory, the engine can be disposed of at a small loss, and the horse power be reintroduced; but if, as it is anticipated, it should prove successful, the advantage will be very great.

The Commissioners were unable to agree with the Fitchburg Railroad as to their liability for the expense of raising a portion of the buildings belonging to the railroad to the new grade of the bridge. By mutual agreement the question was referred to the City Solicitor of Charlestown and Henry W. Bragg, Esq., who decided the law in favor of the railroad, and consequently the expense must be paid from the Bridge Fund.

The sidewalk on the north side, over the water pipe, has been covered with asphalt, and contrary to the anticipations of the Commissioners, about $500 of this expense must be paid by the Bridge Commissioners, instead of the Water Board.

The number of times the draw of Warren Bridge has been opened for the passage of vessels from January 1, 1872, to January 1, 1873, is 7724, being an increase of 600 during the year.

Charles River Bridge. Preparatory to making the alterations and repairs on Warren Bridge, important improvements in the machinery in the draw of this bridge were made, that no probable accident might occur while the Warren Bridge was closed to public travel.

This was rendered more imperative from the fact, that by the splitting of one of the steel friction rolls, the principal truck was broken, and considerable damage done to the draw and gearing. This accident required several new trucks and gear wheels, and although it involved considerable expense, all defective or weak points were renewed. The draw has since been entirely satisfactory in its operation, and is now in excellent order.

The fender guards of both bridges have been rebuilt, and the principal expenditure for the coming year will be in providing for new bulkheads and fence and repaving the roadway on Charles-River Bridge, which are much needed.

The number of times the draw of this bridge has been opened for the passage of vessels from January 1, 1872, to January 1, 1873, was 10,270.

The amount appropriated by the City Council for the financial year ending April 30, 1873 was $42,000.

Of this sum there has been expended from May 1, 1872, to January 1, 1873, as follows:

For general expenses.....	$3,506 11
For Charles-River Bridge.....	1,458 16
For Warren Bridge.....	36,593 88

Balance.....	$41,558 15
	441 85

Ordered to be sent up. $42,000 00

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SEWERS.

The annual report of the Superintendent of Sewers gives the expenditures for the past year as follows:

From the Sewer Appropriations.....	$156,070 30
" Fort Hill	3,275 39
" Paving	5,000 00

Total.....	$164,345 69
------------	--------------

The report gives in detail the location, length, size, kind and cost of sewers laid during the year, a recapitulation of which gives the following result:

City proper.....	6,378 feet	$24,294 17
South Boston.....	9,404 "	25,562 16
East Boston.....	3,508 "	11,452 22
Roxbury.....	14,579 "	49,855 04
Dorchester.....	2,682 "	27,007 96
Miscellaneous.....		26,174 14

Total.....	36,550 ft. or nearly 7 m.	$164,345 69
------------	---------------------------	--------------

Under the charge of miscellaneous expenses, $7235 69 was for repairing sewers, $5441 for salaries and office expenses, $2550 for dredging Roxbury Canal, and $2471 for land purchased.

Whole length of sewers in the city, about 123 miles. Of the amount expended from the "Sewer" Appropriation, there has been assessed upon estates benefited, the amount of.....$69,652 80. The Treasurer has collected, during the year, assessments amounting to..... 56,984 32. The Superintendent has collected and paid into the Treasury, from fees, use of tools, warfage, etc..... 2,060 35.

Total collections.....	$59,044 67

During the year 1371 permits have been given to construct or repair drains, 62 manhole covers renewed with iron, and twenty with wood; and 148 manholes cleaned, containing 281 loads of sewage matter.

For the first time, an attempt is making to continue sewer building through the winter, in constructing the large stone sewer across the marshes in Kemp street, Washington Village. Two or three other contracts are still unfinished, upon which work will be resumed in the spring. The covering of the lower end of Stony Brook was suspended on account of the unusual height of water during the summer and fall, but will be finished before any annoyance can be caused by the offensive exhalations from it in the heat of summer.

No damage except breaking a few manhole covers was caused by the great fire, and the only change proposed in the sewerage of the district is the much-needed deepening of the Summer-street sewer which was originally built for house drainage, and is not low enough for the basements of stores.

A large amount of work will be needed in the construction of main outlets and the lower branches of sewers in Dorchester. This class of work is most expensive and produces no return in assessments.

It seems almost imperative that streets should be laid out in the unimproved territory of Dorchester and Roxbury, along the lowest lines of the valleys, or else this department will be forced to go to almost as much expense to take land for sewers, to make the main lines of the several systems. During the ensuing year some action of this kind must be taken, either by the Street Commissioners or by this department.

The rainfall of the year amounted to 58.04 inches. Ordered to be sent up.

Messrs. Perkins of Ward 6, Burt of Ward 16 and Woodward of Ward 13 were appointed the committee to be joined.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Blackmar of Ward 10—

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to allow for payment to the City Treasurer the sum of $1000, being the amount paid by him on a writ of execution issued by the Superior Court, Suffolk County, January term, 1873, in favor of Louis Frazier, for injuries sustained by defect in a highway; said amount to be charged to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses.

On motion of Mr. Martin of Ward 7—

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to appoint the members of the Common Council special police officers without pay.

On motion of Mr. Holmes of Ward 6—

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department consider and report upon the expediency of giving the right of way to steam fire engines, hose companies and hook and ladder companies on going to fires.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 believed the firemen had the right of way, now, as the gentleman would probably find should he get in their way while they are going to fires.

Mr. Holmes replied that the Fire Department might assume that right, but he had been assured that they did not have it, and it would be as well to provide for giving it to them.

On motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12—

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Health be requested to endeavor as far as possible, in conjunction with the Board of Health, or otherwise, to so construct hospitals for persons afflicted with infectious diseases that the air escaping therefrom shall be disinfected as far as possible.

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings be requested to consider and report what measures may be necessary to be taken in relation to water pipes in buildings, so that they shall not be liable to injury by the freezing of water therein.

THE BADGE QUESTION.

Mr. Martin of Ward 7 offered the following order:

Ordered, That a special committee of three be appointed to procure suitable badges for members of the Common Council; the expense to be charged to the contingent expenses of the Common Council.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said he would suggest that a little economy be exercised in this matter; for at this time they could not afford to pour out money like water, and badges might be procured a little less expensive than heretofore.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 stated that when he came into the Council he was opposed to the members ornamenting themselves with badges, but during the recent fire he found badges to be of great benefit and desirable. There should be some badge for members of the Council, but he objected to buying badges and having the members take them away with them on leaving the Government. There might be decent badges procured, with the simple stamp upon them "Boston City Council," and on going out of office, the members should leave them.

Mr. West suggested that with such a mark upon them alone, there would be nothing to prevent their being counterfeited.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9, said he supposed the badges to be the same they were three or four years ago, when he was in the Council, and a provision might be made for those alone who had none. If they were the same substantially, with the exception of the date, there would be no necessity for providing all the members with new ones. He moved that an amendment be made to that effect.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he opposed the procuring of badges last year, but found them to be useful. He was in favor of the suggestion of the gentleman from Ward 16, of economy in expenditures for badges.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 opposed the amendment and stated that a member of the Council of 1869 shoved up his badge, and it might now be seen worn by an usher of the Boston Theatre.

Mr. Denny said he was a member of the Council of 1869, but had not parted with his badge. The badge of 1869 was the same as that of 1868.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 believed the objection could be met by the proposition of the gentleman from Ward 1, by which every member of the Council on retiring should leave his badge with the City Messenger. There would then be no spouting of them or sporting of them on the lapsels of ushers.

Mr. Pease believed they could obviate the whole difficulty by having the city seal on the badge, marked simply with the words "City Council," then, with delivering them up, they would last through all time.

The amendment of Mr. Denny was lost, when the order was passed.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16 offered the following orders, which were severally read once:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid for extra work and material furnished by the Atlantic Works and others, on the fire boat, as per order of the Committee on Fire Department, the sum of $4646 69; the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Ordered, That the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department be and hereby is authorized, with the approval of the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department, to make such purchases of hay, grain and horses, and make the necessary repairs on hose and furnish such material and supplies for the use of this department as may be needed from time to time during the present municipal year; the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Ordered, That the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department be and hereby is authorized, with the approval of the Joint Standing Committee of the Fire Department, to make such repairs as may be needed on the engines, hose and hook and ladder carriages from time to time during the present municipal year, provided the expense of said repairs does not exceed the sum of $1000 on any one piece of apparatus at one time; the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

TRUSTEES OF CITY HOSPITAL.

Alderman Clark, from the joint special committee appointed to nominate candidates for Trustees of the City Hospital, made a report in part at this time, recommending the election of the following named persons as representatives of the City Council on said Board of Trustees:

Alderman—James Power.

Common Council—Timothy J. Dacey, James F. Marston.

The Board proceeded to an election, when the several persons named were unanimously elected.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the Boston Co-operative Association that a new bond for land sold to them be substituted to replace the one injured by the late fire Nov. 9 and 10, 1872, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered. That the Superintendent of Public Lands be directed to issue a new bond to the Boston Co-operative Association for land sold them by the city on East Canton street, subject to such conditions as shall meet the approval of the City Solicitor, said bond to replace the one destroyed by fire Nov. 9, 10, 1872.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Lands, made a report that an order was passed by the City Council and approved by his Honor Mayor Gaston, January 4, 1873, whereby the Treasurer was authorized to cancel certain bonds which were given by John S. Blair and Charles W. Skinner for land purchased by them on Harrison avenue, upon their surrendering the agreements received from the city to convey said land, and the Superintendent of Lands was directed to issue new agreements to Ezekiel S. Johnson and Joseph F. Came, upon their giving to the city bonds in the amount as set forth by the Treasurer to be due on the bonds of said Blair and Skinner, said bonds and agreements to be dated January 1, 1873.

The committee learn from the Superintendent that the papers could not be prepared in season to receive the signatures of the late Mayor, and as the present incumbent was not in office on the first day of January, he is prevented from signing them, as the date cannot be changed until further action is taken by the City Council.

They, therefore, recommend the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered. That the order passed by the City Council Jan. 4, 1873, directing certain bonds and agreements standing in the name of John S. Blair and Charles W. Skinner be cancelled and new ones be made out to E. S. Johnson and Joseph F. Came, and dated Jan. 1, 1873, be and the same is hereby rescinded.

The other order was in terms the same as the original which was passed, to meet the difficulty represented by the committee.

The report was accepted, and the orders were passed.

NOMINATIONS OF CITY OFFICERS.

Alderman Gibson, from the joint special committee to nominate a candidate for City Messenger, made a report recommending the reelection of Alvah H. Peters.

The report was accepted and ordered to be sent down.

Alderman Stebbins, from the joint special committee to nominate a candidate for Superintendent of Fire Alarms, made a report recommending the reelection of John F. Kennard.

The report was accepted and ordered to be sent down.

Alderman Sayward, from the joint special committee to nominate a candidate for Superintendent of Public Buildings, made a report recommending the reelection of James C. Tucker.

The report was accepted and ordered to be sent down.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Finance, to whom were referred the report of the Committee on Sewers and the communication of the Commissioners on the Charles-River and Warren Bridges, for additional appropriations, reported the accompanying order, granting the requests:

The Auditor of Accounts represents that the several Contingent funds for the joint standing committees without appropriations, the Common Council and the Board of Alderman are exhausted. They therefore embrace in the order small transfers to said funds sufficient to meet the wants under those heads for the balance of the financial year.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and hereby is authorized to transfer from the appropriation for State tax to that for Sewers, $10,000; from that for Lamps to that for Charles River and Warren bridges, $10,000; to the Contingent Fund Board of Aldermen, $1500; to the Contingent Fund of the Common Council, $1500; to the Contingent Fund of the joint committees of the City Council, $1500.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

COURT-STREET WIDENINGS.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, made a report that an additional loan of $2,000,000 will be required for the widening, extending, grading and paving of streets within the Burnt District, so called, and for all damages and expenses in consequence thereof.

A loan of $1,000,000 was authorized for this purpose by an order of the City Council approved Dec. 28, 1872.

Orders have already passed the City Council to widen the following streets, which if settled for, according to the award of damages made by the Board of Street Commissioners, would more than exhaust the present loan by $14,418; viz., Washington street, $338,547; Summer street, $294,133; High street, $54,302; Purchase street, $93,913; Lindall street, $80,280; Otis street, $55,192; Devonshire street, $98,051. Total, $1,014,418.

It is impossible at the present time to estimate the cost of the remaining street improvements, as the proposed lines of widening of several of the principal streets have not been fully determined upon by the Board of Street Commissioners; but in the judgment of the committee the cost of these improvements, including the grading, paving and other attendant expenses, will approach, if not exceed, $2,000,000.

They would therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying order, making an additional loan of $2,000,000:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be and hereby is authorized, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, to borrow the sum of $2,000,000; the same to be added to the Burnt District Loan.

Referred to the Joint Committee on Streets.

OPENING THE PUBLIC LIBRARY ON SUNDAYS.

Alderman Quincy, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Public Library, to whom was referred the order requesting the Trustees of the Public Library to open the reading room of the library on Sundays from 2 to 9 P. M., made a report that the order ought to pass.

Alderman Hulbert of the committee dissented.

The Chair laid before the Board a remonstrance from Henry Burroughs and others against the opening of the Public Library on Sundays.

The question being upon the passage of the order, Alderman Hulbert expressed the hope that it would be laid over in deference to a large class of the community who were opposed to the measure, and to the remonstrants.

Alderman Clark believed it to be unnecessary to delay action on the subject, which had been well considered, yet he was not particular to act upon it today.

The order was laid over on the suggestion of Alderman Hulbert, who subsequently withdrew his objections to immediate action, and it was taken up for consideration.

Alderman Hulbert said he dissented from the proposed action of the committee for a few reasons. The religious consideration he would not urge, although he had decided convictions upon the sanctity of the Sabbath and its advantages, but he would not present his personal ideas in relation to it. His reasons for opposing the opening of the library on Sunday were that a large portion of the community feel deep on the subject, and that there was no necessity for such an opening of the library. It would be only opening a door which they believed would not be for the public good, and would be to them a subject of regret and grief.

The number and character of this class of the community was of so much importance that they were entitled to their consideration, and they could not ignore the scruples of so large a body of citizens. Others who favored the measure believed there might be some good in opening the library. Their reasons did not go down so deep as the religious scruples of those opposed. In answering to their demand for opening the library, it may be urged that those who wish can get books from the library on Saturday night, and no one can suffer for want of reading.

It was said there was a large class of young men who needed such a means of improvement, but there were accommodations for only from seventy-five to one hundred at best, and these few were to be provided for, while a large body of the community were to be aggrieved by the action. Without stating his own convictions, he would put it squarely that they had no right to ignore the convictions of so large a body of citizens. On that ground he opposed the passage of the order.

Alderman Quincy stated that no one could be more opposed than he to any attempt at Germanizing or Frenchifying our quiet New England Sabbath, and did he believe this to be a step in that direction it would meet his earnest opposition. He hoped never to see our theatres open on that day, nor the Sabbath changed into a boisterous, dissipated holiday; and precisely because he held such views did he favor the passage of the order. The question, as it presented itself to his mind, was whether the proposed measure would or would not favor a quiet, orderly and improving manner of spending the hours of leisure which the industrious classes have at their command on that day.

It had been objected that those who now spend the Sabbath in vice would not go near the Public Library, open or shut. Undoubtedly this was so, but it was to the young men and boys who had not yet gone wrong, and who were at a loss what to do with their Sunday hours, to whom the doors of an institution like this should be thrown wide. Nothing was truer than the homely maxim that "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." It is the young man loafing aimlessly about the city, because he didn't know what to do with his time, who would be apt to accept a seat behind a fast horse if offered by a fast companion, and awake on Monday with a headache and empty pockets. It was the undoubted duty of the City Government to use every exertion towards closing liquor saloons and resorts of vice on Sunday; but in view of the fact that entire success in this direction cannot be expected before the millennium, what more sensible course could be taken than to open the Public Library as an opposition, establishment and a means of depriving the first-named places of future customers, even if, as asserted, no effect can be expected on their present habits.

Attention had been called to the fact that a former City Government had asked the opinion of their legal adviser, which had been given to the effect that the proposed measure would conflict with the letter of the statute which forbids all labors, except those of necessity or charity, on the Lord's Day. With all respect for the opinion then expressed by the City Solicitor, it should not preclude the present and all subsequent city governments from taking notice of the fact that the point is one upon which lawyers differ, a diametrically opposite opinion having been given by the legal adviser of another city in the Commonwealth. The opinion of our City Solicitor covered two points. First, that this measure is not a work of necessity or charity, and, second, that not being such, it falls under the statute prohibition. Granting the first position, although controverted by other able lawyers, if it shall appear to us at this day that there is doubt whether the inference is not too broad, is there anything in custom, courtesy or law, which renders this opinion obligatory upon us who did not ask for it. The speaker then read extracts from the opinion of the court in the 9th of Allen, in support of the position, that some labors neither of necessity or charity did not fall under the statute of prohibition. His position was, that if, notwithstanding past opinions of the City Solicitor there appeared room for a reasonable doubt, the benefit of that doubt should be given to the classes whose highest interests he considered the measure would promote.

The question was taken, and the order was passed.

ADDITIONAL ACCOMMODATIONS FOR PUBLIC OFFICERS.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Public Buildings, to whom were referred several communications for additional accommodations for different departments of the public business, Directors for Public Institutions, Assessors, and for an office for the Board of Health, made a report.

The committee had learned that they could procure the building in Pemberton square occupied by the Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, which, in many respects, was fitted for the uses for which it would be required, and this building could be had for a term of ten years at a rent of $7000 per annum. They accordingly report an order accepting the lease of said building for ten years on the terms proposed.

On a motion to suspend the rules for the passage of the order, Alderman Power wished to know if the building was to be procured for the use alone of the Board of Health. If so, the board would prove to be a much more expensive body than was anticipated.

Alderman Sayward replied that it was not for the use of the Board of Health, which it was designed should be kept in the City Hall. It was proposed to remove certain other institutions to give further facilities for departments of business which require more room. The Directors for Public Institutions might be removed, and there might be some other removals. The Assessors need more room, and had asked for it, and it would be better for all concerned that some changes be made. Such a disposition of the room would be made as might prove to be best under the circumstances, yet that could not be determined now.

Alderman Clark said he had heard that a building could be had in Pemberton square for $3000 a year, and he wished to know whether provision was to be made for the work of revising the voting lists, which could be done away from the City Hall.

Alderman Sayward replied that he had not heard of any building in Pemberton square which could be had for $3000. The revising of the voting lists and such other business as can best be removed, could be accommodated in the building proposed. The Milk Inspector might be removed, but he could not tell what might be most advantageous in the way of changes.

Alderman Clark wished to know whether there was not room in the Charity Bureau for the Board of Health, Milk Inspector, and other offices?

Alderman Sayward did not know of any room in the Charity Bureau, while they did succeed last year in getting one office there.

Alderman Gibson hoped the order would be laid over.

Alderman Clark said he was in favor of such changes in office room which would be most advantageous, but he had understood there was plenty of room in the Charity Bureau.

Alderman Sayward withdrew his motion for suspension of the rules, and the order went over.

The report of the Commissioners on the late Fire was presented and referred to the Committee on the Fire Department.

Alderman Hulbert offered the following order which was read once:

Whereas, the public business at times requires the attendance of members of the City Council at hours that render it inconvenient for them to obtain meals at accustomed times and places; and whereas, it is reasonable that provision should be made for obtaining them elsewhere; therefore Ordered, That there be paid to each Alderman — dollars and to each member of the Common Council — dollars semi-annually, to cover such expenses; and that no amount shall be paid from the City Treasury for refreshments or meals, beyond the sums hereby appropriated either by committees, individual members of either branch of the City Council.

Messrs. Perkins of Ward 6, Martin of Ward 7 and N. Doherty of Ward 2 were appointed a committee to receive and count the votes, the result of which was as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	51

Messrs. Power, Dacey and Marston were declared to be elected, in concurrence.

The several reports nominating Alvah H. Peters as City Messenger, James C. Tucker as Superintendent of Public Buildings, and John F. Kennard as Superintendent of Fire Alarms, were read and laid over under the rule and ordinance.

THE SUNDAY-LIBRARY QUESTION.

The report in favor of the order for the opening of the reading rooms of the Public Library from 2 to 9 P. M. on Sundays, and the dissent of Charles Hulbert therefrom, came up for concurrence in the acceptance of the report and the passage of the order.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 presented the remonstrance of Rev. W. C. High and forty-four others of East Boston against the opening of the Public Library on Sunday. Remonstrances were also presented from M. Field Fowler and others and from D. B. Cheney and forty-seven others.

Severally ordered to be placed on file.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 made some remarks, giving a history of the action of the City Government on this question, from 1859 to the present year, with the several vetoes of the orders which had been passed, and the opinion of the City Solicitor against the lawfulness of the act, with the legislative action on the subject.

In relation to the legal question, his opinion was that there was a fair ground for doubt, and the only way of its settlement was by a decision of the Supreme Judicial Court. It was desirable, then, that the order should be passed for the purpose of bringing the matter before the court, and he trusted that its passage would prevail.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 believed that the opening of the library on Sundays was fraught with evil, unwise, and of no good whatever, and was designed to legalize what the City Solicitor had declared to be illegal. There were said to be doubts about the correctness of the opinion of the City Solicitor, and so there had been doubts expressed about other opinions of the City Solicitor upon matters which had been submitted to him. Some members of the Council appear as ready to jump at this measure as members of Congress do at the Credit Mobilier. If it was desirable to have a legal adviser, his opinions should be respected, else it is not worth while to have such an officer. He hoped therefore that the order would not be passed, and called for yeas and nays on its passage, which were ordered.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 hoped the order would not be passed tonight, for he was not prepared to vote upon it. The new members of the Council had had no opportunity to judge of the merits of the case, which had not been before them. He was aware that the subject had been before the City Council in past years, yet it had not been before this Council in all its bearings.

There were diversity of opinions held on the subject by the community, and while some believed it would be a violation of conscience to sanction such a measure, others believed there were those who were deprived of opportunities of improving their minds who would be benefited by opening the library. He had his own convictions on the subject, but was not prepared to discuss the subject now. The measure had been pressed through the Board of Aldermen without discussion and almost without consideration. He did not know of any petition which had been presented in favor of it, but it was of sufficient importance for the expression of opinions of the community, while remonstrances had been presented against the passage of the order.

Many persons wish to be heard in opposition to it, and some had been to him expressing the wish to be heard. They should give an opportunity for such citizens as are in favor of it, or remonstrants, to be heard by petitions or in person. He would move that the order be laid over or postponed one week, and that it be specially assigned to Thursday evening next, eight o'clock.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said he should make no objection to the question lying over, yet he was ready to meet it now. He had his convictions on the subject, and those would lead him to oppose the measure on the ground of principle. Yet he was ready to pass the order in deference to the clamor of the people for the opening of the library, and have the matter settled by testing the question before the courts. If he thought the effect would be to lead to the opening of the theatres on Sunday, he should oppose it entirely. He believed in the sacredness of the institution of the Sabbath, but if it was for the interests of society and for the good of young men, as it was claimed, to have the reading room opened, as a place in which to spend their time more profitably than about the streets, or in places of vice, he would vote for the order.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 9 said the remarks of the gentleman from Ward 1 reminded him of a statement of a gentleman from Ward 1 in the last Council, that he made up his remarks on the subject forty years ago, yet he wished a week in which to consider the subject. The question had been talked upon so much that everybody must have made up his mind on it, and there was no need of delay until petitions and remonstrances should be received. The public expect the City Council to pass the order. Last year there were a great number of petitions in favor of the measure, and there were hearings, greatly to the discomfort of the Board of Aldermen.

We know that the Calvinistic sects are all opposed to the opening of the Public Library on Sunday, while the great body of the community are in favor of it. There could be nothing gained by delay, and it would cause a long discussion. He hoped, therefore, that the order would not be laid over. It would require a two-thirds vote to suspend the rules in order for its second reading, and it would be as well to make a test of the question tonight.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 said it was often embarrassing to require members of the Council to vote on measures when they ask for delay, and he would not object to laying the order over if it was desired.

Mr. Pease inquired to whom the gentleman from Ward 6 referred, as having stated that he formed his opinions forty years ago.

Mr. Perkins replied that it was not him to whom he referred.

Mr. Cudworth of Ward 11 said he hoped the order would be laid over, for he had not thought of it, and wished to be better prepared to act upon the subject. There was a large class in the community who had conscientious scruples in many respects in relation to opening the library on Sundays, and it was not what many good citizens care to have. In days gone by good citizens had opposed the measure, and that there were others in favor it was perhaps true, but he should wish to have time to look into it more thoroughly before voting on it.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said he was prepared to vote upon the order, but as an act of courtesy, when others wished further time for deliberation, he was disposed to grant it. There was no hurry for action, for there was time enough. So far as related to the question of petitions in favor of opening the library on Sunday, there had been many petitions to the City Council in favor of it. Among the remonstrants he noticed one who had been a large stockholder in the Metropolitan Railroad Company, and so long as the city allowed the Chestnut-Hill driveway to be open on Sundays, which might be shut up, he could not see any objection to opening the library.

Mr. West of Ward 16, in reply to Mr. Pickering, said the gentleman referred to as a remonstrant had always been consistently opposed to the running of the horse cars on Sunday.

Mr. Perkins urged that so long as it would require a two-thirds vote for a suspension of the rules, it would be as well to order the question to a second reading now and let it go over. The order requiring an expenditure of money, it must go over under the rules.

Mr. Denny said he was not disposed to express his own convictions now, but in deference to those who were not in the Council when the matter had been considered, and those who wished to be heard on the subject, he hoped it would be laid over. He was always suspicious of measures which are rushed through the City Council, and remembered that when he was in the Council before a measure which was defeated at the last meeting was taken up again at the beginning of the next year and rushed through, yet afterwards was a cause for regret. There might not be the same cause for opposing this, yet when efforts are made to press a measure, suspicious will be attached to it. It could not suffer by a week's delay.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said it appeared from a statement of the question that all parties would be accommodated by the matters coming up a week hence, and that was all that each desired. If ordered to a second reading tonight to take its second at the next meeting, every one will be accommodated, and no one will have reason to find fault. In regard to a decision by the court, this question [substantially] was before the court in 1864, when Chief-Justice Bigelow gave an opinion in regard to the making of a will on Sunday, that, although it was not a work of necessity or charity, it was valid.

Mr. Dean read at length the opinion of Judge Bigelow, from which he inferred that the same principle being involved, had not the City Solicitor given his opinion, the year before, he would not have given it. There could be no better opinion than that of Judge Bigelow, which gives as the construction of the statutes, that they were designed to affect the various matters which relate to the ordinary business of life, in restraining the carrying on of trade or traffic on Sunday. The law was intended not to carry prohibition further than this. Mr. Dean read also from letters of Mr. Bates to Mr. Ward as an object in giving money to found the Public Library, that he had in view a moral effect as well as intellectual improvement. This was shown in what he said of having a place well warmed and lighted for young men by means of which they may be drawn from vice and led in the right path. Would not the tendency, he urged, in opening the library on Sundays, be to draw many, very many from vice, and in spending their time to great moral advantage?

A great number of young men spend their time on Sundays in wandering about the streets, and to provide such a place for them as was proposed by Mr. Bates, was it not a great charity? He could not see how it could be anything else. He held to a proper observance of the Sabbath day, but could not see how a minister of the Christian religion could object to the reading of proper books on that day, which is a handmaid to Christianity. It was lawful to do good on the Sabbath day. That was the question, and that is all of it.

It was difficult for him to make up his mind that there could be any evil in opening the library on that day, for it was impossible for any one to go into the library and get any unfavorable impression. The room was quiet and orderly; no one is allowed to speak louder than in a whisper, and in walking one goes on tiptoe; what harm can come from it? Must it not, then, be all good? He hoped the order would be passed to a second reading, and reasons could be more fully given another time.

The Chair stated that as the order involved the expenditure of money, it would go over under the rules.

Mr. Dean said his attention had been called to the fact that since the City Solicitor gave his opinion as referred to by him, he had said his opinion was the same as expressed when first requested to give it.

Mr. Denny believed it would be better to postpone and assign rather than take a vote on the order now, for some one might now vote against it who may, on further consideration, vote in the affirmative. Thus would nothing be lost by voting for the assignment.

Mr. Perkins said he was desirous of taking such action now that the question can be settled at the next meeting of the Council, and not require two weeks more, for if not ordered to a second reading until the next meeting, then a vote of two-thirds will be required for a suspension of the rules.

The question was taken on the assignment, which was lost, when the order was ordered to a second reading at the next meeting of the Council.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order authorizing a supply of such furniture and the making of such repairs and cleaning as may be needed in the City Hall, police stations, engine houses and other public buildings.

Order authorizing a supply of such furniture and the making of such repairs and cleaning as may be needed in the several schoolhouses.

Order authorizing the Superintendent of Health to make contracts, subject to the supervision of the Committee on Health, for horses and such materials as may be required for the use of the Health Department.

Order to pay forty-six hundred and forty-six 69-100 dollars for extra work and material furnished by the Atlantic Works and others, on the fire boat, by order of the committee.

Order authorizing purchases to be made of hay, grain, horses and supplies for the Fire Department.

Order authorizing repairs to be made on fire engines, hose, hook and ladder carriages.

Order authorizing a loan of three thousand dollars to be added to the appropriation for Engine House No. 12.

Order authorizing to be issued to the commissioners appointed in conformity to the legislative act of Dec. 7, 1872, bonds of the city for negotiation to the amount of five millions of dollars.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

W. F. Watson, that the Street Commissioners be requested not to lay out a street on the burnt district less than fifty feet in width. Referred to the Committee on Streets.

Thomas Gogin, for leave to erect a wooden building beyond the limits allowed by law. Referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Edward Perkins and others, in regard to assessments for betterments on Sturgis street. Ordered to be sent up.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Committee of the Common Council on Elections, to whom were referred the notifications from George M. Hobbs and H. W. Putnam that they contested the right of the persons who received certificates of election as members of the Common Council from Ward 15, to occupy seats at this board, and asking for a recount of the ballots cast at the last municipal election in said ward, made a report that they have carefully recounted the original ballots in the possession of the City Clerk, with the following result:

William G. Thacher had.....603
 Frederick Bleiler.....527
 Pierpont Edwards.....493
 Michael Kelley.....484
 H. W. Putnam.....453
 George M. Hobbs.....451
 Henry W. Fuller.....443
 Hiram A. Wright.....412
 Charles D. Bickford.....378
 William G. Bird.....135

James McLaughlin, John Kelley, Patrick Carroll and — Fuller, one each.

It appears, therefore, that William G. Thacher, Frederick Bleiler, Pierpont Edwards and Michael Kelley, who now occupy seats in the Common Council, were duly elected.

The report was accepted.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, from the Joint Standing Committee on Claims, to whom were referred the petitions of Currier, Trott & Company and many others, to be compensated for damages, caused by the destruction of buildings for the purpose of arresting the progress of the fire in this city on the 9th of November last, having carefully considered the subject, made a report that it appears from the opinion of the City Solicitor (a copy of which is transmitted herewith) that the city is not legally responsible for the damages in any of the cases covered by the petition.

The committee would therefore respectfully recommend that the petitioners have leave to withdraw.

The opinion of the City Solicitor is as follows:

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE, }
 2 Pemberton square, Boston, Jan. 28, 1873. }

Sir—Upon the statement of facts made by the Chief-Engineer, and submitted to me, my opinion is that the city of Boston is not legally responsible in damages for the buildings which were demolished for the purpose of arresting the progress of the fire on the 9th of November last. The liability of municipalities in such cases is created and limited by statute, and in order to cast that liability upon them the provisions of the statute in regard to the action of the Engineers in the premises must be complied with. In the cases under consideration, it clearly appears by the aforesaid statement that those provisions were overlooked or not acted upon. This opinion applies to cases where the fire did not reach the building demolished as well as to those in which the fire passed over the building demolished.

The city cannot be liable, in my judgment, for damages caused by the explosion of one building to other buildings in the neighborhood, when it is not liable for the building destroyed by the explosion.

In my opinion, the city cannot be held to pay for property destroyed by the fire because the owner was prevented by the firemen from removing that property to a place of safety, in order that the building in which the property was might be blown up. An individual in such cases cannot require that his property should be protected by the exposure to destruction of a much larger amount belonging to others.

When a building is partially destroyed for the purpose of making facilities to check the fire, the same principles must apply as in the case of a total destruction of the building; and whether the destruction be total or partial, it must be made in the manner provided by the statute, or no liability for the act attaches to the city.

Very respectfully,
 Your obedient servant,
 J. P. HEALY.

Mr. Alderman Quincy.

The report was accepted.

Mr. Wilbur, from the Joint Standing Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Mullin, to be compensated for personal injuries received from a fall on account of an alleged defect in Water street, having heard the petitioner, made a report that he have leave to withdraw his petition. Accepted.

Mr. Wilbur, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of David H. Sampson to be compensated for personal injuries received from a fall on the Common, made a report recommending that the petitioner have leave to withdraw his petition. Accepted.

Mr. Wilbur, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on the petition of Ira B. Orcutt, to be compensated for personal injuries received from a fall on account of an alleged defect in School street. Accepted.

Mr. Brennan of Ward 13, from the joint special committee appointed to nominate a candidate for a City Surveyor, made a report, recommending the reelection of Thomas W. Davis to the said office.

The report was laid over, under the rule.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—
 Ordered, That five members of the Common Council, including the President, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, be a joint special committee to have charge of the erection of the soldiers' and sailors' monument.

Messrs. Perkins of Ward 6, Darrow of Ward 8, Denny of Ward 9, and Barnes of Ward 11 were appointed the committee.

Ordered, That the committee appointed under an order of the City Council, approved Jan. 2, 1873, to report upon the financial, industrial and sanitary questions concerned in the annexation of certain cities and towns to the city of Boston, be authorized to procure such clerical services and such surveys and plans as they may require for the prosecution of their investigation; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Mr. Perkins, in answer to an inquiry, stated that in the economy exercised by the City Council in the appointment of the committee, they were embarrassed for want of means in obtaining the services of clerks, maps, plans, etc.

Mr. Perkins offered the following orders:—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Institutions be requested to consider and report upon the expediency of amending the ordinance in relation to the Port Physician, so as to require that he shall perform the duties of physician or assistant-physician to the institutions now located at Deer Island.

Ordered, That the Board of Directors for Public Institutions be requested not to proceed in the election of a resident physician for the institutions at Deer Island until further action thereon by the City Council.

Mr. Perkins stated, in explanation of the above orders, that under the former provisions in regard to the Port Physician, he was always the physician to the public institutions on the islands, but under the new ordinance establishing a Board of Health two physicians may be appointed unless the City Council otherwise provides. If two should be appointed it will be difficult to get two such as may be desired to fill both places. If combined, a much better physician may be had.

The orders were read once, and were subsequently passed, after further explanation.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 15 offered an order to provide school rooms for the children heretofore accommodated in the old Roxbury Almshouse.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 objected that the provisions required were under the direction of the School Committee.

The order was referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 offered an order, which was passed, that the Committee on Fire Department consider and report upon the expediency of the erection of a new house for Hook & Ladder Company No. 4.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9—

Ordered, That the Committee on Armories and Military Affairs be authorized to repair and furnish the armory occupied by Company K, Ninth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., at the corner of Third and Dorchester streets, in South Boston, at an expense not exceeding $300; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

On motion of Mr. Burt of Ward 16—

Ordered, That the salaries of the officers and crew of the iron steam tug used for fire purposes shall be for the balance of the present salary year at the following rates, viz.: Captain, $3 75 per day; engineer, $3 75 per day; mate, $3 25 per day; assistant-engineer, $3 25 per day; fireman $3, deck hand $3, steward $3, severally per day—the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Mr. Burt, in answer to inquiries, replied that the salaries generally corresponded with the salaries of officers of steam fire engines; the only difference being that the assistant-engineer and captain get twenty-five cents more a day.

On motion of Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, the Committee on Elections were authorized to report in print in the cases of petitions against the right of George A. Shaw and John W. Mahan to seats in the Council, and for the payment of a phonographic report of the evidence; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Mr. Davis of Ward 14 offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be requested to consider the expediency of widening Warren street from Moreland to Copeland street, on its easterly side.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the order was referred to the Committee on Streets.

On motion of Mr. Pickering of Ward 6—

Ordered, That the President of the Common Council

cil be authorized to approve bills for expenses incurred by the Common Council, and the standing committees of the Common Council not having charge of any appropriations of money; also by individual members of the Common Council while engaged in the discharge of official duty—the amount of said bills to be charged to the appropriation for Contingent Expenses of the Common Council.

Mr. West of Ward 16 moved a reconsideration of the indefinite postponement of the order to divide the large committee room by folding doors, giving notice that should the motion prevail, he would move to lay the order on the table, to await the action in the proposed hiring of rooms for the city's use in Pemberton square.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 opposed the reconsideration, believing the sense of the Council to be opposed to it by an almost unanimous vote in the indefinite postponement.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 wished to know what effect the action of hiring rooms in Pemberton square might have on the proposed division of the committee room.

Mr. West replied that some members of the Council have an impression that the division was to be made to provide accommodations for the Board of Health, which was not the case. The division of the room was necessary for the use of committees.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 stated that the proposed division was by double folding doors in the centre of the room, which would leave but six feet of unopen space when folded back, by which two separate rooms could be had, or the two could be thrown into one. This was believed to be the proper way to do it to provide additional committee rooms.

Mr. Flynn said it was a fact that the Loan Fund Commissioners now occupy a part of this committee room, and it would be impossible to get them out should the room be divided. Any one who was present at a hearing during the past week would have been satisfied that the room was not too large for such purposes.

The motion to reconsider was lost.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

FEBRUARY 3, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held this afternoon, at four o'clock, Alderman Cutter, the Chairman, presiding.

APPOINTMENTS MADE AND CONFIRMED.

Special Police Officers without pay—Members of the Common Council during the present municipal year.

Benjamin W. Hatch, for duty at Williams Hall, corner of Dover and Washington streets, at Templars' Hall, No. 280 Washington street, and vicinity.

Thomas Houghton, for duty on High street, Hartford street and vicinity; John Graham, for service at the Boston Theatre; Sidney W. Sampson, Henry N. Rogers, William B. Tarleton, and Charles H. Meserve for duty in the Department of the Board of Health.

Foreman of Engine Company No. 8—William Childs.

Police Officers—Bernard Johnson, Oscar M. Wellman, Christopher White, William J. Condon, Burt Gilson, Thomas Shehan, Harrison Wilder, Jr., George M. Lovering, Daniel E. Curran, Joseph Brown, Harry P. Hersey, Benjamin S. Hill, John H. Shaw, Lewis F. Leighton, William Burke, Frederic T. Harvey, Harlan P. Paige, Daniel A. Ritter—Ira B. Perry.

Alderman Hulbert wished to know of the Committee on Police what they knew of the characters of those who were recommended for appointment as police officers. He supposed that the Mayor, in making the appointments, would wish to have the Board obtain all the information possible in relation to the character of the men appointed on the police. He did not think the Mayor should be wholly responsible for these appointments. The recommendation of prominent citizens was not always infallible. He was desirous of knowing from the chairman of the Police Committee whether these persons were good citizens, of good character, and possessed the requisite fitness and ability for the proper discharge of their duties.

Alderman Gibson stated in reply that these men were all before the Committee on Police Friday afternoon, and they obtained all the information in relation to them which they could, and, as far as they knew, there was nothing against any one of them. He would not object to laying the nominations over, and it might be that some one would give further information who was not so successful.

The nominations were referred to the Committee on Police.

REPORT OF COMMISSIONER ON CAMBRIDGE BRIDGE.

The second report of F. W. Lincoln, Commissioner on Bridges between Boston and Cambridge, was laid before the Board, in print.

The report refers to the completion of repairs on the West Boston Bridge, among the more important of which "new gates of an improved pattern have been built for this bridge by Messrs. Ross & Lord, during the past year, and the old draw has been repaired sufficiently to keep it in running order. It needs new track frames and other repairs, the making of which have been postponed until the winter months to avoid interrupting the travel over the bridge.

The wooden pavement laid on the pile portion of the bridge has worn as well as was expected. Some difficulty was experienced with the Warren pavement for a short time, the heavy rains displacing it, but since this defect was obviated it has stood well. It is, however, the opinion of the commissioners that a wooden pavement is unsuitable for bridges built after the style of those under their charge for reasons given by them, and they say it is their intention, in making the proposed improvements on Canal Bridge, to pave the roadway with small granite blocks, as being the best pavement under all circumstances for the purpose.

In accordance with requests, and on an examination of the subject, the Commissioners believe that the application of steam power would be the most efficient and economical method of moving the draws. An estimate of cost of a double-cylinder engine of eight-horse power, with the necessary shafting and gearing, was obtained shortly after the receipt of this petition. The estimate, including the cost of an engine house and coal shed, was about $4500, and at that time it was not thought advisable to incur so large an expense in connection with the old draw. The Commissioners are obliged, by an act of the Legislature, to make the draw openings in this bridge thirty-six feet wide, instead of the present width of thirty feet; to span these openings a new draw twelve feet longer than the present one will have to be constructed, and although we have not thought it necessary to comply with the requirements of this act until the draw ways of Warren Bridge and the several railroad bridges between Warren and Canal bridges were widened, the action of the railroad corporations and the Commissioners on the Charlestown Bridges during the past year in widening the openings in their bridges leaves no excuse for further delay.

With a new draw of improved construction the use of steam might not be required; but additional difficulties are found in the width of water way, as affecting the ebb and flow of the tide, and the consequent necessity of warping vessels through the draw way without much aid from the current. It is designed to make the proposed repairs on the old draw, and the machinery which will be used on it during the reconstruction of the Canal Bridge may be used, if required, on the new one. The cost of the improvements thus far on this bridge, under the direction of the Commissioners, is $56,746 46.

The reconstruction of Canal or Craigie's Bridge, has been delayed for the same reason as given in the case of the other bridge, and it is important for the Lowell Railroad Corporation to cooperate with the Commissioners in making the alterations, which cooperation it is believed will be consented to. The new draw, by direction of the Harbor Commission, will have to be placed one hundred and sixty feet nearer the Cambridge end of the bridge; and the position of the railroad draw altered to make the draw openings come on the same line. The old draw way on Canal Bridge is to be covered with a new superstructure, and when this is done, vessels, instead of being in line to go through the new draw way after passing through the railroad bridge, will be compelled to make two changes in direction in a contracted channel to accomplish this object.

The plans which have been adopted for the reconstruction contemplate widening the present structure to sixty-four feet, a new draw fifty feet in width, with piers and openings in the position fixed by the Harbor Commission, a removal of the bulkheads and fences, the driving of additional piles in the old bridge piers where the superstructure is raised, several new piers between the present ones which have settled, and repaving the roadway with small granite blocks.

The width of sixty-four feet, which has been decided upon, will enable us to use such piles in the present fender guard as may be suitable, at much less expense than would be required if a greater width were adopted. The sidewalks will be ten feet wide, leaving forty-four feet for the roadway, which is ample for two horse-railroad tracks and three lines of teams.

The Street Commissioners of Boston were informally consulted before we decided upon this width. Their opinion was that sixty feet would be the greatest width it would be expedient to adopt for Leverett street, if widened, although no objection would probably be made to widening the street to sixty-four feet from the bridge to North Charles street. The plans upon which the estimate of last year was based contemplated widening the bridge to seventy-five feet to correspond to the width of Bridge street in Cambridge; but the Commissioners do not feel authorized to incur the expense of making it this width since their consultation with the Street Commissioners.

In deciding to make the draw fifty feet wide, instead of the full width of the bridge, they have been influenced by investigations of the various bridges over tide water belonging to the City of Boston.

The engineer's estimate of the cost of improvements on this bridge is $160,000, and as soon as the plans have received the approval of the Harbor Commission we shall advertise for proposals for doing the work. To avoid delay, the contractor should have two months time previous to beginning work under his contract to procure suitable timber, much of it being of sizes not easily obtained unless sawed to order. The bridge will have to be closed to team travel for a period of three or four months.

Only such repairs as were necessary for safety have been made upon this bridge during the past season. The draw broke down early in the spring. An examination of the timbers showed them to be so much decayed as to be in a dangerous condition. The bridge was at once closed to the passage of teams and the draw thoroughly reconstructed, the foot travel being accommodated by a small swing bridge.

The draw of the West Boston Bridge was opened during the last year 1697 times, and that of the Craigie's Bridge 4580. The general expenses to this city for maintaining these bridges amounted to $686 20, $500 of which was for salary of Commissioner; expenses of West Boston Bridge, $4741 56, of which $630 was for salary of Superintendent and $3925 23 for repairs; Canal Bridge, $1905 23, of which $630 was for salary of Superintendent and $1195 73 for repairs; making a total expense of $7333 08."

Ordered to be sent down.

HEARINGS ON ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The several hearings on orders of notice on petitions of R. B. Lincoln & Son, for leave to erect and use a steam engine and boiler on Alger street, near Dorchester street; of McCready & Stearns, for leave to erect and use a steam engine and boiler at 89 Court street; Schmetzen & Abendroth, for leave to locate and use a steam boiler and engine at 11 Charlestown street; Carew & Walsh, for leave to erect a steam engine and boiler on wharf on East Dover street; Dennison & Co., for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at 15 Suffolk place; Williams & Everett, to locate a steam engine and boiler at the corner of Bedford and Washington streets, were taken up.

No person appeared in either case, and the reports were recommitted.

The hearing on order of notice on petition of Manuel Silva against the Old Colony Railroad Company for an estimate of grade damages, was taken up, when Alderman Power presented a report as follows:

On petition of Manuel Silva of this city, praying this Board to estimate the damage caused to his estate on Dorchester avenue by the location and construction of the tracks of the Old Colony & Newport Railroad in rear of said land, as in said petition is more fully set forth, and it appearing that said Old Colony & Newport Railroad Company has been duly notified of the pendency of said petition, it is now hereby adjudged and estimated by this Board, that the damages occasioned to the petitioner's land by the location and construction of the tracks of the Old Colony & Newport Railroad adjacent to and in rear of said land, and by the alteration of the grade of Dorchester avenue at that point, in consequence thereof, amounts to the sum of one dollar.

Alderman Power stated, in explanation, that it might appear singular such a report was made, but it was understood the parties could not agree, and it would be a subject of litigation. The committee therefore reported in favor of nominal damages.

The report was accepted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order to pay heirs of Charles O. Rogers $8034, for land taken on Summer street.

Order to pay the heirs of Thomas Tileston $15,043, for land taken on Purchase street.

Order to pay heirs of Mary Tileston $3720, for land taken on Purchase street.

The report and order to hire the Missionary Building in Pemberton square, at an annual rent of $7000, for city purposes, were laid on the table.

PUBLIC EXPENDITURES FOR REFRESHMENTS.

The following order, offered by Alderman Hulbert, was considered:

Ordered, That there be paid to each Alderman — dollars, and to each member of the Common Council — dollars, semi-annually, to cover such expenses; and that no amount shall be paid from the City Treasury for refreshments or meals, beyond the sums hereby appropriated, either by committees or individual members of either branch of the City Council.

Alderman Hulbert said it might appear to be a trivial matter, but it was not from a want of respect to the members of the City Government that he offered the order. The history of the past showed that in more or less of its features it was something not new as a subject for public consideration. As a new City Government it was a matter worthy of their attention. In the first place, the whole expense of the Government for refreshments, whether much or little, none of it is legally chargeable upon the city. No committee or member of the City Council has a right to spend one dollar for such purposes, and standing upon its legality, that is the end of it.

In conversation with some one on the subject, the question was raised as to the ground of opposition which would be made to the order, and whether the legal question would be raised. He hoped the legal question would be raised. In the form of the order, he had given it in such a manner where no objection could be raised, as confined to expense of meals, and not including carriage hire, recognizing the reasonableness of that class of expenses.

Alderman Hulbert urged as his object in offering the order to put the city beyond scandal in the matter of furnishing refreshments, believing that the city would accord what was proper and right when members of the Government were put to the necessity of obtaining refreshments, but beyond that when they go further it should be known on what ground it is called for. It had been a custom in past times when committees and members of the City Council had been very busy to make expenditures beyond what is proper and reasonable.

The duties of members of the City Government, with reference to the public, entitle them to the respect and confidence of the community, but if not entitled to it they deserve its contempt. They might make mistakes, but should take care and not deserve contempt. In view of the interests of the city he stood appalled at the great expense which is required. The citizens may have opinions and urge certain actions, but they were called upon to take the responsibility and to decide upon those questions. Their action might be called in question, and while citizens might oppose him in his action he did not want to be disgraced. They might hate him for his course, but he did not wish to be despised.

In further urging this point for consideration, the Alderman said he wished the sustaining power of the public around them, and not have it said that they sold their manliness for a mess of pottage. The chairmen of committees were often embarrassed, as he learned, speaking from hearsay, as matters now stood. A committee would hold a meeting from two to three o'clock, and adjourn to some hotel, where they did not eat a dinner as merchants and others did, at a moderate expense, but in some upper room, where the expense would be from three to six times what merchants, lawyers and business men would expend for a dinner.

Every day there were these expenditures for dinners, but should a fixed sum be allowed, there it would end, and the committees would know it, and the chairmen would not be embarrassed. In this way the actual expenses would be amply met, and further than that they ought not to go. He could see no reason why they should do more than this, while in doing so they showed themselves not worthy of the respect of the public, and lowered themselves in self-esteem. In taking the city's fund for purposes like that, the members of a Government in another city had been demoralized, and the villain of the age, as he might be called, laughs at the judge, the court and the jury.

In behalf of every member of the City Council, of their families, of the reputation of the city, and of the young men of the city, he entreated that the practices he had spoken of be done away with. Under the oaths he had taken, he could not sanction such expenditures, and he wished the present City Council to have the respect of the public, and be careful in all the movements they make. If any gentleman should tell him that his proposition was not fair, he failed to see it.

Alderman Power said he had no doubt there had been abuses, in past years, in expenditures, and he hoped a better method would be devised to prevent such abuses. He hoped the order would be referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

Alderman Clark said he was happy to hear the remarks of the Alderman, and to inform him that, in the matter of the expenditures complained of, the City Government had been improved. The expenditures of the kind, last year, had been reduced by a large per cent. It would be almost impossible to regulate expenses of that kind to satisfy every one, but he objected to the order of the Alderman as strictly illegal, as they had no right to vote a salary, whether of $5 or $500.

It was his belief that public sentiment would regulate the matter, and the Alderman would see at the end of the month the effect so much desired by the Alderman and every member of the City Government. He had an order which he would offer, by which that public sentiment would have an influence in the matter.

Alderman Power withdrew his motion to refer, when Alderman Clark offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be directed to submit to the City Council a monthly statement, in detail, of the expenditures on account of refreshments furnished to the several standing or special committees of the City Council, or of either branch during the preceding month, designating the appropriation to which said expenditures are chargeable, and the names of the persons who have contracted the same (said report to commence with the February draft).

Alderman Quincy sympathized heartily in the purpose for which the order was offered, and hoped that in some form its object would be obtained. While he did not himself perceive on what ground the City Government should be held an exception to the rule that the laborer is worthy of his hire, yet the fact that it was so held could not render abuses of this sort dignified, decent or honest. It was not so much the amount paid, although gentlemen did not seem to have realized that they were spending out of the pocket of the poor taxpayer, as well as that of the rich; but the demoralizing effect on the character of the men who practised or permitted the abuse which was most to be deprecated.

To illustrate, what could be more natural than reasoning, thus: "Such a committee are spending their hundreds for champagne and cigars. I don't want bacchanalian snappers, but I should like a Brussels carpet and new mirrors, which wont cost half what others spend in drink and smoke, if I could only see how to make the city foot the bill." And in this frame of mind it soon occurs to him to take a hint from the parable of the unjust steward, and he goes to a man to whom the city owes forty, and tells him to take his bill and sit down quickly and write fifty. That was the way it had been done in New York and might be here. Next would come thousand-dollar safes for private counting rooms, and in view of the compound ratio in which such evils increase, how long would it be before members of the City Government might be filling their pockets with as brazen foreheads as that of the Napoleonic swindler who has just escaped the punishment of his crimes in New York. It was just these little abuses which, if unchecked, acquired the impetus of an avalanche, and swept cities into just such an abyss of corruption as that out of which New York was so bravely struggling to arise. Let those to whom the good name of our city was dear join hands in an attempt to check this abuse at once; if unsuccessful, at least their skirts would be clear, and the responsibility to the public would rest on the shoulders on which it belonged.

Alderman Clark said the question of paying salaries could not be entertained for a moment. His order, if adopted, would be all that was desirable in preventing abuses, and he was sorry that such an argument was made use of by the Alderman, for the ways suggested by him would never have been thought of. He had no fears, however, of this Government's following the ways of New York to any great extent; they might be on the road in their junketings to extravagance, but not to that extent which prevailed in New York. He should be sorry to have the City Council go to the Legislature for authority to pay salaries; for if they did, it would be expected they would pay from $4000 to $5000 to Aldermen and half as much to the Council. It would be strictly illegal to pay money without getting authority of the Legislature, and he hoped his or a similar order would be adopted at once and not referred to any committee.

Alderman Sayward said he was loth to say anything on this subject, but as he had been in the City Government for three years, he must allude to the past City Governments. In the discharge of his duties during that time, he had done so to the best of his ability, and if he had lost his self-respect, he thought the people would not have sent him here again. There had been enough said already to disgrace themselves and he would move an indefinite postponement of the order.

Alderman Hulbert said that Alderman Clark had hit the nail on the head. Before acting in this matter he had taken the advice of the City Solicitor in regard to the legality of payment for refreshments, and there was no right in either case; but the course proposed by him would be definite and manly, and they could go about their business feeling that it was so. They should be reasonable here as in any other business, expending only as much as might be necessary, while the practice had been to procure dinners at charges high and exorbitant. This he had had from men of experience in this hall. In strict legality they had no right to expend a dollar; but he would allow the expenditure of a definite, fixed sum, for any other course was demoralizing. With such a limit fixed, every member would feel better that it is so. What is wanted is to have confidence and to feel that they are entitled to the public confidence.

Alderman Stebbins said he should vote for the order, but suggested the addition to include the report of the February draft, which amendment Alderman Clark accepted as a part of the order.

Alderman Gaffield said this was his fifth year in the City Government, and he was glad the Alderman had introduced the subject, which had been a scandal for years. They were sent there to conduct the business of the Government in an economical manner, and in accepting office they knew that they were to have no compensation, and it would be a small sacrifice if it was not so. The people expect some one to accept office under such conditions, and if worthy men do not, those who are not worthy will, while others stay in their counting rooms writing invectives against the manner of doing the public business.

Alderman Gaffield hoped the Aldermen would never be paid as they were in New York, and it was their duty to stand and stop the chinks through which leaks are made from the public treasury. As something had been said about the expenses being less than they used to be, and as he was in this Board nine years ago, it was but right that he should make a defence of himself. He had examined the Auditor's report, and would give some comparisons between the year 1865 and the last year.

In 1865 the expenditures on armories were $15,761, and expenses of committee $139 25; last year, expenditures $18,244 44, and of committee $810 10. Bells and clocks in 1865, expenditures $1224 30, and of committee nothing; last year, expenditures $2876 19 and of committee $135 55. Boston Harbor in 1865, $11,640 expenditures, $147 30 for committee; last year $5371 54 expenditures, and of committee $772 20. Fire alarms in 1865, $17,070 expenditures, and of committee $577 46; last year, $42,763, and of committee $1277 21. Health Department in 1865, $187,711 for external department, and $292 for committee; last year $338,798 06 for both departments, and for committee $654 40. Fire Department in 1865, $134,847 expenditures, and $721 40 for committee; last year $399 249, and for committee $2591 22. Streets in 1865 $134,844 expenditures, and $78 95 for committee; last year $169,064 expenditures, and $1290 for committee.

One reason for the decreased expense of committees in the years 1864-1866 was the adoption of an order that there should be no expenditure for intoxicating liquors. This was adhered to, except in some cases in which gentlemen from abroad were present, and it was thought necessary to have liquors. It would be seen that there was quite a difference between the year 1865 and the past year. Yet it was true the expenditures last year were less than in several previous years, and the expenditures had been going on in a descending scale. Last year the decrease had been at a greater rate, and this year he hoped it would be more so. He was not in favor however, of the order of Alderman Hulbert, but preferred that of Alderman Clark.

He believed it would be disgraceful to pass the order of Alderman Hulbert, for it should be left to the honor, integrity and good sense of the chairmen of committees of the City Council. They were told that gentlemen sometimes dined at the expense of the city without asking the consent of the Chairman of the Board. There are times when it is necessary to take some refreshment while in the discharge of duties on committee. Although not legal, he did so, and he was not ashamed of it. On Thursday evening last, the Committee on Accounts were engaged in the examination of millions of dollars in bills, and it was necessary to go through with it to bring it before the Common Council. There were cases of real necessity, and no man of common sense would object to their taking of refreshments in such cases.

Such expenditures should be made with reasonable limits, and not as in some cases, where the bills were so large that the chairman was ashamed of it and footed the bill himself. He could see no reason in a committee's coming together to nominate a City Messenger and expending $40 in doing so. One reason for an increase of the expenditures of the Committee on Streets was in the increase of the committee from three to eight, and there was a proposition before the Legislature to make the Committee on Sewers a joint committee. He hoped they would act this year to the satisfaction of those who put them there, without hope or fear as to their reelection, but in such a manner as to merit the gratitude of their fellow citizens.

Alderman Clark said he was happy to hear they were on the road to progress. The Alderman in his comparisons had gone back to when the city was a country village. He trusted the Board would do their duty, regardless of the question of reelection, and that no member would be frightened, whether he was in office one or five years. Honestly and fearlessly they should do their duty, and he was willing not to partake of a particle of anything at the city expense, and would sign an agreement to that effect. The public would not object to the cost of refreshments if conscientiously done as they would do in their own business. In regard to the expense of Committees on Armories and on Fire Department, the late fire had doubled the labors on both. So it was also in regard to the Committee on Streets.

In relation to the refreshments to the Committee on Accounts, referred to, if any objection was made, he would pay his proportion. On Friday last, he went without anything to eat from seven o'clock in the morning to six o'clock in the evening, when four of a committee had a dinner at an expense of $2 80. If all members of committees would dine in that proportion, no one would object, and it could be done. The chairman of a committee was responsible, and if the Auditor should bring the names before the public once a month, it would be the safest check against the spending of money.

Alderman Sayward said he supposed he was associated with a body of gentlemen, but it appeared the charges of extravagance were aimed at the Common Council, and not upon this Board. It may be that the members of the other branch are as dignified as those of this Board. He did not come to this Board for dinners, and believed it was but boy's play to talk about bread and cheese. He hoped, therefore, that the order for indefinite postponement would prevail.

Alderman Quincy said that although at first he was in favor of the order of Alderman Hulbert, he was now in favor of that of Alderman Clark, in view of the legal objections. With regard to the objectionable supposition complained of, made by him, he did not think it would ever happen, but in view of the figures which had been given, he would join in an attempt now to remedy the abuses complained of.

Alderman Gaffield said he did not intend to injure the feelings of any one, in giving the figures which he had.

The question was taken and the motion to indefinitely postpone was declared to be lost.

Alderman Sayward asked for the yeas and nays, but the Chair declared it to be too late.

Alderman Hulbert wished to have the question taken on his order, and not on that of the order of Alderman Clark as an amendment to his.

Alderman Clark moved his order as a substitute for the original order.

Alderman Sayward objected to the substitute, that if committees were instituted as they were last year, there were those who talked the most who were the most ready to eat.

Alderman Hulbert was convinced that his order would put the question on the best foundation, in a manly, fair and straight manner, by which the trouble would be ended. By going straight, they would save thousands of dollars to the city. He would plead for manliness, and for expenditures, just as merchants would do in their own business.

Alderman Clark hoped for the passage of his order, for he did not believe we should go in the wicked ways of New York. He believed in the good sense of the people, that they would not allow the City Government to become corrupt. As a matter of economy, he objected to paying salaries, or anything like salaries. If salaries were to be paid, they would not be less than $5000 to $10,000, at least, if the abilities of the Alderman were to be taken into account. He should not want less than $5000 to be paid for services according to the labor performed. As $5000 it would give $60,000 for the Board of Aldermen, and at $1000 for the members of the Council, it would cost $64,000. As an economical measure, it would be best to let it drop, and rest themselves on their manhood and integrity.

Alderman Sayward said he was glad the Alderman had got back to manhood on the question, and he hoped that the order would be withdrawn.

Alderman Brown moved that the order be laid over.

Alderman Clark thought it would not be well to postpone the taking of the question, when they were so well prepared to act upon it.

Alderman Brown said his reason for making the motion was on account of so many opinions being expressed, but he would withdraw the motion.

Alderman Power hoped the order would be laid over, for it was very important, and to pass it in too much haste it would do more injury than good. The matter was all in the hands of gentlemen of the City Council, who could remedy it. The members of the Common Council could not enter into extravagant feasts at the expense of the city if the Aldermen said no, for it was in their hands and they governed it. He was not ashamed to take a dinner at the expense of the city when necessary, but hoped the order would be laid over, and some plan be devised by which to remedy the evil of extravagance complained of.

Alderman Clark hoped the order would not go over, for they had devoted the entire evening to its discussion, and there could be no harm in its adoption. It was a matter between the public and themselves.

Alderman Gaffield said they were all agreed on one thing—of falling back on their own manhood. On coming to the City Council he felt as Alderman Hulbert did, but he had come to believe that the public would justify the expenditure for refreshments to a proper amount.

Alderman Quiney said it was true they had the matter in their own hands, but it was very pleasant to have public opinion come to their assistance. He would, however, favor the measure of reform any way.

The question was taken on the substitute of Alderman Clark, which was carried, by a vote of 11 to 1, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Quiney, Stebbins.
Nay—Sayward.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR THE CITY HOSPITAL.

A request was received from the Trustees of the City Hospital, for an additional appropriation, as follows:

Gentlemen—The Trustees of the City Hospital have to inform you that the probable expenditures of this institution will exceed the appropriations made for the current year by the sum of about eleven thousand five hundred dollars, and we respectfully ask you for a further appropriation of that amount.

This deficiency is caused chiefly by the expenditures for the maintenance of the Smallpox Hospital on Albany street, amounting to $10,352 38, which were not contemplated when the original appropriations were asked for.

Respectfully submitted,

E. C. DREW, President.

Referred to Committee on Finance.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR PRINTING.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Printing, made a request for an additional appropriation of five thousand dollars, for the estimated expenses of the remainder of the financial year chargeable to the general printing account. The committee present the following statement from the Superintendent of Printing:

To the Committee on Printing—I have been notified by the Auditor of Accounts that the balance of the General Printing appropriation will be reduced to $371 51, after payment of the February draft, requiring an additional appropriation for the two subsequent monthly payments.

The appropriation for the current year was $30,000, being $5000 less than the preceding year. The expenditures from this appropriation have been as follows, according to a statement from the Auditor's office:

Printing, etc., by City Printers	$12,163 19
Printing stock	3,475 87
Stationery	2,970 30
City Bonds	4,390 00
Transcript reports, City Council	3,863 18
Salary Superintendent of Printing	2,083 33
Directories	300 00
Military passes to Burnt District	88 47
Advertising	11 75
Other expenses	282 40
	$29,628 49
Balance	371 51

Appropriation

$30,000 00

This appropriation supplies printing and stationery for the City Council, City Clerk, Assessors, Treasurer, Auditor, Solicitor, and offices having no other appropriation; also the Transcript reports, city bonds, etc.

The present appropriation would probably have sufficed, but for the unusually heavy expenditure for city bonds, amounting to $4390, the preceding year being $190.

There has been a general increase in the amount of work for this account, partly indicated by the increased number of public documents, being one hundred and thirty-four for 1872, and but one hundred and four for 1871. These documents, including the several department reports, are charged to this account, excepting only surplus copies over the usual document edition, that may be required by the departments.

The general printing account, also, carries a considerable amount of stock for the several departments, from its date of purchase to its date of charging to the several department appropriations. The monthly balances of stock on hand vary from $1000 to $2000; the amount Jan. 1, 1873, being $1164.

It is estimated that the amount required for the remainder of the financial year will be $5000, for printing, stock, stationery, reports of City Council, salary, and other expenses.

GEORGE COOLIDGE,

Superintendent of Printing.

Referred to the Committee on Finance.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

SCHOOL MODELS AT VIENNA.

Alderman Gaffield offered the following order:
Ordered, That the Board of School Committee be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $8000 for the purpose of exhibiting the system of public school education of this city at the Vienna Exposition, to take place in May next; said sum to be charged to appropriation for School Committee.

Alderman Gaffield explained as the plan proposed to occupy a small building of one room, with the usual paraphernalia of desks, furniture, text and reference books, with drawings and photographs of schoolhouses. The General Government would send a person to exhibit it, and the sum named would be the first cost. The furniture would probably sell at the cost in this country. The measure was not strictly legal, yet the citizens would like to have it carried out in stretching a point. He had obtained a note from Mr. Stackpole, stating as the opinion of the City Solicitor, that it was not legal.

Alderman Power said they had spent a greater part of the afternoon in a discussion of the subject of economy. This question was strictly an illegal one, but if the school system of Boston was a defective one, he would be willing to expend money for the purpose of improving it. There was no need of this expenditure, and if it was a matter of pride in relation to our schools, the United States Government should pay the bills. The expense would be about as much as was spent for junketing last year.

Alderman Brown said he had the assurance that any furniture needed would be furnished free of cost.

Alderman Power said that would not alter the case, for the committee came here for a certain amount to be appropriated.

Alderman Hulbert stated that Alderman Gaffield spoke to him about this matter before the meeting of the Board, and he replied that he would think of it. On consulting the City Solicitor, he was assured it was not legal. They were under solemn bonds and rules, as trustees are, and their action must be limited. He appreciated the motives for the proposed action, but could not vote for it.

As representatives of the Government, burdened with expenses, they could not expend a dollar which the exigencies or wants of the city do not require. The citizens were not aware of the amount of expenditures which would be required the present year, when a million of dollars did not look larger than a button. It was neither lawful nor expedient to make this expenditure, and while he should be glad to have our school system represented, unless citizens put their hands into their private purses he could not see how it could be done.

Alderman Gibson said he fully indorsed the views of the Alderman.

Alderman Gaffield said the report was authorized before the opinion of the City Solicitor was obtained, and as the exhibition was one to which all nations were expected to contribute, it was desirable that they should respond, inasmuch as in 1876 a centennial exhibition would be held in this country, by which something might be gained to our educational systems, if we respond to this.

Alderman Power said the little education he had was obtained in the Boston schools, and while he had as much pride in the schools as any one, he did not think we should be justified in this expenditure of money. If the City Solicitor's advice was worth anything, we had no right to pass an order in which the expenditure was so clearly illegal as in this one.

Alderman Stebbins asked the Chair to rule that the order was not properly before the Board, not being legal.

The Chair ruled that the order lies over.

Alderman Stebbins said his request was that the order be ruled out, not being legal.

The Chair did not so understand the request, for, on the same ground, he might have ruled out the order to open the library on Sundays.

The order was laid over.

Alderman Quincy offered the following order:

Ordered, That the City Messenger be authorized to procure official badges of the pattern adopted by the last Board of Aldermen for such members of the present Board as are not provided therewith, at an expense not exceeding three dollars per badge.

Alderman Hulbert wished to know the use of such badges.

Alderman Clark stated that the Board of Aldermen did not have any badges last year, until the fire, and it was found necessary to have them in order to the proper discharge of their duties in getting access to the burnt district.

Alderman Quincy believed it to be desirable to have some distinctive badge by which they might at all times discharge their duties.

Alderman Sayward suggested that the furnishing of badges was illegal, and every member should get his own and pay for it.

An amendment was accepted to add the words "to be paid for by such members," and the order was passed.

Alderman Clark rose to a personal explanation in relation to a paragraph published in the Commonwealth alleging that a greater price was paid for the land for the Swett-street hospital than it was offered for to an individual previously, the price paid being $75,000, while $40,000 was the price at which it was offered.

As evidence on that point he wished to read the following letter:

Boston, Feb. 3, 1873.

Dear Sir—An article in the Commonwealth, January 25, conveys a false impression as to the land sold for a smallpox hospital on Swett street, as appears by the books of the corporation. As treasurer of the Roxbury Central Wharf Company, I sold that land to the city for $75,000, allowing no one any commission or brokerage, and receiving the whole sum for the benefit of the corporation. I never bonded or offered to bond the land for $40,000, or for any other sum, nor did I ever offer it for sale or fix a price for it until I sold it to the city of Boston. I would further add, that $75,000 is the lowest sum for which I would sell the above lot under any circumstances.

A. D. WILLIAMS.

J. T. Clark, Esq., Alderman.

Alderman Clark stated further that the land in question was worth $1 per foot, and the company sold it to the city only in the expectation that thereby they would secure the extension of Swett street, and increase the value of their remaining land.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

FEBRUARY 6, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, at 7½ o'clock, Edward O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The annual report of the Commissioners on Bridges between Boston and Cambridge, the quarterly reports of the Overseers of the Poor and of the City Registrar, the communication relative to the appointment of members of the Common Council as special police officers without pay, and the petition of the Trustees of the Prince Library, were severally ordered to be placed on file.

The petitions of John H. Roberts, Hannah Sullivan, Philp McDonough, Robert Irwin, M. C. Murray, Joseph K. and Mary J. Melcher, Winchester & Hight, and of Washington Hook & Ladder Company No. 4, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The following references were concurred in:

References to the Committee on Finance of

1. A request for an additional appropriation of $11,500 for the City Hospital. (Printed City Doc. No. 19, 1873.)

2. A request for an additional appropriation of $5000, for General Printing. (Printed City Doc. No. 22, 1873.)

The following order was passed, in concurrence:

Report in favor of the passage of the order authorizing a loan of $2,000,000 to be added to the Burnt District Loan, and passage of said order.

The following orders were severally read once:

Order that $1100, to pay for twenty-five portable fire extinguishers, to replace those destroyed by fire November 9, 1872, be appropriated.

Order to pay James Munroe, Assistant Engineer of the Fire Department, $31 50, for personal services, provided the bill be approved in the usual manner.

The rules in relation to the order of business were suspended, for the purpose of taking up the unfinished business.

OPENING OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY ON SUNDAYS.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the report in favor of the order for the opening of the reading rooms of the Public Library from 2 to 9 P. M. on Sundays, and the dissent of Charles Hulbert therefrom, was considered.

Mr. Cudworth of Ward 11, said he had asked for the postponement of the order for the purpose of further considering it, and on that consideration he was opposed to its passage. There may be many things in favor of its adoption, and many against it. There could not be many persons who could get much good from visiting the library on Sunday, and the probabilities were that it would simply be a place of resort. In that respect the opening of the library would be very exceptionable, affording a place only for those who are wandering about the streets, and it would not add to the good order or good habits of the city. That would be one reason why he should object to opening the library on Sunday.

Objection would be made by him also from conscientious scruples. There being six days in the week for the purpose of taking books from the library, it would be more creditable to the city to have the library closed on one day, rather than have a place for persons to loiter away their time and be in the way. They had been told by the City Solicitor that it would be illegal, and that they had no right to open the library on Sundays. If they employ a man to tell them what is legal, and one who knows what is the law, they should be willing to take his advice in the matter, and the library should not be open to anybody. They should respect the law and not trample it down, and for these reasons it was clear to him that it was his duty to vote against the order.

The question was taken and the order was passed, by a vote of 47 yeas, 10 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Abbott, Adams, Anderson, Barnes, Bicknell, Blackmar, Brackett, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Dacey, Darrow, Davis, Dean, Denny, N. Doherty, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hall, Harrington, Holmes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Loring, Madden, Marston, Martin, McCue, McKenney, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Risteen, Shaw, Thacher, Train, Upham, Warren, Wells, West, Whiston, Woods, Woodward.

Nays—Bowles, Cudworth, Hine, Morse, Page, Pease, Prescott, Tower, Weston, Wilbur.

Mr. Flynn moved a reconsideration of the vote, which was lost.

The following orders were severally read the second time and passed:

Order that $1940 be appropriated to pay the bill of steaming Louis Osborn, for services at the fire of November 9 and 10, and during the following week.

Order that the bill of S. B. Heustis, of $17, for extra service as a police officer, be allowed for payment, provided it be approved in the usual manner.

EXPENDITURES FOR REFRESHMENTS.

The order for the Auditor to submit a monthly statement of the expenditures on account of refreshments for standing or special committees of the City Council, or either branch, was taken up.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 offered the following order as a substitute for the order of the Board of Aldermen:

Ordered, That from and after this date, no committee shall approve, nor shall the Auditor audit, nor shall the Treasurer pay any bill contracted by any committee of the City Council, or of either branch or any member thereof, or any bill contracted by any member of the City Council for refreshments of any name or nature, or for carriage hire, unless said bill is contracted under a special vote of the City Council passed prior to contracting the same.

The yeas and nays were ordered on the final passage of the order.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 rose to a personal explanation. According to the published reports of the Board of Aldermen, one of the Aldermen stated that the committee to nominate a candidate for City Messenger met and had a dinner at an expense of $41. The statement was false in every particular, as the committee were together but three minutes, when a nomination was made unanimously and the committee dispersed.

Mr. West of Ward 16 believed the gentleman was mistaken as to the reference to the committee of the present year, and thought the statement had reference to a previous committee.

Mr. Pease replied that no year was mentioned, but as it was published, and generally believed, the reference was to the report of the committee of the present year. He believed the report of the doings of the Board would bear out his idea.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he could not vote for the substitute, and he did not know whether the mover believed it would be adopted. If it should be, it would seriously interfere with the public business, for in the case of carriage hire, it could not be known when carriages would be needed so that they could be provided at a meeting of the Council prior to their being wanted. Suppose that carriages might be needed to go to a distant part of the city, a delay must occur in going, or the members of the committee go on foot, for they could not reach all points by cars.

The adoption of such an order might do for tactics, but he thought it undesirable. The order of the Board of Aldermen must have had in view one of two things—either that the Auditor would be required to report the name of the chairman of the committee, or in his absence that of the senior member of the committee, or the names of every member who took part in the dinner. If it required only that the chairman's name be given it was well enough, but if it was designed that every member of the committee who goes to the dinner should be served up for the instruction of the public, it was objectionable.

The hardest workers were not always the largest eaters, and there was no reason why members of the City Council, when on public duties, should not dine at the expense of the city. If the expense was to be incurred, and the chairman of the committee approve of it, he had no objection; and if any one wished to see how many dined, they could find out, by going to a little book, which would show it. If the order of the gentleman was to be adopted, so much as related to carriage hire should be cut off, as a proper expenditure. If it was intended to make the Board of Aldermen eat their own words, he was opposed to it, and did not believe in it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said he was in favor of the substitute, for one Alderman said the order was passed there to keep the Common Council in check. As far as he was concerned, he was ready to go to the park, or anywhere else outside of the city, without an expense for carriage hire. The members of the Board have passes, and in that respect have an advantage over members of the Council. As far as eating and drinking was concerned, he could live one year without it, and the members of the Council should be willing to go with him one year. On the report of the proceedings of the Board, the newspapers say the Board have got the Council. He would pass the substitute, and see whether the Board could live as long as we can.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said he offered the order in good faith and he wished the Board of Aldermen to be consistent. The members of the Board dined before their meeting, and twenty minutes after the adjournment five out of six dined at Parker's at the expense of the city.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said he was inclined to vote for the substitute, because after its adoption they could strike out the provision relating to carriage hire. He did not like the order of the Board of Aldermen, believed it to be an undignified procedure, and should regret to belong to a body of full-grown men who seek to hold up members of the City Council to ridicule. It might be well enough in schoolboys, to induce them to improve in manners and conduct, but not in full-grown men, to report their misdoings.

If it was designed for a criticism of their fellows to hold them in check, it was undignified. He did not believe in bantering with the other branch, but believed they might adopt the substitute with the provision relating to carriage hire struck out. Public business could not well be transacted without carriage hire. They all knew that members of the Board of Aldermen must sacrifice thousands of dollars a year in time spent in the public service, and the expenditure for carriage hire would be but a trifling amount. He was willing to vote for the substitute and give the order a fair trial.

Mr. Perkins said he understood the Auditor had given as his construction of the order that the name of every member of a committee who took part in a dinner should be published, and if so he should vote for the substitute, to be amended by striking out the provision relating to carriage hire.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 inquired how it was proposed to amend the order.

Mr. Dean replied that the order forbids the furnishing of refreshments at the expense of the city, also the furnishing of carriages. The latter provision was very important, because business could not be transacted without the use of carriages. The Paving Committee perhaps every day may be required to go to distant parts of the city, and they could not get along without carriage hire. He proposed to strike out the provision relating to carriage hire.

Mr. Denny said he was not tender-footed in the matter, and believed the city should pay for carriage hire, and if business was to be transacted the city should also pay for eating, when necessary. Neither would the citizens object to anything reasonable being expended for carriage hire or refreshments. The Board of Aldermen no doubt passed its order in good faith, and as there were forty committees, thirty-three of which were joint, he supposed the chairman of each would indorse all orders for carriages and refreshments and the responsibility for such expenditures would rest on the Aldermen. Between the two the Board of Aldermen were the greatest eaters, and any stigma there might be would fall on them.

It could not be expected by the gentleman from Ward 7 that his substitute would pass the other branch, and as the United States Senate recently passed an act to abolish the franking privilege in the belief that the House would kill it, but they were taken at their own action, much to the satisfaction of the people, so as the Board of Aldermen had passed the order under consideration, he was in favor of passing it. In his own case, he would not hesitate to assume the responsibility of ordering carriages or refreshments when necessary, not fearing that public opinion would be against him in the slightest degree.

Mr. Dean moved to amend the substitute by striking out so much as referred to carriage hire.

Mr. Wells said he did not know why they should strike out carriage hire. There were only a certain few who had the benefit of carriage hire. The Council were of no more consequence than the fifth wheel of a coach after the appropriations were made.

Mr. Perkins rose to a question of order in the reflections upon the Council.

Mr. Wells said he did not believe in members of the Council having carriage hire, and in seven years in the Council he never rode twenty times at the city's expense. The adoption of the substitute was the proper method of meeting the question.

Mr. Perkins stated in illustration as a good reason why the amendment should prevail, that the Committee on Legislative Business, wishing the Committee of the Legislature to visit the Lunatic Hospital at South Boston, took them there in carriages, where they had an opportunity to see the necessity for a new hospital. With the business which that committee had before them, had they not been taken there it is not likely they would have got them there. The result was very satisfactory, and he should consider the expense a good investment.

Mr. Dean said he agreed mainly with the gentleman from Ward 9, and that the question would resolve itself finally into a passage of the order of the Board. The citizens would not object to reasonable expense for refreshments, he was convinced; but he was willing to give the order a fair trial, with the carriage hire out of the question.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 said that the upper branch, in their action, had assumed that the City Council had been expensive and extravagant, while there was no more economical city than the city of Boston. It was not right that the impression should go abroad that the Government was extravagant and wasteful. The whole expense last year for junketing, and that was a wrong term, for much of it was for necessary items of a different character, would not exceed $12,000. Some gentlemen give a great portion of their time to the benefit of the city; sometimes sit on committees from two to twelve o'clock, and often to five, six or seven o'clock in the evening, away from their places of business and their homes, with no time to go to dinner or supper. In such cases it was proper and right that they should obtain refreshments at the expense of the city, and by our sanction.

There was no member of the City Council who was guilty of extravagance last year, for some years the expenses had been $30,000, and these had been reduced down to $12,000. This was not a wide range for so many members of the Government. Yet it might be well to pass the order and place the responsibility where it belongs, on the Board of Aldermen. The Council should stand on its dignity and make a clean showing in the matter.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said he agreed with the gentlemen from Wards 9 and 12 generally in their views. There were some needs of reform, but they should be governed by a sense of propriety. He should prefer the substitute to the original order, but did not like either. The order of the other branch appeared like that of the whipping of a school boy for tricks on the master, and he had hoped that something would be adopted more satisfactory. The expenditure of $12,000 last year was but fifty cents a day for each of them, and that was making the members a cheap lot. If they were not worth that, they had better get rid of them, and the better it would be for them and for the city.

The question was taken on the amendment of Mr. Dean, to strike out carriage hire, which was lost, 25 to 31, when the substitute was adopted, by a vote of 35 to 9.

As adopted, the substitute was passed, by a vote of 44 yeas to 15 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Abbott, Adams, Anderson, Barnes, Blackman, Bleiler, Brackett, Brennan, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Dacey, Davis, N. Doherty, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Loring, Madden, Marston, Martin, Morse, Page, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Thacher, Train, Upham, Warren, Wells, West, Whiston, Woods, Woodward.

Nays—Bicknell, Bowles, Burditt, Darrow, Dean, Denny, Holmes, Lamb, McCue, McKenney, Pease, Perkins, Tower, Weston, Wilbur.

Mr. Flynn moved a reconsideration of the vote, which was lost.

Mr. Powers of Ward 4 inquired if Mr. Galvin, the nominee of the committee, was a resident of this city.

The Chair replied that he was unable to state.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 4 said Mr. Galvin voted in Ward 4 at the last election.

The result of the ballot was declared to be as follows:

CITY SOLICITOR.

Whole number of votes 50, 25 of which were for John P. Healy, and 25 for Oliver Stevens, and there was no choice.

Mr. Perkins said it should be the object of the Council to get the best man, and as absent members should be consulted, although they should have been here, and as it was late, he moved that the election of City Solicitor be postponed one week.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 said the same reason might have been given for postponing other elections, and it might happen that not so many members would be present next Thursday night.

Mr. Perkins said the office was the most important one in the city, and they should hesitate long before turning out the present City Solicitor.

The motion to postpone was lost, by a vote of 17 to 23.

The second ballot resulted the same as the first, in 25 votes for each candidate.

The third ballot resulted in the choice of Mr. Healy by a vote of 28 to 23 for Oliver Stevens.

On motion of Mr. Perkins, the remaining elections were postponed to the next meeting of the Council, and the City Messenger was authorized to have the names of candidates for Superintendents of Bridges printed on one ballot.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Committee on Elections, to whom was referred the petition of William M. Flanders and others, representing that George A. Shaw was not a resident of Ward 5 at the date of the last municipal election, and that the fact of his non-residence was publicly known to the voters of said ward who voted for him at said election, having notified, met and heard the parties, with their evidence and the arguments of their respective counsel, submitted the following report:

The ground of the petitioners' objection to Mr. Shaw's occupying a seat in the Council is, that he was not, when elected, an "inhabitant" of Ward 5, as required by the city charter, section twenty.

On this question witnesses were brought forward on behalf of the petitioners and Mr. Shaw, and from their testimony it appears as follows:

In 1866 Mr. Shaw's domicile was in the United States Hotel, in Ward 5. This was proved and was not disputed.

In the autumn of 1866, or early in 1867, Mr. Shaw removed with his family, consisting of his wife, his son and daughter, to a house in Marion street, in Brookline.

It was not clearly shown to whom this house belonged, but it appeared to have stood in the name of Mr. Shaw's wife.

From the time of said removal Mr. Shaw continued to live in Marion street with his family until November, 1872.

In November, 1872, Mr. Shaw removed from Brookline. He afterwards appears boarding in Tremont street, in Ward 10 or 11. The house in Marion street was sold.

Since 1868 Mr. Shaw has returned annually to the hotel, and has there passed the night of April 30 and the day of May 1, being accompanied in 1870, 1871 and 1872 by his wife.

No room appears to have been kept exclusively for him in the above-named hotel since his removal to Brookline.

These are the facts relating to Mr. Shaw's actual place of residence since his removal from Ward 5 in 1866 or 1867.

The evidence of Mr. Shaw's intentions, so far as the same affect the question of domicile, is as follows:

Mr. Shaw has continuously, since his removal from Ward 5, declared that he was an "inhabitant of," or that his "residence" was in Ward 5, and that he intended to continue an inhabitant or resident of said ward.

And he has accordingly been assessed as a resident in Ward 5, from 1858 to 1873 inclusive, for tax on poll and personal property.

One witness says that Mr. Shaw avowed to him his intention to return to reside in Ward 5.

There was evidence to show that Mr. Shaw removed to Brookline to take care of his wife's father and mother, the former of whom was an old man and in ill health.

Mr. Shaw has voted in Ward 5 with few exceptions, and taken part in the municipal affairs of the ward, and he has been on the register of voters in Boston for the last ten years.

Mr. Shaw has never voted in Brookline nor taken part in municipal affairs there, but has disclaimed all right so to do, on the ground that he was an inhabitant of Boston, and he has paid no poll nor personal-property tax in Brookline.

Since 1866, Mr. Shaw has held office as an inhabitant of Ward 5, having acted as Warden pro tem., in June, 1869, and as Representative to the General Court in 1872. In 1869 he was appointed a commissioner on the part of Boston on the annexation of Dorchester, by Mayor Shurtleff.

When elected a director of the Western Railway on the part of the State, in 1867, the ballots were printed "George A. Shaw of Brookline," as appears by the journal of the House, March 6, 1867. But in the Manual of the Legislature published in 1868, he is entered as George A. Shaw of Boston. It in no way appears that the above-mentioned ballots were printed by Mr. Shaw or under his direction, or that he authorized the said descriptive words, "of Brookline."

These are the facts proved in the case.

Certain questions of law met the committee on the threshold, and accordingly a letter was addressed to the City Solicitor, who returned the following reply:

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE,

2 PEMBERTON SQUARE, BOSTON, Feb. 4, 1873. }

Sir—I have considered the questions you proposed to me, and my answers to them are as follows:

Question 1—If Mr. Shaw had a legal domicile in Ward 5, in Boston, in 1866, and in that year removed himself and his family to Brookline, and there remained until November, 1872, and since 1866 had no house, room, or other place of actual abode in Ward 5, was his domicile in Boston necessarily lost?

Answer—Not necessarily.

Question 2—If, in the case above stated, Mr. Shaw had passed yearly the nights of April 30 and May 1 in Ward 5, would that fact have made his domicile necessarily in Ward 5?

Answer—No. I regard the passing of these nights in Ward 5 as of no significance whatever. He might as well have selected any other two nights for the purpose, or passed no nights in that ward.

Question 3—If Mr. Shaw were living, as first above stated, in Brookline, would a declared intention to continue an inhabitant or resident of Ward 5 necessarily be equivalent to a declared intention to return to reside in Ward 5?

Answer—Not necessarily. If, however, he understood the law, he could not suppose that his residence could be retained in Ward 5, unless his intention was to return there.

Question 4—If Mr. Shaw went to Brookline, as above stated, and remained there for any length of time, with no definite intention to return to reside in Ward 5, and with no intention to leave Brookline at any definite time, would his domicile be in Boston, or would it be in Brookline?

Answer—In Brookline.

I am, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

J. P. HEALY.

E. J. Holmes, Esq.

It is an axiom of the law of domicile that an old domicile is retained until a new one is acquired.

And that to acquire a new domicile there must be the union of actual residence with the intent to have a domicile at such place of residence; or actual residence, with no definite intention of returning to the old place of domicile, and no intention to leave such place of residence at any particular time.

In the opinion of the committee, then, the case is as follows:

Mr. Shaw was domiciled in Ward 5 in 1866, and at the end of that year moved with his family from Ward 5 to Brookline, where he remained until November, 1872.

In November, 1872, Mr. Shaw moved into Ward 10 in Boston, and has since remained there up to the present time.

Mr. Shaw has, from 1866 up to the present time, always claimed and exercised the rights, and has been subject to the duties and burdens, of an inhabitant in Ward 5; and he has represented the ward in different capacities since his removal to Brookline in 1866. As to Mr. Shaw's intentions, as effecting his domicile, Mr. Shaw has always professed an intention to continue an "inhabitant" or "resident" in Ward 5, and has accompanied his declarations with acts he deemed necessary to give such declarations validity for the purpose of retaining his domicile; viz., passing the night of April 30 in Ward 5 annually.

The committee are aware that declaring an intention to continue an inhabitant of Ward 5, and an intention to return to reside in Ward 5, are not necessarily the same thing.

Mr. Shaw might have thought that all that was necessary to do to retain his domicile in Ward 5, was to pass the night of April 30 in the Ward and pay his taxes there; and thinking so, might have said, "I will do these things, and can and will thereby retain my domicile in Ward 5, although I never intend to return to reside in Ward 5." Having done such acts he might say, "I am an inhabitant of Ward 5," when in fact he was mistaken and was not.

If this had been the state of the case, Mr. Shaw might have lost his domicile in Ward 5.

The committee have given this view its full weight, but do not think the case was as last supposed.

There is no testimony to show that Mr. Shaw has not always had a definite and clearly defined intention to return to reside in Ward 5, or an intention to return to reside there at a definite time.

The testimony of Mr. Homer is that Mr. Shaw has distinctly declared such an intention.

Opposed to this and the other evidence in support of Mr. Shaw's intention to return to reside in Ward 5, is the fact that he has not returned to reside in that Ward. The committee are of opinion that this fact is not sufficient to prove an intention in Mr. Shaw not to return to reside in Ward 5.

See Hallet vs. Basset, 100 Mass. 167; Bremer vs. Bremer, 1 Deane, 192; Colleston vs. Hailey, 6 Gray, 517.

The presumption is that Mr. Shaw's domicile is in Ward 5 in the absence of evidence to the contrary.

The committee therefore report, that, in their opinion, George A. Shaw was an inhabitant of Ward 5 at the date of the last municipal election, and is entitled to a seat in this Council as a member from Ward 5.

The committee refer, on the points made in their report, to the various matters of testimony fully reported, making eighty-two printed pages.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the report was laid over for consideration at the next meeting of the Council.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9, from the Committee on Health, on the petition of C. Erving Fisher, Assistant Port Physician, reported an order to pay Dr. Fisher $700 as compensation for extra services from 1st September, 1872 to 1st January, 1873.

The report was accepted and the order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Denny of Ward 9—

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Affairs be requested to procure such a change in the city charter as to provide that the erection and control of stables shall be under the charge of the City Council instead of the Board of Aldermen.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, an order was read once, that the Mayor be requested to petition the Legislature for authority to the city to take the whole or part of the land bounded by Northampton, Eustis, Albany and Washington streets.

On motion of Mr. Wells of Ward 3, an order was passed to procure suitable badges for the Messenger, Assistant Messenger and other officers of the City Government.

SAFETY OF THEATRES FROM FIRE.

The following communication was received from David Chamberlin, Inspector of Buildings:

FEBRUARY 10, 1873.

To the Honorable the City Council:

Gentlemen—Pursuant to your request, I have personally examined the several theatres in this city, "to ascertain whether sufficient precautions are taken in the preparation of the scenery and other theatrical effects, and what legislation, if any, is necessary for the public safety," and respectfully present the following report:

The places included in the above order comprise the Boston and Globe theatres, the Boston Museum and the Howard Athenæum. The managers of each of these places afforded every facility to obtain the necessary information, and I am indebted to them for their courtesy and willingness to afford any information bearing on the subject.

I am informed by each of them that the canvass used for the scenery is prepared in a solution of alum; the paint is laid on with glue sizing, fixing a coating which will not readily ignite, so that when the scenery is brought into contact with flame, as I know from practical test on the premises, it will not blaze, but simply smoulders and smokes, thereby giving the alarm, and gradually dies out.

In the Boston and Globe theatres and the Museum excellent arrangements are made for the prevention and extinguishment of fires. The gas jets are protected by wire screens and globes and tin shields, and hose and pipes connected with the Cochituate water pipes are kept on the stage ready for immediate use. At the Howard Athenæum this last precaution is not taken, the reason given being that the supply pipe is not of sufficient size to admit of hose being used.

At all the theatres fire extinguishers are kept ready for immediate use in different parts of the building. Great care is taken to keep everything of a combustible nature away from all source of danger, and watchmen are kept on duty during the night.

In view of the care shown and the present safe condition of the several theatres, I see no reason to recommend any additional legislation, but as the managers have expressed their desire to do anything reasonable that will add to the safety of their buildings, I shall consider it my duty, should circumstances require it, to make from time to time such suggestions as may appear desirable.

Ordered to be sent down.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COCHITUATE WATER BOARD.

The annual report of the Cochituate Water Board for the year ending April 30, 1872, was laid before the Board in print, comprising the reports of the Clerk of the Board, City Engineer, Water Registrar, the Superintendents of the Eastern and Western divisions, and the engineer especially employed by this board upon the question of new supply, to which they would refer the City Council for detailed statements of the progress and condition of the water works during the year.

The Board say a perusal of these reports will show the works to be in a very satisfactory condition. The average level of the water in the lake for the year ending Jan. 1, 1872, was 6 50-100 feet above the level of the bottom of the conduit, showing an average loss of 4 46-100 feet from the previous year.

The short supply of water for the year ending May 1, 1871, and the remarkable drought during several succeeding months, caused great anxiety, and the means for securing an additional supply engaged the time and attention of the board. In the month of October last, it was determined to employ an engineer to make surveys, prepare plans and estimates for a scheme of works to furnish an additional supply of pure water.

The board were especially fortunate in securing for this work the services of Mr. Joseph P. Davis, an engineer of large experience and acknowledged ability.

Mr. Davis entered upon the discharge of the duties assigned in the month of November, and as the result of his investigations it was decided to petition the Legislature for the passage of an act authorizing the city to take water from Sudbury River. The Legislature gave early attention to the application, passed an act, which received the approval of the Governor on the 8th day of April, 1872. A copy of the act will be found on page 129.

The City Council immediately made an appropriation to enable us to commence the work, and it is confidently expected that within thirty days from this date we may be able to make a temporary connection between Sudbury River and Lake Cochituate, which will relieve our present needs.

After making the connection, the engineer will proceed with the work of surveys for permanent works to connect Sudbury River, not only with Lake Cochituate, but also with Chestnut-Hill Reservoir.

The augmented territory of the city, and the constantly increasing demand for pure water, renders it imperative that a new conduit to convey water from Sudbury River, or Lake Cochituate, to Chestnut-Hill Reservoir, should be constructed at an early day. The capacity of the present (and original) conduit has been nearly, if not fully, reached.

In constructing a new conduit we should recommend that its capacity be much greater than that of the one now in use.

The engineer has made a detailed report of his labors up to this time, which may be found on pages 114 to 122.

The plan showing the proposed temporary connections has been lithographed, and is submitted herewith.

Consumption of Water. The average daily consumption of water for the year ending December 31, 1871, was 13,945,500 gallons; a decrease, as compared with the previous year, of upwards of one million gallons per day.

With a city rapidly increasing in population, and growing daily in business both of mercantile and mechanical character, this statement may seem strange, but it is easily accounted for in the fact that the community were fully aware of the diminished supply of water, and regulated its use accordingly.

The income from water rates has been $788,252 5-100, being an increase over the previous year of $53,461 31-100, and the estimated income for the year ending April 30, 1872, is $800,000.

The expenses have been as follows:

For the current expenses.....	$277,120 11
Interest and premium on the water debt.....	536,876 00
	$813,996 11
The Treasurer has credited the Water Works for the same year.....	$840,707 45
The balance shows an excess of receipts over expenditures of.....	$26,711 34
	<hr/>
Expended on Chestnut Hill reservoir, 26,210 12
Less receipts.....	1,265 37
	$ 29,944 75
Expended in Wards 13, 14, 15, and 16.....	345,372 58
on new Main and Pipes in East Boston.....	37,145 30
Expended on additional Water Supply.....	2,302 81
	$409,765 44
Deduct excess of receipts over expenses this year.....	26,711 34
Cost of works May 1, 1871.....	10,571,896 64
Less amounts transferred May 1, 1871, from water debt to city debt.....	1,352,000 00
Making the net cost to May 1, 1872.....	$9,602,950 71

The amount transferred from the water debt to the city debt, as noted above, materially diminished the sum of interest which has usually been charged annually to the cost of the works, and, as the result of operations, the net gain of receipts over expenditures for the current year has been $26,711 34, which is very satisfactory when compared with former years.

Eastern Division. This division comprises that portion of the works lying east of the Brookline Reservoir, including the distributing pipes and reservoirs in the city, and is under the superintendence of Mr. E. R. Jones.

During the year there has been laid one hundred and thirty-three thousand eight hundred and thirty feet of main pipe, equal to twenty-five and one-third miles (about one mile more than was laid the previous year), making the total amount laid since the commencement of the work two hundred and nineteen and three-fourths miles.

Connected with these mains are two thousand four hundred and thirty-three fire hydrants; of this number nine hundred and seventy-seven are of the Lowry pattern.

The number of service pipes laid during the year has been two thousand two hundred and seventy-five, measuring seventy-three thousand five hundred and fifteen feet, or about fourteen miles.

Total number of service pipes, May 1, thirty-four thousand nine hundred and seventy.

In June last water was turned into the forty-eight-inch pipes, connecting Chestnut-Hill Reservoir with the main lines. A few defects have been discovered in this line of pipe, only one of which was of a serious character. This was, no doubt, attributable to an imperfect casting; fortunately the breakage was early discovered, the water shut off at the Chestnut-Hill gate house, and comparatively small damage sustained.

Pipes are now being laid from Washington street, Ward 16, through Bowdoin and Church streets, to connect with pipes already laid in Hancock street; when completed, this line of pipes will be supplied with water from the standpipe at the Highlands, and thus houses upon and in the immediate vicinity of Telegraph Hill, South Boston, will be connected with the "high service."

During the coming season connections will be made by means of large-sized pipes through which the Mystic water (by the opening of gates in Charlestown) can be carried to the top of Beacon Hill, if any emergency should arise which would render it temporarily desirable.

This arrangement will be beneficial to the city of Charlestown as well as ourselves.

High Service. The high-service supply, which was last year connected with Beacon Hill, proves entirely satisfactory.

A considerable portion of territory in Ward 16 will need to be supplied by a connection with the high service; and at a day not far distant it will be necessary to add to our pumping facilities.

Distributing Reservoirs. The Beacon-Hill Reservoir has not been in use during the past year, as the district which it formerly supplied is now connected with the high service, and the board are of the opinion that its sale can safely be made without detriment to the works.

The East Boston Reservoir is in good condition. The South Boston Reservoir is not in perfect order, and within two or three years will need extensive repairs unless its use should be suspended by the introduction of high service in that locality.

Western Division. This division comprises the lake and all that portion of the works lying between the lake and the gate house at the Brookline Reservoir, and its superintendence is in charge of Mr. Albert Stanwood.

The low stage of the water in the lake revealed the fact that the sea wall adjoining the gate house was starting from its position; a portion of the wall has been rebuilt in a thorough and substantial manner, and the balance will be rebuilt at an early day.

In order to keep up the supply during several months of the past year it has been necessary to pump the water from the lake into the conduit; this has been done by the use of two eighteen-inch pumps driven by two twenty-five horse-power engines.

The usual annual examination of the conduit has been omitted, on account of the scarcity of water.

Chestnut Hill Reservoir. This reservoir has been thoroughly tested during the past year, and fully meets the most sanguine expectations of its projectors; as a storage reservoir it is invaluable. Its cost was large, viz., $2,449,982 07; but we believe it to be one of the most essential features of the water works. The combined capacity of the two basins is 731,472,429 gallons.

Brookline Reservoir. The building and lands about this reservoir are in good order.

The importance of keeping our storage reservoirs full has prevented the cleaning out of the basin, as was contemplated.

Water Registrar's Department. The number of water takers now entered for the year 1872 is 38,716, an increase of 2584 over the previous year.

The number of cases in which the water has been turned off for nonpayment of rates during the year is 936, of this number 734 have been turned on again, and a balance of 202 still remain off.

Meters are attached to a variety of establishments, embracing hotels, railroad stables, manufactories, saloons and buildings occupied by several tenants.

Whole number of meters now in use, 1091.

The number of the various kinds of water fixtures on the premises of water takers January 1, 1872, was 145,786—an increase of 17,552 during the year.

HEARINGS ON ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The order of notice on petition of Alexander Moseley for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler in South street was taken up. No person appearing in relation thereto, the report was recommended.

The order of notice on petition of the Middlesex Railroad Company for a location of tracks on the extension of Washington street to Haymarket square was taken up.

Charles E. Power, president of the Middlesex Railroad Company, appeared in behalf of the petition, and stated the desirableness of the measure, and laid before the Board plans of the proposed tracks. For two reasons the petitions were presented at an early day—to prevent other companies from obtaining the privilege, and to provide that the tracks be laid when the grading and paving of the extended street are done. The difficulties in the travel in Sudbury street were stated, and the probability of the abandonment of the Sudbury-street route was stated.

In further urging the desirableness of the change of route, he said the passengers coming into the city would be better accommodated in being left at the foot of Cornhill, the distance saved to the corporation would amount to 30,000 miles per annum, and the cost $12,000. There was no opposition to the proposed route that he was aware of, and some of the abutters whom he knew made no objection.

The report was recommitted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order to pay Frederick Jones, $3470, for land taken to widen High street.

Order to pay J. M. and F. Jones, $11,663, for land taken to widen High street.

Order to pay Maria B. Frost, $82 88, for land taken to widen Warren street.

Order to pay Edward T. Mason, $90,640, for land taken to extend Washington street.

Order to pay Clarissa B. and Caroline Dorr, $2,344 40, for land taken on River and Washington streets, Ward 16.

Order to pay F. G. Tuckerman, $183,700, for land taken to extend Washington street.

Order to pay William Minot, Jr., trustee, $6825, for land taken to widen Summer street.

Order to pay W. S. Dexter et al., trustees, $10,100, for land taken to widen Washington street.

Order to pay John A. Lowell, trustee, $18,546, for land taken to widen Washington street.

Order to designate the portion of India wharf between Broad street and Atlantic avenue as "India square."

Order authorizing general repairs on the jail during this year, at a cost not exceeding $5000.

Order authorizing general repairs on Court House buildings during this year, at a cost not exceeding $5000.

The order appropriating the sum of $8000 for an exhibition of a model schoolroom and furniture at the proposed Vienna Exposition was further considered.

Alderman Gaffield said that while he believed that our school system, with all its excellences, had many imperfections, and that a comparison of its features with those of other nations such as is contemplated at the Vienna Exposition might enable us to receive as well as to impart much good, it was clear that the object could only be accomplished by National or State legislation and appropriation, or by private subscription. When the matter was introduced to the consideration of the Committee on Public Instruction, the question of the legality of municipal appropriations for this purpose was not raised. When it was afterwards raised and settled by the adverse opinion of the City Solicitor, received a few minutes before the last meeting of the Board, he hesitated about presenting the order at all, and did so only in courtesy to the committee, and to the worthy member of the School Board, who advocated the measure. Although it may be within the memory of many now living, that expenditures, sometimes quite large, have been made for various purposes, with or without the opinion of the Solicitor, which did not come within the strict letter of the law, yet he certainly did not wish, especially in this season of our city's trial and necessarily increasing burdens, to add to the list of wrong or illegal precedents, and he therefore moved the indefinite postponement of the order.

The motion was carried.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The Auditor's monthly exhibit for February was ordered to be placed on file.

The petitions of Jane Logne and of John Keenan were referred, in concurrence.

The following order was passed in concurrence:

Report and order to pay the Assistant Port Physician $700, for extra services last year.

The order for Mayor to petition the General Court for and act to take the low territory, bounded by Northampton, Eustis, Albany and Washington streets, and to raise the grade thereof, was laid on the table.

The order for Legislative Committee to apply to the General Court for an act placing the licensing of stables with the City Council, instead of the Board of Aldermen, being under consideration, Alderman Gaffield expressed the belief that the proposed enlargement of the power of licensing stables would interfere with the business, and moved an indefinite postponement of the order.

Alderman Sayward stated that the order was almost the unanimous desire of the committee, at whose request it was reported; yet he was of the belief that the business could be done with more expedition and at less expense under the present method.

The motion to indefinitely postpone was carried.

ORDERS RELATING TO REFRESHMENTS AND CARRIAGE HIRE.

The order for the Auditor to submit a monthly statement of the expenditures on account of refreshments for standing or special committees of the City Council, or either branch, came up, amended, so as to read as follows:

Ordered, That from and after this date, no committee shall approve, nor shall the Auditor audit, nor shall the Treasurer pay any bill contracted by any committee of the City Council, or of either branch or any member thereof, or any bill contracted by any member of the City Council for refreshments of any name or nature, or for carriage hire, unless said bill is contracted under a special vote passed prior to contracting the same.

Alderman Clark said, I am most happy to concur with the Common Council, and think that the present moment is one which will do us honor and give to the community unusual satisfaction. It is a step in the right direction—one which I have long desired, but did not suppose it could be so successfully carried out at the present time. To the Common Council is due the credit of inaugurating the abolition of the last vestiges of an annual expenditure which a few years ago was a just subject of complaint. The time is favorable and the reasons most urgent for adopting this order. We have no money to waste which can possibly be saved and put to good uses. The large amount which it is absolutely necessary we should spend in street improvements, in increasing and making as efficient as possible the Fire Department, the necessary increase of the police force to an extent that will give full and ample security to life and property in every section of the city—will increase the rate of taxation to a very large extent. We have already created within the past year a Board of Health, which will add from $25,000 to $30,000 to the annual expenditures. This new department is so vital to the people that if the expenditure were four times that amount the citizens would willingly meet the expenditure. Now if this order is adopted, enough will be saved to the city treasury to run the entire Department of Health for a year to come. There is no step we can take that will be so satisfactory to the public and that will reflect so much honor on ourselves as by adopting this order.

Alderman Power said it would be impossible for committees to discharge their duties without proper modes of conveyance, and moved to strike out from the order so much as related to carriage hire.

Alderman Clark hoped the motion would not prevail, since as a member of the Committee on Common he could proceed in the street cars to every public square and common in the city, and he was ready to pay the fare of five cents himself, and the same was true in regard to the Committee on Streets. There was not the slightest reason for any change. The Common Council were in full harmony with the Board, and he had no doubt they passed the order in good faith, and he would concur in the same manner in which it came down to us. They would not do justice to themselves if they refrained from doing it.

Alderman Gaffield said that nothing had been more refreshing than the action of the Council at its last meeting. It voices that perfect and harmonious accord which ought always to prevail between both branches of the City Government and the individual members, and it removes all embarrassment from the minds of the chairmen of the committees. Whereas some might have been in doubt, on necessary and proper occasions, as to the propriety of inviting their associates on laborious committees to partake of a reasonable dinner, or a cup of tea, the question has been most happily settled by the nearly unanimous vote of our brethren of the other branch. And now that the matter has been sufficiently ventilated in a generally good-natured discussion in both boards, and is fully understood by all, I move the indefinite postponement of the whole subject, leaving it to be regulated, as it ought to be, by the common sense, integrity and manhood of the members of both boards.

Notwithstanding the votes which have been passed, I have no fear that any chairman will act in other than a liberal and honorable manner, and from my knowledge of human nature, I do not think that many members of either branch will have strength to refuse an invitation, or oppose a motion to take from the table, pleasantly discuss, or finally to dispose of any refreshments which may be laid before them for consideration in a reasonable manner, and on proper occasions. He moved an indefinite postponement of the whole matter.

Alderman Sayward remarked upon the change which had occurred among some of the Aldermen, and said he should vote for the inconsistent. He supposed the Alderman had free tickets on horse railroads, and it would not cost him anything to ride to various portions of the city. He thought it would be better to pass the order and let him send his tickets to the Common Council.

Alderman Clark said he was willing to pay for all his tickets.

Alderman Sayward said he was ready to pay his own carriage hire, but after reading the remarks of some of the members of the Common Council, particularly those of Mr. Pickering and Mr. Dean, gentlemen of this Board ought to be ashamed of themselves.

The Chair stated the question to be on the amendment.

Alderman Gaffield raised a question that the motion to indefinitely postpone was first in order.

The Chair read the will of the Board, and stated the question again, and Mr. Gaffield appealed from the decision of the Chair.

The decision of the Chair was sustained, and the question was taken on the amendment, to strike out so much of the order as relates to carriage hire.

The motion was carried, by a vote of 8 to 4, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Brown, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Quincy.

Nays—Clark, Cutter, Sayward, Stebbins.

Alderman Gaffield renewed the motion for an indefinite postponement.

Alderman Clark said he hoped the Board would not lose the effect of all their talk, and he did not believe in an indefinite postponement. The other branch had taken one step beyond the Board in measures of economy, and the Board should not be undone. There would be a saving of $25,000 or $30,000—enough to pay for the running of the Board of Health—in which action the Council was honest, and it was the duty of the Board to concur. The members of the Council meant what they said, and if they were honest and earnest in their duty to their constituents and themselves the present year, they should show that they mean reform.

Alderman Gaffield did not think that there would be any taking of back tracks. The moral effect of the discussion would be good, as shown on the public and on the City Council, and it should go no further. They should now rely on the integrity, manhood and good sense of both boards, and in this respect they would be sustained by the integrity, manhood, and good sense of the community.

The motion for indefinite postponement was lost, by a vote 5 to 7, as follows:

Yeas—Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Emery, Hulbert, Sayward, Quincy.

Alderman Sayward moved to lay the order on the table.

Alderman Clark opposed the motion.

Alderman Sayward inquired if the motion was debatable.

The Chairman replied that it was not.

Alderman Clark asked for the yeas and nays on the motion, which were ordered.

The motion was lost, by a vote of 3 to 9, as follows:

Yeas—Gaffield, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Quincy.

The question recurring on the passage of the order—

Alderman Quincy hoped that the Board would concur, and thereby put an end for the present to what threatened to become an undignified controversy between the two branches, although he regretted that the other branch had seen fit to assume the attitude they had. The order passed by the Board contemplated the reasonable use of a privilege which the public expected would be soured, but which it could not but see by published figures had in times past been unreasonably abused. The responsibility for such abuse, in his opinion, rested far more heavily upon the upper branch of former city governments who should have discouraged and checked it, than upon the lower branch. It was the upper branch of past years upon whom the order most severely reflected, and yet the present lower branch had seen fit to regard the same as a vote of censure or rebuke to themselves, and had replied, in substance, "We will agree to no such check as you propose, but we will abolish the whole system, the unreasonable, the reasonable and the necessary, including even carriage hire for committees on duty, and see how long you will stand that." And prominent members of the branch assuming this attitude, criticised severely the action of the Board as undignified and childish. It did not comport with the dignity of this body to retort accusations, and therefore the Alderman thought that the matter of dignity or childishness might safely be left to the decision of the public. The adoption of this order might be followed by some inconveniences, but he relied on the good sense of the other branch to perceive ere long that no insinuation against their body was intended, and that then they would agree to put the matter on the footing desired by the Board, viz., to adopt a check against abuses, and to leave untouched a reasonable privilege, which the public are willing enough that the City Government should enjoy.

Alderman Clark regretted that they did not concur with the other branch in the passage of the order as it came from them, and moved a reconsideration of the vote striking out so much of the order as related to carriage hire.

Alderman Power hoped the motion would not prevail. As a matter of economy the interests of the city required the amendment to be made, for business could not be done unless some mode of conveyance is furnished to committees, who are often required to go where there are no horse railroads.

Alderman Sayward opposed the reconsideration, for it was necessary that carriages should be furnished to committees in doing the public business. This had been an undignified controversy, and would not have been brought up by those who had had experience in city matters. There were but few persons who objected to an expenditure for such purposes, and the longer the debate the better it would be. It looked undignified in an editor who had held a seat in the Board, and had partaken freely in its expenditures, to give his views as that of the public sentiment. Aldermen had spoken of improprieties of past governments, but no objections could be made against the last year's government, which was economical and had an economical chairman. He hoped the reconsideration would not prevail, but if it passed it would not be by his vote.

Alderman Hulbert did not deem the matter less trivial than it was last week, and as to knowledge of it from experience in the City Government, he only spoke from what gentlemen of past city governments had told him. The offering of his order was not personal, but was offered only so that it might be understood what was to be the practice of the Government. He had no person in mind, but a regard to the standing of members of the Government. These things were well known on the part of the Government for years, and were the subject of public scandal. It might be egotistical and self-willed on his part, but he believed the order offered by him to be a proper one, and whether others believed it to be an error, he should vote for the order. It was enough to show that there had been a public scandal, and he believed in the Scripture that they should provide things honest in the sight of all men.

In what he did he was speaking for the good name of the whole Council. He had no wish to conceal anything nor had he any personal plans to carry out. He voted for the amendment, because he could not give a good reason why provision should not be made for carriage hire. There was no danger on that point; the trouble was not there, but in relation to refreshments. The matter was worthy of their attention, and some progress had been made, but if it was believed to be best not to allow carriages he could go afoot all the year.

Alderman Sayward said he should judge from offering the order, that it was designed as a reflection on the last City Government. There were but four of this Board here last year, and half of the Council, and it looked like an imputation upon them. He was astonished at the course of the gentleman who was here last year and was so strong an advocate of the order, and it would have been better to have adopted the first order offered, which was the best one, because it might have been better for the families of the members.

Alderman Clark believed that carriage hire might be as much of an abuse as dinners, and it would be an expensive job where as many as eight are provided for. It was a large expense every year, and could be dispensed with. Why not, then, concur with the Council? After so complete a ventilation of the subject, they should not take a back step, for to pass the order as it came from the Council will give complete satisfaction. They have improved upon us, and let us follow their example, and save the outcry against the lavish expenditure of the City Government.

Alderman Sayward did not believe there was any danger of carriage hire, for in his own case he did not approve of a bill if he did not order carriages. How could the bills be paid for if the chairman of the committee did not approve of them? How could they get along without carriages, and how ride to distant portions of the city where the cars do not run? He had two horses, but he could not provide them for the use of the city. The citizens and the public had no objection to the payment of hire of carriages, nor of any reasonable amount of expenditure for refreshments.

It was not to be supposed they came here for the sake of dinners, and he did not act for the sake of getting votes, for he was not a candidate for Alderman or the Common Council or for Mayor, as it was about time for some to be thinking of that office. He was disposed to be fair and honest, and if the citizens wished them to do business, they must have carriages to get about in. Other Aldermen are often ready to ride, if some other committees furnish carriages. This Board he supposed was made up the same as others, and some expenditures of this kind would be needed.

Alderman Gaffield stated that he did not believe it to be wrong to require the city to pay for carriage hire, and occasions must occur in which reasonable refreshments should be provided. It was not the use but the abuse of the practice which had been the subject of complaint. The question had been brought up to check abuses. The order had been discussed goodnaturedly, and the other branch had adopted a substitute in a kind of joke, and had sent it to them. He was sorry any feeling had been shown this afternoon, and hoped that between both boards they would come to an agreement to reform abuses. The discussion had done good, and it was not child's play. The remarks in the other branch did not disturb his dignity. He hoped some one would move to reconsider the order, and it ought to be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Clark believed if some $25,000 or $30,000 could be saved, it was an important subject. He had no doubt the Council acted in good faith. So far as related to carriage hire, arrangements could be made beforehand if they were needed, and there was no reason why the order should not be passed as it was in the Council. There was no subject more deserving of serious consideration than this was, and the responsibility rests upon this Board. They were as much to blame as were members of the Council. No doubt he did his part toward public expenditure. He should be mortified should the order be postponed, but he hoped the reconsideration in relation to carriages would prevail.

Alderman Sayward suggested a difficulty in relation to obtaining carriages where one was authorized, and should not prove to be enough, in which case it might be necessary to postpone the action of a committee for a week.

Alderman Quincy objected to indefinite postponement because the order was necessary to check abuses. It would do for the present as it is.

The question was taken on the motion of Alderman Clark to reconsider the adoption of the amendment in striking out carriage hire.

The motion was lost by a vote of 1 to 11, as follows:

Yeas—Clark.

Nays—Bigelow, Brown, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

Alderman Gaffield believed the abuses complained of would be checked should the order be indefinitely postponed, and the matter left to the good sense and integrity of the City Council.

Alderman Clark said he was astonished at the course of the Alderman, after condemning, as he did, the follies and vices of past city governments, now to wish for an indefinite postponement of the order. Such a course put back the cause of reform twenty years. The public have become imbued with the idea that this is an extravagant Government, and as he believed the Council did not talk for buncombe in this matter, they should concur with them. He desired to inform the Alderman from Ward 16 (Sayward) that he was not talking for buncombe; he did not desire office in the future; what he desired to do was to fill his present position well, and at the present time we should retrench in every possible manner.

Alderman Sayward replied that he said nothing about buncombe, and was surprised to hear the Alderman on the other side refer to members of the Board by name; that that was more like a new member than one who had had his experience here. He thought it was hardly courteous to call such names.

Alderman Clark said he did not call that gentleman Buncombe.

Alderman Sayward replied that if the Alderman had called him by that name he should have been delighted, but he called him by name in the discussion.

Alderman Power believed the Council had not caught them in a trap, for if they mean business they will concur in the amendment. The interests of the city could not be subserved unless modes of conveyance were provided. He hoped the order would not be postponed, but passed.

The question was stated to be on the passage of the order, and it was passed, by a vote of eight to four, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Emery, Hulbert, Power, Quincy, Sayward.

Nays—Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Stebbins.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses, as follows: A. A. Noyes, to give a concert at Tremont Temple Feb. 12; John M. Watson, Browne & Cook, and Henry Fall, as auctioneers; also to sundry persons as victuallers, wagon licenses, and for billiard saloons, and for transfer of wagon license. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the several petitions for the location and use of steam engines and boilers of Schmetzer & Abendroth, 11 Charlestown street; McCready & Stearns, 89 Court street; R. B. Lincoln & Son, on Alger street, near Dorchester street; Carew & Walsh, on wharf on East Dover street; and no action necessary on petition of Dennison & Co., for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at 15 Suffolk place. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of stables, as follows: Naylor & Co., to occupy a wooden stable for twenty-five horses on Dorchester avenue, opposite Norway Iron Works; James H. Boyham, to erect a stable for two horses corner of Tremont and Whitney streets; Adams Thompson, to occupy and alter a stable for thirty horses on Northampton street; M. N. Brittan, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Marston avenue, to be of brick, on the northerly corner of the lot; George W. Dyer, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Pleasant street, corner of Savin-Hill avenue; Edwin O. Presby, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses on Blue-Hill avenue, near Moreland street; A. Firth, to erect a stable on Atlantic avenue, to conform to the requirements of the Inspector of Buildings. Severally accepted.

The committee also reported leave to withdraw on petition of C. O. Smith, for leave to erect stalls in an old building on Gold street for six horses. Accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, to whom were referred the appointments of Police Officers made by the Mayor, made a report in favor of the confirmation of the appointments, as follows:

Police Officers—Bernard Johnson, Osear M. Wellman, Christopher White, William J. Condon, Burt Gilson, Thomas Shehan, Harrison Wilder, Jr., George M. Lovering, Daniel E. Curran, Joseph Brown, Harry P. Hersey, Benjamin S. Hill, John H. Shaw, Lewis F. Leighton, William Burke, Frederic T. Harvey, Harlan P. Paige, Daniel A. Ritter, Ira B. Perry.

The several appointments were confirmed.

Alderman Brown, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Assessors' Department, made a report recommending the election of the following-named persons as First Assistant Assessors:

The report was accepted, when the Board proceeded to an election, with the following result:

The committee reported that thirty persons received votes enough, three more than were required to be elected.

Alderman Stebbins, of the committee, stated that one ballot containing more than the number of candidates was thrown out. It counted it would give Messrs. Healy, Cundy and Rich one more vote, when there would be an excess of one person elected.

On motion of Alderman Brown of the committee, the twenty-four having the highest number of votes above seven were declared to be elected, and the Board proceeded to the election of three more.

On the second ballot William H. Cundy was elected, receiving 8 votes, and A. G. Wyman was also elected by 7 votes, seven being required for a choice, and Otis Rich and J. K. Crowley had 6 each, M. J. Croak 4, H. N. Holbrook 2, Thaddeus Gould, Andrew J. Browne, 1 each.

On the third ballot for one Assessor there was no choice, Otis Rich receiving 5 votes, M. J. Croak A. J. K. Crowley 2, H. N. Holbrook 1.

On the fourth and fifth ballots the votes were the same: Otis Rich having 6, M. J. Croak 3, J. K. Crowley 2, H. N. Holbrook 1.

On the sixth ballot Otis Rich was elected by a vote of 7 to 3 for J. K. Crowley, and one each for M. J. Croak and H. N. Holbrook.

Alderman Gibson, from the committee to nominate Superintendents of Bridges, made a report recommending the election of Reuben B. Wendell as Superintendent of Maverick-street Bridge.

The report was accepted, and the Board proceeded to an election, resulting in the choice of the nominee.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Chairman of the Board of Aldermen be authorized to approve bills for expenses incurred by the Board of Aldermen, the standing committees of the Board of Aldermen not having charge of any appropriation of money, also by individual members of the Board of Aldermen while engaged in the discharge of official duty; the amount of said bills to be charged to the appropriation for Contingent Expenses of the Board of Aldermen.

Ordered, That there be paid to John Collamore the sum of $14,708, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Washington street, by a resolve of the Board of Street Commissioners, passed December 16, 1872, upon the usual conditions; the same to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That his honor the Mayor cause the flags to be displayed on the public buildings and grounds, and a national salute to be fired at East Boston, South Boston, the city proper, Roxbury and Dorchester, at noon on the 22d of February instant, in commemoration of the birthday of George Washington; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Commissioners upon West Boston and Craigie's Bridges be and they are hereby authorized and instructed, in behalf of the city, to petition the General Court for authority to reconstruct and widen Craigie's Bridge to a width not less than sixty-four feet, and to take such land, buildings and wharves and other property as may be found requisite or convenient to accommodate such reconstruction and widening.

REFRESHMENTS BY BOARDS OF DIRECTORS AND OTHERS.

Alderman Clark offered the following order:

Ordered, That on and after the passage of this order no bill shall be allowed or paid for refreshments furnished directly or indirectly to any boards of directors or trustees or heads of departments elected by the City Council, unless said expenditures have been incurred under a special order of the City Council.

Alderman Sayward said he had hoped this business of refreshments had been finished up, and asked if it was not so.

Alderman Clark replied that the whole question of economy in the City Government was involved. As it is now the directors of any board can provide refreshments as often as they see fit, and this action was necessary to complete the order relating to refreshments. They should show the community they are as desirous of contributing as far as in their power to lessening the expenses of the Government.

Alderman Sayward said it might be right, yet it appeared to him to be ridiculous, and hoped he would go on that it might sooner come to an end. He would like to know what particular Board it was aimed at.

Alderman Clark replied that it referred to no particular Board, but it was known that some boards dine, go out sailing, and engage in other matters at the city's expense. If such things were necessary, they should be provided for.

Alderman Sayward said he happened to be a member of one board, which sometimes went to Deer Island, and when they had a dinner, as they must have one somewhere. Three or four times a year they give excursions to patients in the Inmate hospital, and the Alderman would do well to see them; the inmates of the House of Reformation were also taken on excursions. This order appeared to be more ridiculous than ever, and he moved its indefinite postponement, but subsequently withdrew it.

Alderman Gibson thought the first thing in order in the matter would be to introduce an order of inquiry whether there were any abuses in expenditures by such boards. He did not expect that outsiders would be willing to work for nothing in the interests of the city. The taxpayers could not object to reasonable expense, for if they did the sooner he knew it the better, and he would leave them. An order might be adopted to inquire into excesses, but otherwise if taxpayers complain let them complain. If there are abuses let them be known, but until ascertained there was no need of complaining.

Alderman Quincy thought it was sufficient for them to keep their own skirts clear, and let others take the responsibility for their action. He hoped the order would be indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Sayward said his intention was to let the order be passed, but without his vote.

Alderman Gaffield raised the question whether they had any control of appropriations after they left them. He hoped the order would be laid over and the opinion of the City Solicitor be obtained. He should approve of the indefinite postponement.

Alderman Quincy renewed the motion for indefinite postponement.

Alderman Gaffield favored the motion.

Alderman Power agreed with Alderman Gibson in relation to this matter, yet the measure of economy should not be confined to the Board of Aldermen. If they were not worthy of trust, directors of public institutions and other boards, to prevent jealousy and secure harmony, should all be served alike.

Alderman Sayward wished to know if it included the Mayor, as it should include every one connected with the Government.

Alderman Clark said the Mayor was more likely to entertain the City Government than to be entertained by the city. The Board of Directors should be put upon the same level with the City Council. If the Directors at large were not willing to serve under such restrictions, there were plenty to be had in their places. It was but just and reasonable.

Alderman Sayward said if others in office were not to be trusted, the Mayor could not be. He did not doubt the disposition of the Mayor to entertain the City Government, and the Alderman opposite could also afford to. But these insinuations and orders were perfectly ridiculous, yet he hoped the order would pass.

Alderman Clark said he had made no insinuations, for this was a matter of business, to carry out what he believed to be right.

Alderman Sayward admitted that there were no insinuations, but plain language.

Alderman Gibson said if this goes on, when the salary bill comes up, they would wish to have every one do business for nothing. There was no need of their acting as guardians, but it was the excesses of committees they were to guard against. In all the expenditures of the three years he had been in the Board, he was not ashamed of his record.

The question was stated to be on the indefinite postponement of the order.

Alderman Gibson wished to be excused from voting as an interested party, acting upon boards to be affected by the order.

Alderman Sayward also asked to be excused, for the same reason.

Alderman Stebbins said he was on two boards, and should also be excused if others were.

Alderman Power made a statement that he also was on the Board of the City Hospital.

Alderman Quincy said if they were interested, then all the Aldermen were interested on the action which had been taken relating to the Board.

Alderman Emery believed there should be none excused.

The motions to excuse Aldermen Gibson and Sayward were lost.

The motion for indefinite postponement was carried by a vote of 7 to 5, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy, Sayward.

Nays—Brown, Clark, Hulbert, Power, Stebbins.

TRANSFER OF APPROPRIATIONS.

The Committee on Finance, to whom were referred the report of the Committee on Printing and the communication of the Board of Trustees of the City

Hospital, severally asking for additional appropriations, reported the accompanying order granting the requests, to which is appended the authority annually given to the Auditor of Accounts for making the necessary transfers for closing the financial year:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the appropriation for Public Lands to that for Printing, $5000; from that for Widening Tremont street, $5500, and for Widening Streets $6000, to that for City Hospital.

Also, That the Auditor of Accounts be, and he hereby is authorized to make such transfers of appropriations as are required to make up deficiencies in other appropriations and such others as may be necessary in closing the business of the financial year which terminates April 30, 1873.

Alderman Hulbert asked for an explanation of the proposed authority to the Auditor to make transfers of appropriations, not believing in any such measures except for specific purposes, so authorized. He moved to strike out the last clause of the order.

Alderman Gaffield was satisfied with the measure as in accordance with the usual practice and necessary, but believed the order might lie over, that the Alderman may satisfy himself with its necessity.

Alderman Power opposed the laying over of the order, there being a necessity for the transfer of appropriations specified, that required for printing being in consequence of the large documents printed. So far as related to the Auditor, it was well known there was no more trustworthy man in the City Hall, and the authority to make transfers was simply for small sums to enable him to meet deficiencies and settle up accounts for the year.

Alderman Gibson believed there might be some economy commenced at the City Hospital.

Alderman Hulbert said he did not raise the question of the integrity of any one, but he could not consistently vote for the order.

Alderman Sayward believed the order to be right, but did not object to the obtaining of information by the Alderman.

Alderman Clark explained that the result, in regard to appropriations, would not be affected, the object being to enable the Auditor to balance his books.

Alderman Power said it would be better to give the authority to make the transfer than to borrow money to meet deficiencies in appropriations. He had confidence in the judgment of the Auditor.

Alderman Sayward said the authorizing of transfers would save the trouble of passing different orders to meet the different cases of deficiencies which might come up. The objection made might be got over by passing the first part of the order, and letting the other lie over.

The order was passed with an amendment to strike out the last clause of it.

Alderman Clark moved to take from the table the order for the Mayor to petition the General Court for an act to take the low territory bounded by Northampton, Eustis, Albany and Washington streets, and to raise the grade thereof.

Some debate ensued in relation to the necessity of early action to secure legislation, upon the urgency of the measure, and whether the city was liable for the nuisance which it was alleged existed in consequence of the condition of the land.

Alderman Gibson believed the owners of the territory should be compelled to fill up the land, and not require the city to do it, and get the benefit of the rise.

Alderman Gaffield stated that some action was taken several years ago, in ordering the owners of the land to abate the nuisance by filling it up.

Alderman Clark said there was no law to compel the filling up of the land, but there should be, for the smallpox was not much worse.

Alderman Sayward believed the Board of Health had power to abate the nuisance caused by the condition of the land, and charge the expense to the owners.

Alderman Power doubted the power of the Board of Health, if the City Council had not the power.

Alderman Gaffield stated that, as the matter came before a committee upon which he was, he would look into it and report at an early day.

The motion to take from the table was withdrawn.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD STABLE.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health and Streets on the part of the Board of Aldermen, to whom was referred, as a part of the unfinished business of last year, the order in relation to the location of the Metropolitan Horse Railroad Company's stable at the corner of Shawmut avenue and Bartlett street, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the stable which the Metropolitan Railroad Company was authorized to build on its lot of land, at the corner of Shawmut avenue and Bartlett street, by an order of the Board of Aldermen, approved October 29, 1872, be located on any portion of said land which is distant at least one hundred feet from any public street or way.

Alderman Power wished to know whether the proposed location of the stable was on the line of St. James street, as proposed to be extended.

Alderman Sayward replied that there was no extension of St. James street, and he could not give the information asked for.

The debate was continued as to the understanding in relation to the location of the proposed stable by the last Board of Aldermen.

Alderman Power wished further to know whether the location would interfere with the extension of St. James street, if determined upon, and he hoped the order would lie over.

Alderman Sayward stated that the railroad company bought the land for a stable, and had been hindered in building it by the action of the last Board of Aldermen. Should St. James street be extended, it could be done as in the case of other streets, by the removal of buildings if in the way; but this company should not be further delayed in building on the possibility of extending a street.

Alderman Gibson advocated the passage of the order, believing the company to be right in asking for better terms, if the last Government turned the streets too tightly.

Alderman Quincy believed the order should go over, members of the last Board giving diametrically opposite views as to the understanding upon which the company were to build their stable.

The order was laid on the table.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen.

FEBRUARY 13, 1873.

A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held at one o'clock this afternoon, Mayor Pierce presiding.

The Mayor stated as the object of the meeting action upon the subject of widening Lincoln street.

WIDENING OF LINCOLN STREET.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners, providing for the widening of Lincoln street, near Summer street, by taking land of several parties, amounting to 1143 square feet, at an estimated expense of $22,950 50.

The several items of expense are as follows:

William Boynton, 115 Summer street, 423 feet, $21 per foot, $10,152; damages $600—total, $10,752. Lucy Ann Harris, 2 and 4 Lincoln street, 95 feet, $12, $1140; damages $160—$1300. John H. J. Hincke, 6 Lincoln street, 126 feet, $10, $1260; damages $200—$1460. James Barrett, No. 8 Lincoln street, 123 feet, $9 50, $1168 50; damages, $200—$1368 50. Henry Lee, 103 Bedford street, 276 feet, $20, $7520; damages, $550—$8070. Total, 1143 feet, $21,240 50; damages, $1710—$22,950 50.

Alderman Clark stated that the subject had been before the Committee on Streets, who were in favor of the proposed widening, and he hoped the order would take its second reading at this time.

The resolve and order were passed, in concurrence with the Board of Street Commissioners.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That licenses to erect steam engines and boilers be granted to Williams & Everett, corner of Bedford and Washington streets, and to Dennison & Co., No. 15 Suffolk place.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That there be paid to Azel Bowditch the sum of $265 50, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the taking of land for the widening of Blue Hill avenue, at Warren street, by order of the Board of Street Commissioners, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Ordered, That there be paid to Mrs. Nancy M. Frederick, the sum of $8892, for land taken in the name of the heirs of Jabez Frederick, and all damages occasioned by the widening of Summer street, by resolve of the Board of Street Commissioners, on the usual conditions; to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Steam Engines, reported in favor of granting the petition of Alexander Moseley, to locate and use a steam engine and boiler in South street. Accepted.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

FEBRUARY 13, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, at 7½ o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The quarterly report of the City Clerk and the annual report of the Cochituate Water Board were ordered to be placed on file.

The petitions of Henry A. Richards, Samuel R. Russell, and Shoe and Leather Dealers' Insurance Company were referred, in concurrence.

The remonstrance of Rev. W. F. Mallalien and the invitation of the Protestant Association to be reviewed by the City Government on the 22d February, were severally ordered to be placed on file.

The order for flags to be displayed on the public buildings and grounds and a national salute to be fitted at East Boston, South Boston, the city proper, Roxbury and Dorchester, on the anniversary of the birthday of George Washington, was read once.

The order that the Commissioners on West Boston and Craigie's bridges be instructed to petition the General Court for authority to reconstruct and widen Craigie's Bridge to a width not less than sixty-four feet, was passed, in concurrence.

The report of the Inspector of Buildings that he sees no reason to recommend additional legislation relative to theatre scenery, etc., was ordered to be placed on file.

The report and order to authorize $5000 to be transferred from the appropriation for Public Lands to that of Printing; from that for Widening Tremont street, $5500, and for Widening Streets, $6000, to that for City Hospital, was amended, on motion of Mr. West of Ward 16, by adding the provision as originally reported, to authorize the Auditor to transfer appropriations for the settlement of accounts, etc.

As amended, the order was passed.

The election of assistant-assessors was laid over, on vote, until the disposal of other business.

The amendment to order concerning refreshments, etc., by striking out the words "or for carriage hire," was considered.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12 moved an indefinite postponement of the order, on which motion Mr. Page of Ward 9 asked for the yeas and nays, which were ordered.

The motion to indefinitely postpone was lost by a vote of 19 yeas to 34 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Anderson, Blackmar, Bowles, Caton, Collins, Dacey, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Flatley, Harrington, Loring, Martin, McCue, McKenney, Morse, Pease, Warren, Weston.

Nays—Abbott, Adams, Barnes, Bicknell, Brackett, Burditt, Burt, Cudworth, Davis, Dean, Denny, Flynn, Hall, Hine, Jones, Kingsley, Madden, Marston, Page, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Thacher, Tower, Train, Upham, Wells, West, Whiston, Woods, Woodward.

Mr. Flynn moved that the Council adhere to its former vote.

The Chair stated that the same result would be reached by voting on the question of concurrence.

On motion of Mr. Thacher of Ward 15, the yeas and nays were ordered on the question.

In answer to an inquiry, the Chair stated the question to be on concurrence with the Board of Aldermen, in striking out the words "or for carriage hire."

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 hoped the Council would concur with the Board of Aldermen, for after voting against the indefinite postponement of the order, he could not see how they could refuse to pass it. It would be honestly and practically impossible for members of committees to discharge their duties without carriage hire. Suppose there should be paying required in Ward 16, and the committee should be required to see to it; suppose also at the same time similar work should be required in Ward 12 and in Roxbury, if carriages should not be allowed for their use the work could not be well done.

The result would be that members of committees would not go together, and in many cases they would go separately, and individual reports would be made with the indorsement only of one member of the committee. The result would be disastrous to the public business, and if concurrence was lost, the order would be likely to be disregarded or short-lived. So far as refreshments were concerned, the two branches were in accord, and both had said they would do without them. He could not say that he liked it, altogether, or that the action agreed with his judgment, but it should stand until it could be tried. He was opposed to indefinite postponement, but was content to pass the order. He hoped they would concur in the amendment with an honest desire to promote the public convenience.

Mr. Flynn said he wished to be consistent as his conscience directed, and referred to the action of the Board of Aldermen in passing an order at the same meeting at which this amendment was made, in authorizing the chairman of the Board to approve of bills incurred by members to be paid out of the Contingent Fund. Should the Council pass this order while the Board pass orders authorizing the approval of bills, as proposed? He hoped they would be consistent, and that all would be served alike in incurring expenses.

Mr. Dean said he did not understand that the failure to concur would prevent the order of the Board from taking effect. In the order referred to, the Board had passed the same order which the Council had passed, and even after the passage of this order the order of the Board would be proper in the approval of bills. That would have been essential, even had this never been introduced.

The question was taken on concurrence, which was lost, by a vote of 19 yeas to 35 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Abbott, Bicknell, Blackmar, Bleiler, Bowles, Burditt, Collins, Darrow, Dean, Denny, Hine, Kelley, Loring, Morse, Perkins, Pickering, Warren, West, Woodward.

Nays—Adams, Anderson, Barnes, Brackett, Burt, Caton, Cudworth, Dacey, Davis, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hall, Harrington, Jones, Kingsley, Madden, Martin, McCue, Page, Pease, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Thacher, Tower, Train, Upham, Wells, Weston, Whiston, Woods.

SUPERINTENDENT OF MERIDIAN-STREET BRIDGE.

The report nominating Reuben B. Wendell as Superintendent of Meridian-street Bridge was accepted, in concurrence, when the Council proceeded to an election, resulting as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	54
Necessary to a choice.....	28
David W. Doane.....	34
Reuben B. Wendell.....	20

Mr. Doane was declared to be elected, in non-concurrence.

The resolve and order for the widening of Lincoln street was taken up, and on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the rules were suspended, and the resolve and order for the widening was passed, in concurrence.

The order to rescind an order relative to refusal of permits for admission to the Lunatic Hospital at South Boston was considered.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said that in a recent visit to the hospital it had more patients than it could conveniently accommodate, and he did not see any reason for the order.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 said he knew of no reason for the order except to provide for special cases, in which it was deemed advisable to send patients to the hospital. It was designed by it that the trustees or the committee should consider the expediency of rescinding the former order.

Mr. Perkins said it was understood last year that the Judge of Probate exercised the power of acting in special cases without asking the permission of the City Council.

Mr. Denny replied that the Judge of Probate was unwilling to exercise such authority while the order remained in force.

Mr. Perkins said if that was the case he would withdraw his objections.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12 said it was understood three or four patients had been sent to the hospital, since the passage of the order, by whose authority he did not know.

The order was passed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order that $1100, to pay for twenty-five portable fire extinguishers, to replace those destroyed by fire Nov. 9, 1872, be appropriated.

Order to pay James Munroe, Assistant-Engineer of the Fire Department, $31 50, for personal services, provided the bill be approved in the usual manner.

COMMISSIONER OF CEDAR-GROVE CEMETERY.

The certificate of the election of William Pope as Commissioner of Cedar-Grove Cemetery was read, when the Council proceeded to an election, and William Pope was chosen, in concurrence, by a unanimous vote.

WATER REGISTRAR.

The certificate of the election of William F. Davis as Water Registrar was read, when the Council proceeded to an election, and William F. Davis was chosen, in concurrence, by a vote of 48 to 1 for an ineligible person.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF BRIDGES.

The report nominating Jacob Norris for Superintendent of Federal-street Bridge; Angus Nelson, for Superintendent of Dover-street Bridge; Edward T. Stowers, for Superintendent of Chelsea-street Bridge; Albert O. Hawes, for Superintendent of Granite Bridge; John Glavin, for Superintendent of Neponset Bridge; John C. Poole, for Superintendent of Broadway Bridge; and George H. Davis, for Superintendent of Mt. Washington-avenue Bridge, was accepted, when the certificates of the election of the above-named persons as such superintendents were read.

The Council proceeded to an election of the whole on one ticket, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the result of which was as follows:

- Whole number of votes 56.
- Superintendent of Federal-street Bridge—Jacob Norris 56.
- Superintendent of Dover-street Bridge—Angus Nelson 55; John McNamara 1.
- Superintendent of Chelsea-street Bridge—Edward T. Stowers 56.
- Superintendent of Granite Bridge—Albert O. Hawes 56.
- Superintendent of Neponset Bridge—John Glavin 55; P. I. Grace 1.
- Superintendent of Broadway Bridge—John C. Poole 56.
- Superintendent of Mount Washington-avenue Bridge—George H. Davis 56.

These Superintendents were severally declared to be elected in concurrence.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

James King, to be paid for personal injuries sustained in Ruggles street, by a fall upon the icy sidewalk.

Catherine Barrell, for compensation for personal injuries.

Carrier, Trott & Co., for compensation for injuries received to property on the 9th and 10th of November.

Severally referred to the Committee on Claims.
A communication was received from the School Committee, with an order requesting the City Council to furnish the requisite accommodations for the new primary class in the Prescott School District. Referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF STREETS.

The annual report of the Superintendent of Streets was laid before the Council in print.

The report states that the sum of $1,010,508 48 was expended by the Paving Department during the municipal year 1872, for paving, repaving, grading, repairs of streets, removing and levelling snow, and for grade damages, etc., a detail of which is given. The aggregates show expenditures for the several sections of the city, as follows:

City Proper	$438,473 40
South Boston	82,946 09
East Boston	77,491 13
Roxbury	192,627 44
Dorchester	79,129 65
Incidentals	64,497 71
Grade damages	75,342 06
	$1,010,508 48

The expenditures for grade damages were for services in making estimates	$10,000 00
City Proper	6,161 25
Roxbury	15,372 95
South Boston	6,550 00
East Boston	27,433 86
Dorchester	18,825 06

The amount appropriated for paving, etc., for the present financial year, 1872-3, was $1,000,000, to which has been added $1000, paid into the city treasury, on account of retaining wall on Harrison avenue; total expenditures of the present financial year, to January 1, 1873, $838,163 06. Balance of appropriation unexpended January 1, 1873, $162,836 94.

The amount of bills for edgestones, constructing and repairs of sidewalks, and old materials, lodged with the City Treasurer during the year 1872, for collection was $15,039 46.

The amount paid into the city treasury, during the same period, and credited as having been paid in by the Paving Department, on account of work done by said department, was $7964 56.

Water-street Grade Damages. The payment of grade damages on Water street, the cases of which were submitted to referees, amounted to $71,703 50, of which amount $47,967 56 was paid in 1871. A transfer of $100,000 was authorized in 1871 from the appropriation for Paving, made a special appropriation for Water-street grade damages. Of this amount there remains a balance of $28,296 50, which is deemed sufficient to settle the few remaining claims.

In addition to the supervision of operations of the Paving Department, the Superintendent has been called upon, during the past year, to take charge of a large amount of other work, the cost of which has been charged to the special appropriations enumerated.

These were as follows: Atlantic avenue, $3228 08; South Market-street extension, $3629 95; Kneeland-street widening, $7733 41; Shawmut-avenue extension, etc., $15,079 28; Harrison-avenue extension, $1380 06; Canton-street grading, $1748 01; Dudley, Stoughton and other streets, $40,842 61; Fort Hill, $86,190 02; Suffolk-street District, $61,076 66; wood paving, $27,657 34; Tremont-street grading, $14,064; Shawmut-avenue Bridge sidewalks, $239 90; advertising, $107 01. Total, $103,144 91.

Back Bay Bridges. Amount expended on Back Bay bridges, charged to the special appropriation for that purpose, $190,472 88.

Railroad Locations. The several railroad locations to the Metropolitan, Middlesex, Highland and Union Freight and Albany-street Freight Railroad companies, are specified. Of the freight railroads the Superintendent says—

"The principal objection to the occupation of the narrow streets of this city by freight railroads arises from the delay occasioned to public travel by the blocking up of the streets in loading and unloading cars. If the business of these roads increases to any considerable extent, this will prove a serious inconvenience, unless wider avenues are provided to accommodate the cars, and leave room for the free passage of vehicles."

Beacon street. On this subject the Superintendent says—

"In the early part of last year petitions from about one hundred of the heaviest taxpayers of Boston were presented to the Board of Aldermen, representing the crossing of Beacon street with the Boston & Albany Railroad as extremely dangerous to public travel, and praying that a bridge might be erected over the railroad, and the street graded so as to carry the travel over and above the tracks instead of upon a level with them. The railroad corporation was favorably disposed towards the project, and signified its willingness to contribute liberally towards the expense of the same. The Committee on Paving called upon the City Engineer for plans and estimates for a bridge on Beacon street, and also for one on Brookline avenue, it being evident that it would be necessary to bridge the railroad upon both avenues. The statutes of the Commonwealth provide that no bridge shall be constructed over any railroad of a less height than eighteen feet in the clear above the tracks, without the consent of the Board of Railroad Commissioners.

As fifteen feet was all that the railroad corporation required at these points, and the addition of three feet would not only increase the cost of the bridges and the grading of the avenues, but also the claims for grade damages by the owners of the adjacent lands, the committee and the railroad corporation united in an application to the Board of Railroad Commissioners for leave to construct these bridges at a height of fifteen feet in the clear above the tracks. Permission to that effect was granted November 13, 1872. The Engineer's estimate of the cost of the bridges and the grading of the avenues was $304,590. Owing to the lateness of the season at which these results were obtained, and the momentary check given to public improvements by the fire of November 9, no further action was taken by the committee in the premises. The constantly increasing travel upon these avenues as well as upon the railroad renders these bridges absolutely necessary for the safety of the public. The cost at present seems large, but the rapid increase in the value of the adjacent land, and the certainty that building operations will soon be commenced, admonish us that delay will be attended with increased expense, and that immediate action will prove the most economical in the end."

WOOD PAVEMENTS.

The following table shows the streets in which wood pavements were laid down during the past year, the kind of pavement, number of yards, and price per yard of each:

Streets.		Sq. Yds.	Per Yd.
North Bennet,	"Lancaster,"	909.10	@ $3 00
Central,	"Warren,"	865.60	" 3 00
Dorchester,	" "	892.80	" 2 60
"	" "	274.80	" 2 17½
Lindall,	"Boston,"	521.60	" 2 75
Lenox,	" "	2,864.48	" 2 51
Beacon,	" "	12,317.70	" 2 44

Suffolk-st. Dist.,	" "	10,476.27	" 2 64
Total,		29,724.25	" "

Of the Warren and Boston pavements some statements are made in relation to the inventions, and it is remarked—

"The above pavements are simple in construction, easily laid down and repaired, and are preferable in many respects to the more complicated and costly pavements heretofore laid down in this city."

With reference to the commission on the subject of wood pavements, it is said—

"It is confidently hoped that the matter in the hands of this commission will receive such thorough investigation as to make their report a valuable document for future reference and guidance."

Dorchester. In relation to Dorchester the Superintendent says—

"I wish to call particular attention to the necessity of providing for the surface drainage of Dorchester. Although three years have passed since this town was annexed to Boston, nothing has been done to supply this want. There being no sewers in this section of the city, the water which collects upon the streets is suffered to stand in pond holes or let off upon the first convenient lot of land. In former times, when a road became defective or inconvenient to travel from standing water, an attempt would be made to remedy the evil by filling the low places with broken stones or dirt. In this way the grades of the streets were constantly undergoing a change. A sample of this style of work can be seen on Dorchester avenue, where the horse-railroad track, which, when laid, was upon the crown of the road, now forms a trench in the centre, the sides having been raised from time to time by repeated layers of broken stone. The conveying of water upon adjacent land was considered, as a general thing, rather an advantage than a disadvantage,—the land being used for cultivation, the water served to irrigate the same.

The improvements which have been made during the past three years call for an entire change in this regard. New streets have been laid out, the land divided into building lots and houses erected. The wash of the streets upon these lots is no longer an advantage, but an intolerable nuisance. Complaints are made after every rain storm of yards, gardens and cellars flooded with the wash from the streets which this department is powerless to prevent, for want of sewers to receive and convey away the water. The city has no right to turn the water from its highways upon adjacent land, in opposition to the wishes of the abutters, but is bound legally and morally to provide drainage for said highways. It is not in the province of the Paving Department to build sewers. The Sewer Department constructs them only when called upon to supply the means for house drainage. As long as citizens can, without serious inconvenience to themselves, drain into cesspools in their own premises, or convey their drainage into the street gutters, they are not likely to assess themselves for the construction of sewers. Consequently none are built, and the street drainage is left unprovided for. The first requisite for a good road is thorough drainage. It is unreasonable to expect that good roads can be constructed and maintained in this section of the city until drainage is provided. This is a serious matter, and requires immediate attention. A thorough system of sewerage should be devised without delay, and put into immediate execution."

The report was ordered to be sent up.

REPORT ON ELECTION OF GEORGE A. SHAW.

Mr. Flynn moved that the Council take up the report of the Committee on Elections on the petition of William M. Flanders and others, in relation to the seat occupied in the Board by George A. Shaw.

The report was taken up, when Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 offered as a substitute for the conclusions of the committee an order that George A. Shaw was not on the day of election eligible to a seat in the Council, and that said seat be now declared vacant.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4 briefly addressed the Council in support of the views of the committee, stating that they had made their report on the evidence and facts in the case, the law being determined as declared by the City Solicitor. He regretted that Mr. Holmes of the committee was not present, upon whom the principal labor devolved in making up the report.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he did not oppose the report out of any disrespect to the committee, and he was sorry that his colleague was not present to defend his report.

Mr. Bicknell moved to lay the report over to the next meeting.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 wished to know if assurances could be given that Mr. Holmes would be present at the next meeting of the Council. He had hoped that the sitting member from Ward 5 would have vacated his seat during the pendency of this question, and he would ask the ruling of the Chair whether he could occupy the seat until the question should be settled.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 hoped the request would be withdrawn, for it was clear that the gentleman was entitled to his seat until it was declared vacant. It was not a question affecting him alone, but the Council, and he trusted the subject would be carefully considered. He hoped the motion to lay the subject over would prevail.

The Chair stated that on the request of the gentleman from Ward 7 he could not rule the gentleman from Ward 5 to be out of order in retaining his seat. So far as this stage of proceedings was concerned he is still a member of the Council, and his retaining it rests entirely upon his sense of propriety.

Mr. Perkins said he should be glad to vote for postponement, should it be understood that it is to be considered next week.

Mr. Bicknell was not able to say whether Mr. Holmes would be present or not next week, but presumed he would be.

The motion to postpone was carried.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Committee on Elections, on the petition of William M. Flanders and others, that at the date of the last municipal election in Ward 5, John W. Mahan was not a resident in said Ward, and, therefore, not eligible to a seat in the Common Council, made a report that the petitioners having failed to appear in support of their representations, after being repeatedly notified to do so, no further action is necessary thereon.

The report was accepted.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, acting upon an order from the City Council, namely, to purchase a lot of land on the corner of Warren and Quincy streets and to erect thereon an engine house, at a cost for land and building of $20,000, made a report, as follows:

They have purchased the land agreeably to the order, expending from the appropriation the sum of $6452 22. They have also received estimates for the erection of the building thereon, and find that owing to the advance in building materials the unexpended balance of the appropriation will not be sufficient for the completion of the work; but at the lowest estimate $10,000 more will be required before the work of building can be contracted for.

The committee would therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $10,000, to be added to the amount already authorized, for Engine House Ward 14.

The order was read once.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11, from the Committee on Claims, on the petition of Daniel W. Bugbee to be paid for injuries received by an alleged defect in Dorchester avenue, made a report recommending that the petitioner have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7—

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters on the part of the Common Council be instructed to take such steps as they may deem proper for the alteration of chapter 369, acts of 1869, as shall require the approval of the City Council in place of the Board of Aldermen in the erection, occupation or use of stables in this city.

Mr. Flynn stated that the order was the same which passed this branch last week, and was lost in the Board of Aldermen. The Committee on Health were of opinion that the erection and use of stables ought to be under the control of the City Council, which was the reason why the order was put in.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6—

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Printing be requested to have an index prepared for the volumes of the City Council minutes for the years 1869, 1870, 1871 and 1872; the expenses thereof to be charged to the appropriation for Printing.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 offered an order authorizing the Superintendent of Health to employ one principal clerk and such assistants as may be necessary in his department, the compensation for the same to be approved by the Joint Standing Committee on Health.

The order was read once.

ELECTION OF ASSISTANT-ASSESSORS.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the election of First Assistant-Assessors was taken up, under a suspension of the rules.

The report of the committee nominating certain persons, specified, for assessors, was accepted, and the Council proceeded to an election.

Ordered to be sent down.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CITY ENGINEER.

The annual report of Joseph P. Davis, City Engineer, was laid before the Board in print. The report is made up to a great extent of the report of Henry M. Wightman, Assistant City Engineer, to which the Engineer refers, not having had time in recently assuming the duties of the office to examine the various bridges reported upon, with sufficient care to be able to give a statement of the condition of all them.

The Engineer remarks upon the condition of the bridges as follows:

Attention is called to the condition of the Broadway Bridge. There appears to be a want of lateral stiffness in the supporting trusses to the spans over streets and railways, and a ratio of strength to strain less than is usually provided in the suspension rods of the draw. Also the towers are out of plumb, owing in part, at least, to a settlement of their supports. Measures have been taken to ascertain exactly what movements have taken place, and those, if any, that are now occurring.

The hot-air engines used for turning the draw need thorough overhauling and repair, and as they are not of sufficient power to handle the draw properly, and are costly in maintenance, owing in part to the high speed at which they are necessarily run, it is recommended that they be replaced by machines of greater power and of different character.

It now requires nearly three minutes to turn the draw on or off. This operation should be performed in, at the most, one half this time, and provided sufficient lateral strength can be given to the draw by ties and braces to resist accidental shocks, there seems to be no good reason why it should not be performed in one minute. Steam engines of from two to three times the power of the hot-air engines are recommended for this place.

The supporting piles of the Chelsea-street Bridge are in bad condition and past repair. The bridge, with the exception of its draw, must be rebuilt, and work upon it should commence as early in the spring as the weather will permit.

The abutments of the Huntington-avenue Bridge over the Boston & Albany Railroad have been badly injured and one of the wing walls destroyed by the pressure of the mud against the pile foundations, combined with the pressure of the earth backing against the masonry.

It seems difficult, if not impossible (except at an enormous cost), to build abutments or retaining walls that will not move and crack, on such ground as was found at this place, unless entire control can be had of the earth filling behind, and for considerable distance around them. Long piles are required to reach through the soft mud, and even if driven well into a firm stratum beneath, they do not possess sufficient stiffness to resist effectually the movement of the mud surrounding their upper ends. No weight that is practicable to put upon them will keep them in place. The most that can be done is to tie the piles well together, and give the mud as much an air as straight passageway between them as possible. Even then movements will occur unless the earth filling is carefully made; though fortunately they ordinarily cease before the abutment is ruined or rendered unserviceable.

Observations are being made from time to time at the Huntington-avenue abutments, to determine what changes are now occurring, and if possible their exact cause. It is not thought best to rebuild the wing wall until the observations are completed and a plan to secure and strengthen the whole structure has been devised.

In the report for 1870, the City Engineer recommends rebuilding the Neponset Bridge over Neponset River at the earliest moment. Its condition has not improved since that time, and a new structure should be built the coming season, the old one being too far gone to admit of effective repair.

The Longwood-avenue Bridge is not in good condition. The supporting trestle work is somewhat decayed and the abutment on the Brookline side has moved and seriously cracked, owing probably to a bad foundation.

The track to the Meridian-street drawbridge requires some repairs, the draw piers should be replanked, and the asphalt sidewalks repaired.

The following-named bridges need to be repainted: Albany-street Bridge, over Boston & Albany Railroad.

Berkeley-street Bridge, over Boston & Providence Railroad.

Columbus-avenue Bridge, over Boston & Albany Railroad.

Ferdinand-street Bridge, over Boston & Albany Railroad.

The ironwork under the bridge floors, which is apt to be neglected on account of difficulty of access, should be kept well painted and in good state of preservation, as well as those parts that are above and in sight.

Water Works. On this subject the Engineer refers to the low stage of water at Lake Cochituate in January, 1872, the measures taken by legislation to provide for a further supply, and a description of the work to be done, which was given in a report of the Water Board in May last. In the ditch from Farm Pond to Beaver Dam Brook the water was let in June 19, and was run to June 25, to draw down the level of the pond and finish the deepening of the mouth of the ditch.

On June 25, water from the river was turned into the pond, and from thence let into the lake, and the flow was continued uninterruptedly until August 7, when it was stopped to finish the side planking of the ditch. August 16 the communication was again opened, and was kept open till September 17, when it was closed for the season.

The quantity of water received from the river during the seventy-five days of flow has not yet been accurately computed, but it cannot have been far from fifteen hundred millions of gallons, or equal to the supply to the city, taken at the average for the year, for about one hundred days.

On June 25, the water in the lake stood at five feet eleven and one-half inches above the bottom of the conduit; on August 7, at six feet eight and one-half inches; on August 16, at six feet four inches; and on September 17, at ten feet one inch. The rise above shown was chiefly due to the large rainfall of the summer months, the supply from the river having been but about thirty per cent. in excess of the consumption in the city.

The lake is now as nearly full as it is deemed prudent to keep it at this season of the year.

The average daily consumption in 1871 was 13,945,500 gallons; that in 1872 has been 15,063,432 gallons: an increase of eight per cent.

The average daily consumption for each month during the past year has been as follows:

January.....	12,203,911	gallons.
February.....	15,172,040	"
March.....	15,788,490	"
April.....	12,281,008	"
May.....	13,830,591	"
June.....	14,617,652	"
July.....	16,377,133	"
August.....	15,017,851	"
September.....	15,072,615	"
October.....	15,544,788	"
November.....	17,591,442	"
December.....	17,263,671	"

The above quantities are approximate only. There are no means provided at any part of the works for obtaining accurate data by which the quantities of water drawn from the lake, or supplied to the city, can be computed.

An examination of the interior of the conduit from the lake to Chestnut-Hill Reservoir was made October 12 and 13. It was found in a better condition than had been anticipated, but a number of new cracks were discovered and many of the old ones had widened (as was shown by the breaking away of the cement pointing), indicating that movements of a dangerous character are still taking place. A length of several thousand feet at the upper end was found covered with a thick vegetable growth resembling sponge, and a deposit of sand of several inches in thickness was found on the bottom, probably thrown in by the pumps used in the early part of the season.

The various reservoirs and the distributing pipes are in good condition. Probably some changes will be made during the coming season in the street-pipe system and in the hydrants, that a more abundant supply of water may be provided in case of extensive fires.

Owing to additions that have been made to the area supplied by the high service, and to the necessity for furnishing a large supply of water in case of fire within that area, changes should be made in the high-service works that will practically increase their capacity.

This can be done either by increasing the pumping power, or by building a reservoir connected with the standpipe. The reservoir would permit the pumps to be run at a uniform speed throughout the day, thereby very much increasing their effective capacity and would hold in reserve a large supply of water to be at once drawn upon for the extinguishment of fires.

By request of the Water Board, surveys and estimates have been made by this department, to determine what changes and extensions can be made, and a report will soon be presented for their consideration.

The report of the Assistant City Engineer gives $18,405 as the expenditures in the department, leaving an unexpended balance of $6535 52, and there was expended from special appropriations $6974 74. The number of persons employed on the 1st of January was sixteen.

The high portion of South Boston is now connected with the high service main in Dorchester by an independent pipe twelve inches in diameter, and the high service pipes are being rapidly extended on the elevated land in Ward 16. It is recommended that the new 48-inch pipe from the Chestnut-Hill Reservoir to the city be laid through the streets to the Tremont-street crossing of the Providence Railroad to connect with the present mains.

In the removal of the earth from Fort Hill, the several contracts make a total of 547,628 cubic yards removed, at a cost of $447,122.

The Milton Bridge over the Neponset River, at Milton Lower Falls has been widened about twenty feet on the easterly side, and a new retaining wall has been built on the Boston side of the river. The cost of the addition was $22,797 69, of which the town of Milton paid $5000.

The condition of the several other bridges is referred to with remarks upon the same, the principal points of which are given in the report of the Engineer.

Mention is made of the work done upon the several bridges, wharves at Deer Island and at Gallop's Island, East Boston ferries, Pinckney-street sea wall, and of miscellaneous constructions and estimates in 1872. A list of fifteen bridges is given over tide water, rivers and creeks, and of twelve over railroads and highways. The Albany-street Bridge, over the Roxbury Canal, was put in thorough repair last spring. The fourth approximate estimate of the widening of Federal-street Bridge shows the amount of work done and materials furnished to be $69,329.

The report was ordered to be sent down.

Mr. Healy was declared to be elected, in concurrence.

The report and order to authorize $5000 to be transferred from the appropriation for Public Lands to that of Printing; from that for widening Tremont street, $5500, and for Widening Streets, $6000, to that for City Hospital, came up amended so as to authorize the Auditor to make any transfers necessary to balance his accounts at the close of this financial year.

Alderman Hulbert stated that as he moved the amendment to strike out the last clause, which was passed in the Board of Aldermen, he had seen the Auditor in relation to the matter, and on the explanations made by him, he was willing to vote for its restoration, although he believed that the working of the order as a precedent is not wise.

The amendment of the Council in giving authority to the Auditor, as proposed, was concurred in.

THE QUESTION OF CARRIAGE HIRE.

The following matter was considered:

Non-concurrence by the Common Council to strike out from the following order the words "or for carriage hire":

"Ordered, That from and after this date, no committee shall approve, nor shall the Auditor audit, nor shall the Treasurer pay, any bill contracted by any committee of the City Council, or of either branch, or any member thereof, or any bill contracted by any member of the City Council, for refreshments of any name or nature, or for carriage hire, unless said bill is contracted under a special vote passed prior to contracting the same."

Alderman Power moved that the Board adhere to its former action.

Alderman Quincy hoped that the Board would recede from its amendment and concur with the Council. It was well known that the Board had not contemplated the abolition of the reasonable privilege of obtaining proper meals at the city's expense, but had desired to interpose a check against the repetition of past abuses,—abuses for which, in his opinion, the upper branch was the most responsible. But the lower branch had seen fit to present to the Board the alternative of either abandoning the attempt to check an abuse or to agree to the entire abolition of the privilege, to which was added—which made the pill yet more unpalatable—necessary carriage hire for committees ordered on duty. Which of these alternatives the lower branch desired the Board to adopt he left the public to infer, but was clear in his own mind that both duty and dignity alike required the acceptance of the latter. Though it seemed reasonable that the city should provide transportation for committees on duty, yet he would cheerfully assume his share of the expense, rather than have it said that this talk had been for buncombe and that the Board were glad of an excuse to leave matters where they found them.

Alderman Power said he could not vote for any measure of this kind, for it was clear to his mind that it would be detrimental to the interests of taxpayers, and the city business could not be done without the use of carriages. They could get along very well without refreshments, but the gentlemen of the Common Council knew that carriage hire was necessary, and if they were sincere in measures of reform they should concur with the Board. He could not see how they could refuse to concur, if sincere, and he hoped the Board would adhere to its former vote.

Alderman Hulbert said the subject was worthy of all the consideration that had been given to it. He would take it for granted that the members of the Council were sincere, and he should be very sorry, after all that has transpired, to have this all end in nothing. It would be recollected that, last week, for reasons given by him, he voted in favor of retaining the carriage hire, but as the Common Council had, by a large vote, decided differently, he hoped the Board of Aldermen would concur with the Council. Such had been his opinion of the evil heretofore existing in the City Government that he would cheerfully concur with the Council and let carriage hire take the same course that refreshments had.

In accepting office, the contract required that they should give their time to the city without compensation, and the additional extra charge for carriage hire was not worth considering. It would be a personal relief to them to do away with all the expenses which had brought reproach upon the City Government. They proposed to give up refreshments, and he was ready to pay his own carriage hire and any other expenses which may be necessary. To settle the question would be worth more than money. If experience teaches anything, the giving up of all such expenditures would leave them free, and relieve them from the embarrassment which heretofore had existed. He was heartily in favor of economy, and hoped the Board would concur with the Council.

On motion of Alderman Quincy, the yeas and nays were ordered on the motion, and the motion to adhere was carried, by a vote of 8 to 4, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Power.

Nays—Hulbert, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

The salary of the Superintendent of Buildings is increased $300.

The salary of the Chief Truant Officer is increased $300.

The allowance for clerk hire in the Assessors' Department is increased $1000.

The total amount of increase recommended is: on salaries, $3750; on clerk hire, $4860.

Under the order referred to the committee as a part of the unfinished business of last year, in relation to the rate of compensation which ought to be allowed to the Inspector of Provisions, it is recommended that the salary of that officer be fixed at the rate of two thousand dollars per annum, and an order to that effect is included in the accompanying bill.

The orders were read once.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to pay a sum not exceeding $3320, for the use of rooms of the Institute of Technology during the season of 1871-72, for the purposes of the free evening drawing schools; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Alderman Gaffield, in explanation, stated that, through an informality, this bill, which was justly incurred and owed by the city, was not paid last year.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the persons who have recently placed or caused to be placed fences or other obstructions across the "old road" lying easterly of Blue-Hill avenue and leading from Columbia street to said Blue-Hill avenue, to remove said fences and obstructions within fourteen days from the date of the passage of this order; and in default of the removal of said fences and obstructions by said parties, the Superintendent of Streets is hereby directed to remove the same at the expense of said parties.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to allow for payment to the City Treasurer the sum of $1343 01, being the amount paid by him on a writ of execution issued by the Superior Court, Suffolk County, January Term, 1873, in favor of Sylvester Gardner and Rosanna Gardner, his wife, for injuries sustained by a defect in a highway; said amount to be charged to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses.

FILLING UP LOW TERRITORY.

Alderman Quincy moved that the order for the Mayor to petition the General Court for an act to take the low territory, bounded by Northampton, Eustis, Albany and Washington streets, and to raise the grade thereof, be taken from the table.

Alderman Hulbert said if action was to be taken upon this subject he hoped it would lie over, for he was not ready to act intelligently upon the subject.

The Chair stated that debate was not in order, and the motion to take up the order was carried.

Alderman Quincy said he had objected to the proposed filling up if a certain line of policy is to be pursued, but he had an order which he would offer as a substitute, and which would not commit the city to any particular policy. This order provides for the same course which was adopted by the city of Cambridge in an act passed by the Legislature of last year.

The order was read as follows, and was adopted as a substitute for the original order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court now in session for the passage of an act authorizing the City Council of Boston to require the owners of lands in said city, the surface of which is below the grade of fourteen feet above mean low water, to raise the grade of said lands, and of all private streets, courts and ways thereon, with reference to the complete drainage thereof; and in case the owners fail so to do, within a reasonable time, the city shall be authorized to enter upon and raise said lands to a suitable grade, the expenses incurred thereby to constitute a lien upon said lands.

An order to release to Samuel B. Pierce the parcel of 8880 square feet of land discontinued from a part of Forest-Hill avenue, adjoining an estate of said estate, upon the said Pierce conveying to the city the parcel of 8320 square feet of land taken from an estate of his to widen said avenue, was referred to the Committee on Streets.

ADDITIONAL ACCOMMODATIONS FOR CITY OFFICERS.

Alderman Sayward moved to take from the table the report and order to hire the Missionary Building in Pemberton square, at an annual rent of $7000, for city purposes.

The motion was carried, and the order was considered.

Alderman Hulbert said that since the report was made he had been through all the places in the City Hall, and were it not for the necessity for economizing the expenditures of the city, he could not vote for it. He was satisfied that there were accommodations in this hall for any number of committees. If required, they should double up, for it could not be necessary in these days that they should all have separate rooms. The rent for the proposed building was $7000, and while there was room for half a dozen committees here, there is room for a half dozen more at the Charity Building.

Alderman Sayward said he did not know what the Alderman meant by saying there was room for committees, and he asked does he not know we have no control over the Charity Bureau? There was a necessity for further room for the accommodation of various departments of the City Government. The City Council had passed an order to provide that the Treasury Department shall be more safe, and to do this it would be necessary that a portion of the room of the Board of Directors for Public Institutions should be taken up. The Board of Health is now in a confined room, and the Assessors want more room for their accommodation.

The building it was proposed to lease would provide accommodation for all parties for some years to come. The City Solicitor would be provided rooms, in it, which would be a saving of the rent now paid of $2800 and taxes, and these rooms now occupied by him can be readily let. In this matter he had no interest other than the convenience of officers requiring more room.

Alderman Hulbert said he had a book which contained the record of the use of every room in this building; and there was not the least difficulty in accommodating all the offices, with certain changes, and not an elbow need be hit. That rooms should be had for the Board of Directors and others outside of the building, was not at all necessary.

Alderman Gibson believed there was room enough in the City Hall to make every department as comfortable as can be expected. The Inspector of Milk, for instance, could be put into the fire-alarm room, and others could double up if necessary. This would be more convenient than to go up to some other place. They had got to begin somewhere to economize, for they had taken the contract to save the money of the city. All say they have no room, but they could get along with what they have. The call for rent of the leased building was $7000, it would but be $15,000 before they got through with it, in fitting it up and the care of it. The cost for ten years would be $150,000.

Alderman Sayward reminded the Alderman that two years ago he said there was no more room for new offices. If they were to go on in the way proposed of crowding offices to save expense, then they should crowd schools to save new houses. This was not the way in which they would do their own business.

Alderman Gibson replied that there was plenty of room in the Charity Building, which was not half filled up.

Alderman Sayward said there was not plenty of room in that building, besides the city had no control over it.

Alderman Clark stated that he went over the Charity Building and found various rooms unoccupied, but they were not suitable for the Board of Directors for Public Institutions, nor for the Board of Health, which were the two most important to be provided for. The Inspector of Milk and some others might be accommodated there, yet it was true, as had been said, the City Government had no control over the building.

Alderman Power believed the accommodations for the Board of Directors for Public Institutions were ample. The room of the Inspector of Milk might be occupied by the Board of Health. It was proper to economize in these things, and these offices could be as well accommodated as they had for the past five years. There were many things in which expense is more needed.

Alderman Gibson believed the Board of Health could be accommodated in the Charity Building, up two flights. They were well paid for their services, and could go up stairs, and he had it from the parties down stairs that the rooms above could be had. There was an abundance of other rooms in the buildings, now full of stragglers of all ages. The Board of Directors for Public Institutions would prefer rooms there rather than come up stairs here.

Alderman Gaffield said he would make a statement from his personal knowledge, that in consideration of a certain sum contributed toward the erection of the Charity Building, the Overseers of the Poor had the exclusive charge of it. It was established to save money, but on a friendly conference to save money he had no doubt some arrangement could be made for the use of the rooms.

Alderman Gibson said he would like to know whether the city had any control of that building, for it was not the way to do business to spend a large sum of money for a building and have no control over it. He would like to have the order lie over that they may see how it is.

Alderman Sayward replied that the Alderman might have known how it was. They could not use the building without the consent of the Overseers of the Poor, but, as Alderman Gaffield said, the Overseers in a conference might consent. In the changes proposed, some should go out of this building. The hiring of the building could be no detriment to the city, for the rent of the City Solicitor's room of $2500 would be saved, and changes could be made which would be for the good of the Government.

Alderman Emery said he went over the Charity Building with Alderman Gibson. The unoccupied rooms were badly arranged for anything which was needed. In the matter of control he satisfied himself that the Overseers of the Poor had the charge of it in concurrence with the City Council. He was desirous of economy, and if they could get along as they were now he would be glad to do so.

Alderman Gibson said there was one room in the Charity Building which was occupied two hours a week by a gentleman out of town. They had better get hold of the building if they could, for it had not been half occupied since it was built.

Alderman Clark denied that there was any conflict in relation to the use of the Charity Building, and the passing of an order to find out in whose control it was would be reflecting on the best men who had anything to do with the City Government. The rooms up stairs were not objectionable for some uses, but if the Board of Health were to go there, to whom smallpox patients might be sent, or persons go to learn of such patients, or persons go there to make complaints of nuisances, it might be objectionable to ladies interested in the Charity Bureau, some of the best people who frequently go to that building for the benefit of the poor.

It would not be right to force anything objectionable upon people who work for nothing for the city.

The rooms would not answer either for the Board of Directors for Public Institutions. So far as related to accommodations in the City Hall, he did not believe it would be large enough many years longer, and hoped the city would grow so as to require its enlargement to double its present size. If the city was to hire the building proposed at a rent of $7000, and use it, he hoped the order would be laid over, and a statement be made of what changes it was designed to make.

Alderman Sayward did not think it necessary to lay the order over for that purpose. The Board of Directors were well enough accommodated now, but their accommodations would be curtailed by the improvements for the Treasury Department. The building to be leased was peculiarly adapted for the purpose, and the parties wished the city to decide at once. It was necessary to lay the order over, and it could be as well settled now as at any time.

Alderman Gibson thought it strange that it should be assumed as a reflection upon others because they wished to know their rights. He thought now was the time to know the rights of the city in the Charity Building.

Alderman Sayward repeated that the city had not the least control in that building, yet the Alderman had been in the City Council three years, and on the Committee on Public Buildings, and had not yet learned the fact.

Alderman Gaffield stated that he was on the committee which purchased the land for the building, and through the influence of the Overseers of the Poor $20,000 was contributed. Not less than $50,000 was saved the first year by means of it, and the building and land had been saved in seven years by it. An ordinance was adopted to put the building in charge of the Overseers of the Poor, and he should be sorry to have any order of inquiry adopted in relation to the control of it.

Alderman Power said it was not the question as to who had the control of the Charity Building, but the necessity for additional accommodations. The Board of Health was the only one for whom accommodations were required. The Board of Directors for Public Institutions had ample room for several years, and the committees could get along for two or three years just as well as they had done. The room of the Inspector of Milk could be used for the Board of Health, for his duties were not arduous, and he could be easily taken care of. Under present circumstances they were not warranted in running more in debt, and it would not be $7000 only, but $27,000, which would be the cost of the hiring of the building. It seemed to him they could get along without incurring this expense.

Alderman Sayward thought it singular that this question was not understood. Three orders had been referred by the City Council to the Committee on Public Buildings for distinct rooms, and on the best endeavors which the committee could make, they have found these rooms. If anything better could be done they would like to hear of it.

Alderman Power believed there were plenty rooms in the City Hall. The Assessors could get along until we could better afford enlarged accommodations, and others could be provided for as they had been.

Alderman Hulbert said there were fine rooms in the City Hall used as lumber rooms, and he could not see his way clear to vote for the order. Every department had all the accommodations needed and each could be comfortable without going outside of the building. Unimportant departments occupy fine rooms, and changes could be made so that they would not need another inch of room.

Alderman Sayward begged to differ from the Alderman. It would not do to put the Board of Directors up stairs, for it was not the board alone but the people who were to be accommodated.

Alderman Power suggested that the Inspector of Buildings might be put up stairs.

Alderman Sayward believed such would be a very inconsistent change, for many mechanics might be required to go up to the office forty or fifty or one hundred times a day. The Inspector might go up, but the public would be incommoded.

Alderman Power moved an indefinite postponement of the order.

Alderman Clark hoped the order would be laid over one week, and the motion was modified to that effect.

Alderman Sayward hoped neither motion would prevail. If the order was to be killed, it might as well be killed now. It would not in the least be a bad speculation, in hiring the rooms, and as so much would be saved in junketing, the expense would not be large.

Alderman Clark said it was not his object in having the order laid over to kill it. He should object to having the Directors for Public Institutions or the Board of Health go up stairs with the attendants of smallpox patients or other objectionable characters. If there was so much room in the building as had been stated, he should be glad to know it, and would like to know what changes it was proposed to make.

Alderman Sayward indicated some of the changes which might be made. Should the Directors of Public Institutions be removed elsewhere, their rooms could be occupied by the Board of Health, which would be suitable for their use. The room of the Inspector of Milk might be used as a committee room, and the Inspector provided for in Pemberton square. More room was needed for the Assessors, and more rooms was needed for the use of committees.

Alderman Gibson stated that in his explorations with the Alderman who went with him, they found two rooms in the lower end of the Court House which were occupied by some one in the country occasionally.

Alderman Sayward replied that they had no right to occupy the Court House for the city's use.

Alderman Stebbins inquired what became of the rooms of the Register of Deeds now that he is to go into new quarters.

Alderman Sayward replied that the rooms were all occupied by the Register, the old as well as the new ones, and a lease had been made for fifteen years for additional accommodations.

Alderman Gibson said they went through that as well as other buildings, but they had not a foot of room to spare. They spent half a day in their searches, without any dinner, and all the occupants claimed they had no room that was not needed. There were those rooms, which a man in the county occupied an hour a week.

Alderman Sayward inquired whether the Alderman visited the building which it was proposed to hire?

Alderman Gibson replied that he had not.

Alderman Quiney said the debate had satisfied him that there was no exigency for the hiring of the building proposed, and they might as well kill the order now.

Alderman Clark objected, for he did not know what was needed. He had not been to the building in Pemberton square.

Alderman Emery said he searched industriously for rooms, and he hoped the order would be laid over.

Alderman Sayward stated that if they wished to see the rooms in Pemberton square, they were open every day.

Alderman Clark hoped the order would be laid over and specially assigned.

Alderman Power had no objection to laying over the order, but not for the purpose of visiting Pemberton square. If suitable rooms were needed outside, the Parker House would be better and be more convenient. He could not see the necessity or exigency for hiring the rooms.

Alderman Gibson believed there was room enough, if they had mind enough to determine the matter. Suitable accommodations could be provided in the City Hall, and there were those who would take them if the present occupants were not satisfied.

The motion to lay over and assign to Monday next, 4½ o'clock, was carried.

Mr. Holden was again declared to be elected, in nonconcurrence.

The amendment to order concerning the taking of territory bounded by Northampton, Eustis, Albany and Washington streets, requesting the Mayor to petition for an act authorizing the City Council to require owners of lands in Boston, the surface of which is below the grade of fourteen feet above mean low water, to raise the grade thereof, and of private streets, courts and ways therein, for the purpose and on the conditions named in said order, was taken up for consideration.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 presented a remonstrance from Edward I. Browne for himself and co-trustee, under the will of Augustus Thorndike, protesting against the measure as an injustice, inasmuch as a large portion of said territory under their charge was once drained, and the drain had been broken down by the raising of the grade of Harrison avenue, and for the overflow of the territory they were indicted, and at an expense of $3000 they filled up the low territory, doing all they were required to do in the premises.

The remonstrance was ordered to be placed on file, and the amendment was concurred in.

CARRIAGE HIRE.

The adherence of the Board of Aldermen to their amendment to strike out "or for carriage hire" in the order concerning refreshments, etc., came up for concurrence.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 moved an indefinite postponement of the order, which was lost, by a vote of 23 to 25.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 regarded it as undignified to bandy this order back and forth between the branches. In its present form the measure could have effect only for the present year. If intended to be permanent, it should be made a restriction in the rules and orders, but as it now is, it must be taken up again another year. If the principle was right that carriage hire should not be allowed, then the provision should not be restored again. It was sufficient to say that the matter should have a careful consideration. The exclusion of carriage hire was due to this branch, and if carried out it would interfere with the successful prosecution of the business of the city. It was certainly worthy of the consideration of the Council, and as other matters required their attention, to give more time for such consideration, he moved to lay the order on the table.

The motion was carried.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order for flags to be displayed on the public buildings and grounds and a national salute to be fired at East Boston, South Boston, the city proper, Roxbury and Dorchester, on the anniversary of the birthday of George Washington.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Health be authorized to employ a principal clerk and such assistants as the Committee on Health may deem necessary for his department.

E. C. Drew and others, for a fire-alarm box on Commonwealth Hotel, corner of Worcester and Washington streets, and a communication from the Board of Engineers recommending the same. Referred to Committee on Fire Alarms.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16, from the Committee on Fire Department, reported leave to withdraw on petition of Pearson Brothers and others. Accepted.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9, from the Committee on Legislative Matters, on the part of the Common Council, who were instructed to take the necessary steps to secure an amendment of the act relating to the erection, occupation and use of stables in the city of Boston, so as to require the approval of the City Council hereafter, instead of the Board of Aldermen, made a report that if it should be found desirable to make any change in the present arrangement, the committee are of opinion that the Board of Health should have control of the matter; and they would therefore recommend that the order be referred to the Joint Committee on Legislative Matters, with authority to take such action as they deem expedient. Accepted.

ORDER PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Prescott of Ward 9—

Ordered, That in consideration of the payment of $8000 by the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, his Honor the Mayor be authorized to give a release and discharge to said corporation from all claims and demands for damages, costs and expenses to the estates situated upon the westerly side of Washington street, between Chapman street and Orange street, on account of the raising of the grade of said Washington street or Orange street and Castle street, under the order of the Board of Aldermen, approved the 9th May, 1870, and the indenture between the City of Boston and the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, bearing date the 9th of May, 1870, so far as the said indenture applies to the said estates.

Ordered, That the order passed March 15, 1872, authorizing the Mayor to execute a release to the Boston & Albany Railroad Corporation be and the same is hereby rescinded.

Mr. Anderson of Ward 3 offered an order that the City Engineer be requested to inspect the arches of the towers on the Boston & Lowell Railroad Depot, and report whether, in his opinion, such arches are safe.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the order was referred to the Committee on the Engineer's Department.

CONTESTED ELECTION CASE.

The report on petition of William M. Flanders and others, in relation to the seat occupied in this Board by George A. Shaw, (Printed City Doc. No. 20, 1873), with the order, proposed as a substitute for said report, declaring said seat vacant, was taken up.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he did not differ with the committee as to the statement of facts, but differed with them as to their conclusions. There was one witness to show that Mr. Shaw said he designed to return to Boston, yet not to Ward 5, and it would not be supposed that a man could go to Brookline and live there six years, and claim to have a domicile in Boston. Under the constitution, habitancy is defined as a place where a person dwelleth and hath his home, and the City Charter provides that no one can be chosen to the City Council who is not an inhabitant of the ward from which he is chosen. The conclusions of the committee were quoted by Mr. Perkins, upon which he remarked that he believed them to be in error in their interpretation of law.

When a man moves into a place, he contended that the burden of proof was upon him to show that he is not a resident elsewhere. As applicable to this case, he cited the case of Holmes vs. Greene of Fall River for refusing to receive his vote; and although Mr. Holmes removed to Tiverton, temporarily, the court was of opinion that the evidence all pointed to Tiverton as his habitation. A mere naked declaration of intent was not sufficient to determine the question of domicile; but the evidence of intent should be taken in connection with other facts. The cases of Harvard College vs. Gore, and Whitney vs. Town of Sherborn were also cited as having a bearing on the question. In the last-mentioned case it was held that as a man's residence must be somewhere, and as he had no intention of returning to Ashland, from whence he removed, the authorities of Sherborn had a right to tax him.

When Mr. Shaw left Ward 5 he did not determine upon any length of stay in Brookline, or of his return to Ward 5. In Sleeper vs. Page 15th Gray, it was held that when a debtor was absent from the State, not intending to return at any definite time, he had no domicile here. In an investigation of the subject he was surprised in looking up cases, to see how strongly they were against the conclusions of the committee, and he could not stultify himself by voting to sustain the report. The case of John C. Tucker, whose election was contested in the Council from Ward 3, was cited as applicable to this case, and in that Mr. Tucker resigned, knowing that he would be unseated. Many other authorities, he said, might also be cited to show the erroneous conclusions of the committee.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 said the report was the result of the unanimous opinion of the committee, and it fell to his lot to draw it up. As to the facts in the case, his colleague had made one misstatement, that there was no evidence to show that Mr. Shaw intended to return again to Ward 5. On page 61, the testimony of Mr. Homer was that Mr. Shaw told him that he meant to keep his residence in Boston. The case of Holmes vs. Greene he had examined, but it was not sustained by decisions before or after it, and was not considered by lawyers as intelligible. It was not satisfactory, and Judge Bigelow being questioned upon it had not explained it. If the city solicitor was right, then the conclusions of the committee were right.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said they all had a simple duty to perform, from which they could not escape. He had no concern in bringing this question here, but must pass upon it conscientiously. Taking it away from the refinements of law, they would be compelled to say that the gentleman had not been a resident of Boston for six years, for where a man's habitation is, was where he dwelleth and has his home, where he eats, drinks and sleeps. Where a man has two residences, two dwelling houses in each of which he lives a portion of the year, the fact and the intent must go together to determine his habitation. A bare and bald intent or itself amounts to nothing, for a man cannot create a home out of nothing. In what he had to say he had not the slightest intent to call in question the honor of the gentleman, for he did not doubt he believed he could retain his residence in Boston.

Mr. Dean cited the cases of Holmes vs. Greene and Sleeper vs. Page, and urged that if the views of the committee were sustained, all of the members of the Common Council might remove to the neighboring towns, continue to represent the wards they moved from, and yet have no interests in common with the residents of the city. The strongest evidence given was that of Mr. Homer, who says Mr. Shaw told him that he intended to return to Boston, but there was no fixed time of returning. On page 68 it is testified that he said he was in Brookline on account of his aged parents, or his wife's parents. He might stay there as long as they lived, when the law says there must be a fixed time to determine the question. How long were they to live, and if he could live there for that reason, and should assume that it is healthier there than in the city for his children, he might live there as long as his children might live. They might all go into the country, and so long as we or their children live they might represent some ward in the city.

It appeared that the gentleman did return to Boston in November, 1872, and the report shows that he went to Ward 10 to reside. The case was just one of those where legal refinements throw no light upon it. He hoped, therefore, that they would settle it in accordance with the plain constructions of law.

Mr. Train of Ward 13 said that as a plain member of the committee, not a lawyer, he might possibly throw some light upon the report of the committee. The petitioners in every instance failed to show any evidence against the position occupied by Mr. Shaw. In the first draft of the question put to the City Solicitor the word "necessarily" was not in it, but the question put under the facts was, "was his domicile lost or not?" to which the City Solicitor gave an emphatic "No." That fact settled the question in his mind. The evidence showed that Mr. Shaw refused to take part in meetings in Brookline, and that had weight in the case, the voters in Ward 5 voted for him for office, and if he had not had a legal residence there, why did they vote for him?

Mr. Holmes said, in relation to the question of intent, Mr. Shaw said he meant to continue a resident of Boston. If nothing else than his denial of his residence in Brookline, it would be enough, but something more than that was shown.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 said the arguments of the gentleman against the report of the committee failed to convince him that it was not correct. There were certain presumptions in the case which should have weight. The people in Ward 5 elected him to the Council, and they knew what they were about. In the case of Holmes vs. Greene, the facts were not as in this case. Had Mr. Shaw gone away and returned, and been refused a vote, then there would have been a similarity. But there was a different state of facts.

Mr. Shaw had been recognized as having a residence in Ward 5 by taxing him, continuing his name on the voting list, and by the people voting for him in sending him to the Legislature, and electing him to other offices. As reference had been made to rummaging old law books, he had done something of that kind, and some of the cases he cited as having an application to the question. West Boylston and Sterling, in the 17th Pickering; Harvard College vs. Gore; Sears vs. City of Boston; Cochrane vs. City of Boston, 4th Allen; the last of which he regarded as a strong case, it being shown that Cochrane had his family residing in Boston two years, yet it was held that his residence was in New Orleans.

It had been charged, he said, that Mr. Shaw attempted to ride two horses, but he had always declined to call Brookline his residence. He regarded the people as having some rights in this matter, and it was their affair, if they chose to elect Mr. Shaw to represent them. Even if they should elect him while not living there, it was not a very bad thing. In Ward 5 the population had greatly changed. From having been the residences of Webster and Everett and others of that class, the power of that class had diminished, and it was no disparagement of another class which was now greater there, to say that it was a good thing for them and others to be represented by those who do not reside there constantly. If the Council do as they ought to in relation to the law and the facts, they must sanction the report of the committee.

On motion of Mr. Jones of Ward 14, the yeas and nays were ordered on the question.

Mr. Powers of Ward 4 said he had read the testimony fully, and he could not see how the committee could come to any other conclusion than they did. The question of domicile had been a difficult one, and was often determined by juries under instruction of courts. Mr. Shaw had been called to Brookline on account of the infirmities of his wife's father and mother. There was no dispute that he had a residence in Ward 5, and never acquired a residence in Brookline, and it was in evidence that he always intended to return. It was of no consequence that he spent a night in the ward on the last night in April, as it was common to see on the Back Bay that windows were boarded up on the 1st of May by those who left for the country to avoid taxation. There was great looseness in the law in regard to domicile, and he liked the bill which had been introduced into the Legislature to define it more clearly.

Mr. Dean thought it strange logic in commending a bill which required a man's residence to be defined where he spent the greater portion of the year, and supposing it should be made a law, what effect would it have on the gentleman from Ward 5? What object could there be in such a law, when it is said that a man don't reside where he does reside? It was said the people have rights, but the members of the Council must pass upon such questions, under oath, and if they believed in the rights of the people, it was the only logic by which their rights could be sustained, that they be so in accordance with law. Mr. Dean cited other cases as bearing on the question.

With reference to the case of Mr. Shaw, he did not doubt he thought he could retain his residence in Boston, while living elsewhere, and thought it desirable for various reasons. But the constitution told them that a man belongs where he resides and has his home. Every member of the Council knows that very well. In regard to the first question put to Mr. Healy, it was either intended to cover the case of Mr. Shaw, or it was not frankly put. Mr. Shaw might have taken the stand and settled the question. Mr. Healy virtually puts his residence in Brookline. In deciding the question, they had the constitution to guide them, and should be governed by it.

Mr. Holmes stated that the word "inhabitaney" does not give light, but defining it is but working in a circle, and does not help us in the slightest degree. As to the fourth question to Mr. Healy it is not stated properly, but was put to meet the conclusions to be reached at the earliest period. But it was found that the facts were different from what appeared by question four. As to the matter of evidence, Mr. Shaw might have made a statement, and he offered himself to petitioners, who did not see fit to examine him, he did not know for what reason. He was perfectly ready to answer. As to the question of law, it only provides that there may be a definite intention to return, but not at any fixed moment. The intention may be definite but the time indefinite.

Mr. Dean referred again to the Sherborn case in the 12th Allen, with reference to the indefinite length of time or temporary residence affecting domicile. If indefinite, there could be no limit to it, and if Mr. Shaw had determined to come back, but that time was illimitable, he might have stayed away forever, and yet claimed to have been a resident of Ward 5, and represented it as long as he lived. When he did return it was to Ward 10, and there was no evidence that he intended to return to Ward 5.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, in his own defence, denied that any evidence could be found to show that he designed to remain in Brookline so long as his wife's parents lived, and on the question of intent he proceeded to answer the gentleman from Ward 12 in language of his own in the contested election against Melville E. Ingalls, Senator from the Sixth Suffolk District. This he read from Senate document 146, 1868. The argument made here was different from that made at that time. Mr. Shaw further stated that he had voted forty-nine times in twenty-five years, in the city, not a great distance from the United States Hotel, and never anywhere else except in the old Ward 5, when he was elected to the Council. In the present ward he had ever otherwise voted, under changes of boundaries, and had been elected to the Legislature and to the Council from that ward, and had paid his taxes here and not in Brookline.

Besides this, he had never taken any interest in matters in Brookline, and had never been in the Town Hall there but once and that to hear Mr. Derby on the subject of annexation. In the delicate position in which he had been placed, he would not have said anything here except for the attack upon him, and he was ready to have answered any question which might have been asked of him when before the committee. He had never doubted what the result of this contest would be, and would not have said anything but for the interference in his family affairs, which he assumed to be a piece of cruelty and inhumanity on the part of those who were opposed to him.

Mr. Dean denied that there had been any attack upon the gentleman from Ward 5, or any calling in question his motives. In what had been stated in relation to his wife's parents, it related solely to his intent, and to sustain the point made by him he quoted from page 61, in which Mr. Shaw said he intended to stay there in Brookline "while the old folks lived," and if it was his intention to live there under such circumstances he had a right to live there while his children lived, and might live there always, and yet claim to represent this city in the Council, under which all the members of the Council might live out of town.

In the case of Mr. Ingalls, he claimed that the case would not sustain the gentleman from Ward 5, for Mr. Ingalls had been in this State the five years provided by law, during which he returned to Maine temporarily and kept school there. The fact that he paid a tax there and voted did not affect his residence here, for the law of Maine was different from that of Massachusetts in allowing a vote on a residence of three months, and in his views in relation to the position of Mr. Ingalls he was sustained by H. W. Paine, who was associated with him in the case.

Mr. Holmes made a few additional remarks in relation to the intent of Mr. Shaw in returning to the city, and closed by moving the previous question, which was sustained.

The motion to substitute the order of Mr. Perkins that Mr. Shaw was not entitled to his seat, was lost, by a vote of 10 to 40, as follows:

Yeas—Blackmar, Burditt, Caton, Dean, Flynn, Harrington, Perkins, Thacher, West, Whiston—10.

Nays—Abbott, Adams, Anderson, Barnes, Bieknell, Bleiler, Boardman, Brackett, Brennan, Burt, Collins, Cudworth, Dacey, Davis, Denny, N. Doherty, Flatley, Hall, Hine, Holmes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Lamb, Marston, Martin, McCue, Page, Pease, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Train, Upham, Warren, Wells, Weston, Wilbur, Woodward—40.

The report of the committee was then accepted. Adjourned.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS.

The report of the Inspector of Buildings was laid before the Board in print.

The report states that the number of permits issued last year by the Inspector was 1945—of which 419 were for buildings of brick or stone, 685 of wood, and 841 for repairs, alterations and additions. Of the brick and stone buildings erected, there were 647 dwelling houses, 98 for mercantile purposes, 75 dwellings and stores, 34 family hotels and tenement houses, 26 stables, 23 mechanical, 7 public buildings, 18 stores and offices, 4 churches. The largest number, 263, was in Ward 15 the next, 127, in Ward 9. Of the whole number, 754 were with Mansard roofs.

Of the 1051 wood and frame buildings erected, or in process of erection, 768 were dwellings, 73 stables, 46 dwellings and stores, 27 for storage, 20 stores and offices, 35 mechanical. Of these 296 were in Ward 16, 240 in Ward 12, 116 in Ward 15, 110 in Ward 14, and 217 in Ward 1. Of these 512 were with Mansard roofs.

The number of violations, etc., investigated and reported upon was 387; 205 for violation of statutes, and 182 for violation of ordinance. Of these 86 were of woodwork against flues, 62 chimneys not plastered, 47 small sized timber, 38 walls not carried through roof, 23 building without permit, 23 insufficient foundation, 15 erecting wooden buildings within building limits.

The number of unsafe buildings, etc., examined and reported upon was 126, of which 60 were unsafe buildings, 46 unsafe chimneys, 8 each unsafe heating apparatus and defective flues, 2 each unsafe boilers and unsafe oven and wall. There were of these 65 secured, 10 removed, 25 rebuilt, 26 not completed.

The number of fires reported on, exclusive of the fire of November 9-10, was 216.

Estimated damage.....	$291,719
" loss by fire of Nov. 9-10.....	13,218,350

Total loss for 1872.....	$13,510,569
--------------------------	--------------

The fire of Nov. 9-10 burned over a territory of about sixty-five acres, containing about 550 estates and 776 buildings. It will be noticed that the estimated loss by the great fire, given above, is less than estimates which have heretofore been made, owing to the fact that while former estimates included all buildings within the line of the fire as a total loss, allowance has been made, in making up the above estimates, for all buildings which were only partially destroyed or slightly damaged.

As the probable causes of fires, there were attributed as follows: 31 incendiary, 16 defective flues, 78 unknown, 6 children playing with matches, 5 overheated stoves, 2 defective stoves, 4 thawing of water pipes, 2 overheated and unsafe ovens, 7 overheated furnaces and funnels defective, and 4 from defective chimneys, and 8 from combustible materials, new boilers, explosions, overheating, etc., 5 spontaneous combustion, 3 from forges, 2 from firecrackers, 1 hot ashes in barrel, 7 gas burners and defective pipes, 2 kerosene lamps, 1 by mice among matches, one each matches thrown in basement window and among waste paper, one lighted pipe in coat pocket, 5 defective stove pipes and near woodwork.

Referring to the fire of November last, the report states that attention was called to the necessity of additional building regulations in January, 1872, and an extract is made from the report on the subject. The Committee on the Department prepared amendments, which were submitted to the Legislature, but for reasons unnecessary to detail, failed to become a law.

The report proceeds as follows:

Immediately after the fire, the same committee was again called upon to prepare whatever amendments they felt were required to secure the future safety of the city, with the assurance that whatever they presented would be acceptable. Fortunately the committee was composed of practical men and builders of long experience, who well understood the requirements of the city, and who, as builders, would not be likely to approve of any measures which would be onerous or impracticable. They were urged to prepare a few amendments to the old law, to be acted upon at the special session of the Legislature of 1872, leaving the bulk of the bill to b presented in 1873; but having the rejected bill of 1872 as a basis, and a year's experience in the management of the department, they felt that they could prepare a bill which would cover the whole ground and avoid the necessity of again appealing to the Legislature. Accordingly, with the advice and assistance of some of the leading architects in the city, a bill was prepared and presented to the Legislature. Considering the excited state of public feeling at the time, the bill was much less stringent than might have been expected; but the committee, in preparing it, were careful not to incorporate anything which they, as builders, could not stand by.

This law, if carried out, will secure our city from another disaster like that of last November, while, at the same time, it is less stringent in its provisions than the building acts of other cities. As might be expected, the law meets with opposition from some of our builders, and it is doubtful if one could be framed which would meet with their entire approbation. A provision which one builder will condemn as severe and stringent will be approved by another builder of equally good judgment and reputation. Each builder has his peculiar method of construction, and any change from that method provokes criticism, and oftentimes condemnation, simply because it differs from his idea; while at the same time another builder will approve of any change which will secure a methodical manner of construction, and which will fix a standard alike for all. As all trades and professions disagree in opinions and theories, and in view of the impossibility of reconciling the different opinions, the public safety demands that a fair standard shall be fixed by which all shall abide. Some of the provisions of the present law might perhaps be safely modified or repealed, but, in the main, it is just what is needed for our city, and should not by any means be permitted to be weakened.

Since the fire, the subjects of building materials, fire-proof construction, methods of extinguishing fires, etc., have received considerable attention, and this department has received numerous communications on these subjects. As far as seen, brick seems to be the only material which withstood the flames. Stone and iron were utterly destroyed by the intense heat, and the action of water caused its complete disintegration. Marble was not fairly tested, the marble front on Washington street, which has been alluded to as having successfully resisted the fire, being protected by a backing of brick which received the full force of the flames. Marble, however, will be extensively used in rebuilding, and of the sixty-eight buildings on the burnt district, for which permits have been granted, thirty-two will have marble fronts. But when exposed to the fury of such a conflagration as that of last November, it matters little of what material a building is composed. Let a fire once get under such headway, and beyond the control of the Fire Department, and a few moments suffice to reduce the building to ashes. Security, therefore, consists not in endeavoring to construct isolated fire-proof buildings, but in so constructing every building that a fire may be confined to the building in which it originated, even if that is destroyed.

Buildings in process of erection, alteration, or repair have been inspected from time to time, during the year, and reports are made by the Assistant Inspectors daily. The additional number of Assistant-inspectors provided by the City Council will enable the department to exercise a more careful supervision. A glance at the record of violations which have been reported upon will show the necessity of careful inspection, but it is gratifying to be able to report that these violators have been removed, in most cases, without resorting to legal measures. In one instance it was found necessary to prosecute a builder for not plastering his chimneys, and he was convicted and fined for his offence; and there are now in the hands of the City Solicitor a few cases in which legal proceedings have not yet been commenced. In addition to the daily reports which are received on the progress of buildings, a final report is received upon the completion of each building, and put upon record. This record gives a description of the building, etc., and is often consulted by purchasers and others interested in real estate. A table appended, compiled from this record, will show the number of brick buildings completed during the year.

Early in the year a careful examination was made of the several places of amusement in the city, and the condition of the heating apparatus, etc., inspected. As a general thing, the condition of these places was found very satisfactory, and the few suggestions made to the proprietors were cheerfully complied with.

Much improvement has been made in the construction of wooden buildings during the year. The Building ordinance which went into effect January 1, 1872, specifies the minimum size of timbers, requires proper framing, and the building of suitable foundations. Under its provisions, "balloon" framing has been done away with, and a more substantial class of buildings erected. The building limits remain unchanged, but during the year a petition has been received from citizens of Wards 7 and 12, supplemented by one from the presidents of the insurance companies, asking that the limits be extended so as to include these wards. These petitions have been referred to the committee on this department, and doubtless will receive their early consideration. The number of wooden buildings in these wards is rapidly increasing, permits for 277 having been issued during the year.

During the year John B. Roys has been appointed Assistant-Inspector, in place of Job T. Souther, resigned. More clerical assistance is needed in the department, and a Surveyor attached to it for the purpose of giving grades, etc.

The report was ordered to be sent down.

HEARINGS ON ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The hearings on orders of notice on petitions of Joseph Watson, for leave to locate and use a steam boiler and engine at 127 Portland street; also on petition of Bartlett & Richardson, for leave to locate a steam boiler at 389 Broadway, and on the proposed rebuilding of the Summer-street sewer, were taken up. No person appearing in relation thereto the reports were recommitted.

HEARING ON REVOCATION OF RAILROAD LOCATION.

The hearing on order of notice on the proposed revocation of a right to lay tracks on Walnut avenue by the Metropolitan Railroad Company was taken up.

Harvey Jewell, for the Metropolitan Railroad Company, said he came here to say that the location was granted a long time ago, that there was no necessity for the track at the time, and there had been no demand for it by the residents on that street. There was no immediate use for such track, and the corporation had no desire to extend their tracks, but they objected to a revocation of the right to lay them, not from a wish to avail themselves of it now, but they wished when the residents desired the facilities, that they may have the privilege of furnishing them, and that it should not be granted to any other corporation.

If he could have had an interview with the member of the Board who offered the order he could have assured him that what he desired to accomplish could be secured without its adoption, and with a consultation with him and with the City Solicitor such an arrangement as he desires can be made. They were willing to agree that the street shall not be opened for the purpose of laying tracks without a permit from the Superintendent of Streets, and that a notice of ten, twenty or thirty days shall be given. They only desired to preserve their rights, but would agree not to lay tracks in the streets without the wishes of the inhabitants. They were entirely willing to have the opening of streets to be subject only to proper notice, and if the report should be recommitted, an arrangement would be agreed to to accomplish what the mover of the order desires.

A petition was read from J. H. Chadwick and some forty others, against the laying of tracks in Walnut avenue, and in favor of the revocation of the right to lay such tracks by the Metropolitan Railroad Company.

The report was recommitted, and the petition was referred to the committee.

ADDITIONAL ACCOMMODATIONS FOR PUBLIC OFFICES.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the report and order to hire the Missionary Building in Pemberton square, at an annual rent of $7000, for city purposes, was taken up and considered.

A petition was read from the First Baptist Society, signed by Erastus D. Badger, chairman of a committee, proposing to let to the city in their house on Somerset street spacious and commodious rooms at a rent of $1500 and taxes, having an exclusive entrance thereto, the same having been occupied heretofore as a schoolroom.

Alderman Power moved an indefinite postponement of the order.

Alderman Clark said there appeared to be a difference of opinion in the Board as to the necessity of going out of the City Hall for office accommodations, and it was believed other rooms at a less rate could be had. He hoped the order would be laid over another week, and that the petition just read would be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings. He had been assured that the rooms in question were large, light and airy, a capital place for the Board of Health or Directors of Public Institutions, and they could be had for $1500 instead of $10,000.

Alderman Sayward said he had no objection to laying over the order, yet he had received a note from the parties in charge of the Missionary Building, wishing to be released from their offer, unless the building was engaged at once. These rooms might be lost by delay, and it might be very difficult to get such rooms as may be wanted, if this opportunity should be lost. His belief was that it was the best thing for the city to hire these rooms. It had been said that there were other rooms to be had in Pemberton square, but he had made inquiries, and could find none. He had inquired also whether the price for the building was extravagant, but could not learn that it was so. They may lose the building unless the order is soon adopted.

Alderman Power believed they had nothing to risk. The rent of the building proposed to be hired was exorbitant, and there would be no difficulty in obtaining accommodations much more reasonable. It was true the building was pleasantly situated, more so than any other, unless on the other corner; but other rooms could be had at a lower rent. Yet they did not need accommodations outside of the City Hall, and they could get along for two or three years as they had done, without detriment to the public business. There was ample room in the City Hall for all parties, and this Board was the proper place to decide the question. He could not run round to the various offices to see what more accommodations they wanted, and they were to decide how it was advisable to get along and not expend more of the public money than necessary.

Alderman Sayward replied that the gentleman had not visited the building in question to see what its accommodations were. He had made inquiries in Pemberton square, and was assured that there was no building to rent. He had also inquired of those who were good judges, who said the rent asked for was not extravagant, and he believed it would be a good investment by the city, for they needed more room. If the object was to save money, they might hire cheap rooms, and let the rooms in the City Hall. He had not gone among officers to inquire whether they wanted more room, but knew that all the departments were not accommodated.

Alderman Emery said he went with the Alderman from Ward 16 to look at the building it was proposed to hire, and was well satisfied with the rooms. He had examined them and believed it would be a good trade for any one who wished them. They would afford good accommodations for the purposes for which they were wanted. He should be reluctant to go from the City Hall if accommodations could be had here, and if accommodations could be had he had nothing to say. More rooms they must have, and he knew of none so eligible as those proposed. There were other rooms to let in Pemberton square, less commodious and at a less rent, but if we could secure these they will be better suited. He had no objection to having the order laid over.

Alderman Gibson said it was understood the Board of Health would not be satisfied to go upon the lower floor of the City Hall, and if so, the measure would be defeated in the other branch. There was no alternative, then, but to go out of the building.

Alderman Emery said he had heard of rooms to rent in Montgomery place, at $3000, but these were not to be had and they would not be so well adapted to the purpose for which they were needed. It was possible some of the Aldermen knew something about them.

Alderman Clark said he did not believe the Aldermen were conversant with such rooms. There would be a meeting of the board on Wednesday or Thursday, and it may be necessary to go outside of the City Hall for rooms. Meantime the Committee on Public Buildings can look at the rooms which have been offered in the church on Somerset street, which are large and airy. These rooms have been used for a young ladies' school, and may be all that are wanted for the Board of Health or the Directors of Public Institutions. As the price is low, they were worth looking at. Rooms must be had, for the Board of Health could not continue to occupy their present quarters without contracting disease. As there were no other rooms here which they can have, they must be had outside. The rent of the Missionary Building would not be $7000 alone, but $2500 additional for fitting the rooms up.

Alderman Power said the shoe pinches where he supposed it would. There were no rooms which suit those who are to occupy them. No doubt the Parker House would be a much pleasanter place. But the Board were to be the judges of the rooms. There were rooms enough in the City Hall, and they were to decide who were to make use of them. The expense of the building proposed would be from $25,000 or $30,000, for the alterations would amount to more than the rent. There were other rooms in Pemberton square, if necessary, to be had, which would not cost more than $3500 rent, and would give three-quarters as much accommodation as the Missionary Building. There were no doubt ample rooms in the church if they were needed.

Alderman Sayward said he wished to settle this question, and he would leave it to that gentleman as a committee to assign rooms to all the occupants in the City Hall.

Alderman Power believed there would be little difficulty in settling the matter in fifteen minutes. If the occupants did not like their rooms, others could be found who would accept them, and they would not dare dissent from the assignment.

Alderman Sayward did not believe there would be any dread, for the elections were all settled for the year, and the Aldermen were safe in their places for the year.

The motion to lay the order over was carried, and the petition of the Baptist church was referred to the committee with the request that they visit the rooms in question.

SALARY BILL.

The report and orders to fix the salaries of the several city officers for 1873-4 (City Doc. 27), was taken up. The changes from the previous year, as indicated by a portion of the report already published, are as follows.

The allowance for clerk hire in the Treasurer's office is increased $1600, another clerk being required to collect assessments for betterment, etc.

The allowance for clerk hire in the Auditor's office is increased $700.

The allowance for clerk hire in the City Clerk's office is increased $200.

The salary of the Assistant Clerk of Committees is increased $270.

The salary of the Assistant-Messenger is increased $300.

The salary of the City Surveyor is increased $500.

The salary of the Superintendent of Health is increased $300.

The salary of the City Physician is increased from $1500 to $3000. Under the new organization of the Health Department, it appears that the entire time of the City Physician will be required in the service of the city during the ensuing year.

The allowance for clerk hire in the City Registrar's office is increased $1360, the employment of an additional clerk having been found necessary.

The salary of the Superintendent of Streets is increased $300.

The salary of the Superintendent of Buildings is increased $300.

The salary of the Chief Truant Officer is increased $300.

The allowance for clerk hire in the Assessor's Department is increased $1000.

The total amount of increase recommended is—on salaries, $3750; on clerk hire, $4860.

The salary of Inspector of Provisions, a new office, is fixed at $2000.

The salaries under the first order were passed without comment, until that of the Clerk of Committees was reached, when Alderman Clark moved to increase it from $3300 to $3800. In support of the amendment, he stated that the present salary was inadequate for the service performed. He commended the Clerk of Committees as one of the most efficient officers in the City Hall, whose duties were arduous, and from whom the members of the City Government and those connected with different departments received much assistance and information.

The motion to amend was carried.

On reading section five of the second order, fixing the salary of the Harbor Master, Alderman Clark inquired the duties of that officer, and said he had understood the office might be abolished.

Alderman Power replied that the office could not be abolished, although it was possible a change could be made in relation to it. The Harbor Master must be a person familiar with the harbor and with its lines, so that in the anchoring of vessels they shall not interfere with the commerce of the port; and it was his duty that no interference was made with the shipping. It was his duty also to furnish berths for vessels, and to see to the removal of obstructions by vessels sunk. He supposed the Alderman had got his impression from statements that the Harbor Police might discharge the duties of the office. They might if they were good pilots. There was no complaint against the present incumbent of the office, and he presumed he does his duty. The office was not so important as in New York, where the profits were $50,000 a year.

Alderman Clark said the explanation was satisfactory, for he had understood that the duties of the office could be performed by the Harbor Police, and that the office was of little consequence.

Alderman Gibson said it was a duty of the Harbor Master to see to keeping the channel open. But there were, besides the Harbor Master, the Harbor Police, Harbor Committee and the fire boat, and most of them had not much to do. Possibly there might be some saving by combining the duties of these offices.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the salary of the Clerk of the Board of Street Commissioners was increased from $1500 to $2300. The Alderman bore testimony to the faithfulness and capacity of the present incumbent of the office, and Mr. Jenkins, he observed, was richly entitled to the increase.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Section 3 of the order relating to the salary of the Clerk to the Committee on Health was stricken out, provision having been made otherwise for the said office.

Alderman Power objected to section four of the same order, fixing the salary of the City Physician at $3000, and hoped it would not pass.

The ordinance in relation to the new Board of Health he said he had something to do with framing, and it was believed the physician to be appointed as a member of the board would act as City Physician, for he could do all its duties without any trouble. In view of the intentions of the framers of the ordinance, when the duties of the City Physician would be lessened, and action had been taken for a general vaccination, which was one of the principal and most disagreeable duties, with most of the labor taken from him, and to double the salary, was out of all reason. The proposal would raise the salary to that of most of the heads of departments, who devote their whole time to the city, and whose responsibilities amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars, and he would labor only just as much as he pleased.

No one could serve two masters, and he could not vote for the increase of salary unless the duties of the office were defined. He could not either make such a distinction between the salary of this officer and that of the physician who was confined to the island. The intentions of the committee were that the member of the board who was a physician should perform all the duties of the office, and he did not see why he could not. Such, too, were the intentions of the whole City Government in establishing the new Board of Health. If the City Physician was to devote his whole time to the city, he should not object to the salary.

Alderman Stebbins read from the ordinance defining the duties of the office, and stated that in the discharge of duties in ascertaining causes of death in certain cases, which he was required to do, there would be a saving of $600 a year, which was now paid out, as he learned from the City Registrar was the case last year.

Alderman Power stated that four physicians had been employed in each ward in vaccinating the people, and there would be but little of that to do. He would make no objection if the City Physician was to give his whole time to the city, as the Board of Health were expected to do, but there was where the trouble comes, that he had a different standing from other officers. Before increasing the salary he hoped the ordinance would be altered so that the City Physician should attend to no other business.

Alderman Stebbins said if the Alderman would offer an amendment to that effect he would agree to it. He did not know who the City Physician will be for another year, and his remarks seemed to reflect upon the present City Physician.

Alderman Power denied that it was any reflection upon the present City Physician.

Alderman Stebbins stated that he happened to know that the present City Physician had faithfully discharged the duties of his office, more than the public were aware of. His labors were not only during the day, but extended far into the night. He had given up his private practice and also the office connected with the Dispensary, to devote himself entirely to the interests of the city.

Alderman Clark did not suppose the office was to be abolished by the establishment of the Board of Health, nor that the duties were increased by the board, an able physician being comprised in it. In years past the office had been thought to be desirable at a salary of $1500 a year, and it would be a little singular if the labor should be more arduous with the duties diminished. It was a fact that the office had been much sought after, yet for an able man to devote himself entirely to the duties of the office it could not be expected that his services could be had for less than $3000. He asked that the section be stricken out and laid on the table, that they might be better informed as to what was expected of that officer.

The motion was carried—6 to 5.

On motion of Alderman Power, the salary of the Superintendent of Sewers was increased to $3500.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the salary of the Superintendent of Streets was increased to $3800; in support of which he said, that while he agreed as to the efficiency of the Clerk of Committees, the Superintendent of Streets ought to have as large a salary as the Clerk of Committees had, as so large interests were committed to his charge.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the salary of the Superintendent of Public Buildings was increased to $3800.

Alderman Power moved to increase the salary of the Superintendent of Printing to $3000. It was a new office, he said, and he had been chairman of the Committee on Printing during his whole service in the Board, and while he was opposed to raising the salary last year, he had found the superintendent to be an honest and faithful officer, and through the creation of the office a great saving had been effected. It was due chiefly to his honesty and integrity that these results had been brought about, and his salary should be increased.

Alderman Gaffield said it was designed by the Committee on Printing to ask for an increase of the salary, and it would have been reported favorably upon, but it was too late for the report. He heartily agreed with the remarks of the preceding Alderman.

The amendment was adopted.

Alderman Power moved to increase the salary of the Superintendent of the Federal-street Bridge to $1300, the double draw requiring two additional assistants, and with the increase it would yield him only about as much as he had been receiving.

Alderman Gibson inquired if he fed his own horses. Alderman Power replied that he supposed the city fed the horses. An additional horse would also be required.

The amendment was adopted.

The section relating to salaries of truant officers was stricken out and laid on the table.

Alderman Gibson moved to increase the salary of the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department from $3500 to $3800, and said he deserved every dollar of that amount.

Alderman Clark advocated the motion as a matter of justice to a faithful and efficient officer. If there was an efficient Fire Department in the United States it was in the city of Boston, and if there was an officer who did his duty faithfully and honestly, it was the present Chief-Engineer.

The amendment was adopted.

Alderman Sayward moved to strike from section four of the order relating to the Fire Department, the words, "except those located in Ward 16," believing the duties of the firemen in that locality to be as much and as worthy of full pay as those of other sections of the city.

Alderman Gibson inquired if they performed as much service.

Alderman Sayward replied that they did not do as much as some firemen did, but they did as much as those of East Boston, South Boston and Roxbury.

Alderman Gibson objected to paying as much, if not as much service was rendered.

Alderman Sayward replied that as much service was rendered as by those of the sections mentioned by him.

Alderman Power stated that those firemen may not be called out so often, but they had more ground to travel over, and as their duties had become more arduous, they should be put on an equal footing with others.

Alderman Gibson said he understood their duties were not quite so great last year, when it was proposed to increase their pay.

Alderman Power said it was asked to increase the pay last year, but it was not looked upon so favorably as now, when their duties had increased, and the alarms in that section had been more frequent than last year.

Alderman Gibson moved a reference of the section to the Committee on Fire Department.

Alderman Sayward did not object to a reference, but contended that the firemen of that section should be on an equal footing with those of other sections of the city, their labors being more than those of East Boston.

Alderman Quincy was of the belief that for discipline and for efficiency of the force, there should be no discriminations in regard to pay. They were all under the same orders and were liable to be called out at any time.

Alderman Clark did not understand that the members of the Fire Department were on duty so much as members of the police in the same ward, and while the police performed the same amount of duty in all sections of the city, the firemen in that section were not called out one-sixth as much as in the old sections of the city, in which there was hardly a night in which they were not called out from one to three or four times. The pay might be too much in some sections, but the cases of the firemen and police were different.

Alderman Power did not believe the difference in labor was as much as the difference in pay. The pay was not half as much as it ought to be, and he believed it to be better to have the pay equal. There was a difference in the service of the police, who had the same pay, between a beat on North street and one in Ward 16.

Alderman Clark believed no firemen had a cleaner record than had those of this city, but he failed to see so much service performed by those of Ward 16, and he thought the remarks of the Alderman were a reflection upon the services of firemen.

Alderman Power said he designed no reflection in his remarks. The pay of firemen was about $300 a year, while that of policemen was $3 a day. If there was no alarm there was no discount on the pay, and the firemen should be so paid, that when their duties were extraordinary, they would not expect to have any additional pay. There was no better Fire Department than in Boston, and the firemen of Ward 16 let themselves to go when they were called. They were ready and willing to go when they were called upon, and found no fault in being called out.

Alderman Sayward said the Alderman from Ward 4 had stated the question fairly, that there should be no difference in the pay of firemen, who were all liable to be called upon at all times, and were ready and willing to discharge their duties. If it was not enough, he would agree to vote for more. It was true that some of the firemen had more duty to perform than others, but justice required that after working for three years for less pay, the pay of these firemen should be the same as the rest of the firemen of the city.

Alderman Gibson believed in doing justice to all parts of the city, and that there should be no gouging. Those who do double the duty of others should have more pay, and there was no reason why they should pay all alike. They should meet the question squarely, and talk to the mark, and those who do double duty should have double pay.

Alderman Sayward was willing to meet the question squarely, and as the firemen of East Boston do not half the duty that the firemen of No. 4 do, they should not have so much pay.

Alderman Quincy again objected to discrimination in the way of discipline, and illustrated it by army life, for while one regiment may be assigned to charge of trains in the rear and have an easier time, they may at another time be called to the front. So it would happen in the cases of the firemen, that, at times, some of them would have easier duties than others.

Alderman Gaffield referred to the circumstances under which the reduced pay of firemen of Ward 16 was established. Immediately before annexation the inhabitants of the town voted to purchase six steam engines, as many as were in the old portion of Boston; and as so many were not needed, it was agreed that if all were retained in service the firemen were to serve at less pay.

Alderman Sayward replied that it was true they had six engines, but there were no more than there were when Dorchester was a town.

The motion to refer to the Committee on the Fire Department was carried, and section five, relating to the salaries of assistant foremen, etc., with a similar exception applying to Ward 16, was also referred to the same committee.

Alderman Sayard moved to strike out section seven, fixing the salaries of members of companies in Ward 16, and this also was referred to Committee on Fire Department.

Some discussion occurred upon the pay of the men of the fire boat, Alderman Power inquiring why any of them should have more pay than the firemen, or those of the same class, on shore, while those on the boat were furnished also with their board.

Alderman Gibson stated that these men were required to be on the boat all the time, and they would prefer paying their own board if they could go home.

Alderman Stebbins said the pay was the same as was paid on the tug boats.

Alderman Brown moved to increase the pay of First Assistant-Assessors from $7 to $8 per day.

Alderman Clark opposed the amendment, believing that $7 a day was good pay for the time employed.

Alderman Brown believed the pay to be small for the value of the services performed, and stated in reply to questions that it was expected they would be employed eight hours a day, and that was the amount of time which he gave to the city in his office. The increase for 45 days' service would give an aggregate of but $1200, which was extremely small.

Alderman Clark said he had supposed that not more than four or five hours were devoted to the duties, and he did not believe that many of them were as faithful as was the alderman while acting as Assessor.

It was further objected to increasing the pay while there were so many anxious to be elected to the office, and Alderman Gibson expressed the belief that the services of the Second Assistant-Assessors might be dispensed with after getting through with the out-of-door work.

Alderman Power urged as an objection against increase of pay, that most of the Assistant-Assessors attended to other business.

The motion to amend was lost.

The several orders having been passed, Alderman Clark moved a reconsideration of the salary of the Superintendent of the Public Library, with a view to its increase.

Aldermen Gaffield and Quincy favored the reconsideration, in remarks upon the efficiency of the Superintendent, whose services would command greater pay elsewhere.

The reconsideration was carried, and the salary was increased to $3500.

Alderman Sayward moved a reconsideration of the section establishing the salary of the Superintendent of Health, with a view to an increase.

Aldermen Gibson and Hulbert opposed any increase, believing that the duties could not be increased by the establishment of the new Board of Health.

Alderman Sayward said the duties had not been lessened.

Alderman Gibson further objected, that if each Alderman increased the salaries of the department under him, he should be obliged to ask for a similar increase of those with which he was connected, otherwise he would be found fault with.

Alderman Stebbins stated that the committee had reported an increase of this salary of $300.

Alderman Gaffield proposed a compromise to increase the salary $200, instead of $500, as at first designed by the mover, which would make it $3500, an increase of the same amount with other departments.

The amendment as proposed was carried, and the salary was fixed at $3500.

The several orders were passed, together with a concluding one that the Auditor and Treasurer be directed to pay to the several officers of Suffolk County the amounts prescribed by law to be paid by the county of Suffolk.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The petitions of P. Campbell & Son, E. C. Drew and a communication from the Board of Engineers of the Fire Department, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The report (deave to withdraw) on petition of Pearson Brothers & Co. and others, for the location of additional fire apparatus in Norfolk avenue, was accepted.

The report referring to the Committee on Legislafive Affairs the subject of placing the control of stables in the hands of the Board of Health, came up for concurrence.

Alderman Sayward said this matter had been before the Board in one form once, yet if the Board saw fit to, they would pass it.

On motion of Alderman Gibson the order was laid on the table.

The reference to the Committee on the City Engineer's Department of an order for an inspection and survey of the arch entrances to the towers of the Boston & Lowell Railroad Station on Canseway street, being on concurrence, Alderman Bigelow moved the reference to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, as more appropriate, in which case, the services of the Engineer might be called, if necessary.

This motion was debated on the question of appropriateness, an objection being made that a delay would be caused by sending the matter back to the other branch, and if the building in question needed an examination it should be done at once.

The motion was withdrawn, when the Board non-concurred in the reference, and the order was passed requesting the City Engineer to make the inspection and survey proposed.

FIRST-ASSISTANT-ASSESSOR.

The election of Artemas R. Holden as a First-Assistant-Assessor, in place of James Dennie, chosen by this Board, came up, when the Board proceeded to an election, resulting as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	12
James Dennie	10
Artemas R. Holden.....	2

Mr. Dennie was again declared to be elected, in non-concurrence.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Order that the Superintendent of Health be authorized to employ a principal clerk and such assistants as the Committee on Health may deem necessary for his department.

Report and order authorizing a loan of $10,000 in addition to the amount appropriated for engine house, Ward 14.

Order for a release to the Boston & Albany Railroad of all claims for damages on account of raising certain estates on Washington and Orange streets, on payment to city of $8000 therefor.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses as follows:

Post 26, G. A. R., to give dramatic entertainments at Institute Hall, February 24 and 27; B. F. O'Donnell, to give a musical entertainment at Summer Hall, February 25; also to twenty-five newsboys and three booth-lacks; to Aaron D. Capen and William H. Merriam, as auctioneers, and to sundry persons for billiard saloons, wagon licenses and dealers in second-hand articles. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of stables as follows: P. S. Morton, to occupy a wooden stable for four additional horses on First street, between I and K streets; Allen & Guthrie, to occupy a wooden stable for two horses at 156 Border street; Charles Shuler, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse at 472 Saratoga street; and leave to withdraw on petition of M. T. Downing, for leave to erect additional stalls in stable on Fourth street, South Boston. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on petition of Jane Longe for compensation as a nurse; also on petition of E. E. Hill to be compensated for supplies furnished and property destroyed, on account of his house, No. 66 Hudson street, being used as a smallpox hospital. Severally accepted.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Committee on Water, to whom was referred as unfinished business of last year, the order in relation to establishing a drinking fountain on the corner of Cabot and Tremont streets, made a report recommending that the order be referred to the Cochituate Water Board.

Accepted.

Alderman Carter, from the Committee on Fire Department, to whom was referred the remonstrance of Samuel S. Perkins and others of Upton street against the location of Hose Company No. 5 on said street, made a report that the committee was unanimous in the opinion that the hose company should be located further south if removed from its present site, and that no action is necessary. Accepted.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That there be paid to the following-named persons the sums hereinafter set against their respective names, being the amounts of the verdicts, interest and costs recovered by them respectively for land taken and damages sustained by them by the widening of Washington avenue, in the city of Chelsea, by an order of the County Commissioners of Middlesex County, passed on the first Tuesday, 1872, upon their giving due acquittance and receipt therefor, viz.: James Blaisdell, $942 57; Silas R. Curry, $613 74; Thomas H. Greeley, $784 04; Hamlett Bates, $2121 88; Sarah H. Loomis, wife of Jason B. Loomis, $1517 45; Joseph W. Cookson, $613 70; Oliver S. Caff, $1006 48; Mary Jane Bosson, wife of George C. Bosson, $1650 16; Nancy Thwaites, wife of William G. Thwaites, $460 37.

Ordered, That so much of the order passed by this Board on the 22d January last as authorized the payment of any money to either of said persons, be and the same is hereby rescinded.

Alderman Quincy explained with reference to the above, that when the order was passed a few weeks since, in relation to the widening of Washington avenue, in Chelsea, it was believed by him that the payments made under the order included the full amount, but it appeared that some of the parties had appealed from the award of damages, and the amounts named had been recovered through the courts.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the following bills for extra services performed by police officers be allowed for payment by the Auditor of Accounts, provided they are approved in the usual manner, viz.:

S. B. Hueston, $19; Clark T. Tripp, $42; Luther C. Bailey, Patrick Coakley, Gilman F. Decatur, Jacob Karcher, Isaiah S. Robinson, $9 each; Michael Crosby, Stephen D. Gardner, William H. Hubbard, Roswell M. Lyon, John F. Metzger, Martin R. Shay, Joseph W. Weeks, Eben T. Hitchcock, $6 each; Andrew Lyman, James H. Baxter, Samuel W. Marsh, Joseph Parker, $3 each.

A question was raised whether the sums above-named were proper payments, it being supposed that the police were only in the proper discharge of their duties, but these charges, it was said, were for extra duties after the regular service of the day was performed, some of them in attendance upon the small-pox hospitals.

WIDENING OF FEDERAL STREET.

Alderman Clark presented a petition from George C. Richardson, Charles W. Freeland and many others, setting forth as their belief that the northerly portion of Federal street, near Milk street, should be widened on the easterly side, and that to make the widening as contemplated, on the westerly side, would be a grave error. They therefore ask that a hearing be granted them on the subject before the Board.

Alderman Clark stated that the Street Commissioners were nearly ready to report upon the widening of Congress, Federal street and Oliver street extended, and nearly all the other streets, including all of Congress street except from Water street to State street. He did not see how they could refuse to hear the petitioners, and he moved that a hearing be granted to them on Wednesday at one o'clock.

It was voted to give a hearing at the time designated.

Alderman Sayward offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Public Buildings be authorized to prepare photographs and plans of several schoolhouses at an expense not exceeding the sum of $500, and to loan the same to the State Commissioner on Education for the Vienna Exposition; the expense therefor to be charged to the Appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Aldermen Power and Gibson opposed the order as a needless expense, and not justifiable, and it was advocated by Aldermen Sayward, Clark and Gaffield, who believed there might be some utility in it, while the pictures and plans would be loaned only, and not a gift as was asserted. Alderman Sayward did not suppose the expense would exceed $300.

The order was rejected, and Alderman Clark moved a reconsideration, on which the yeas and nays were ordered.

The reconsideration was lost, by a vote of 5 to 7, as follows:

Yeas—Clark, Emery, Gaffield, Quincy, Sayward.

Nays—Bigelow, Brown, Carter, Gibson, Hulbert, Power, Stebbins.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD STABLE.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the order to locate the proposed stable for the Metropolitan Railroad on Bartlett street and Shawmut avenue, "at least one hundred feet from any public street or way," was taken from the table and considered.

Alderman Power opposed the order on account of its effect in preventing the extension of St. James street, and he hoped it would not be passed until the question of extending that street was decided upon.

Alderman Sayward said there was no reason for the delay, and it was due to the Metropolitan Railroad Company that they should be allowed to build their stable at once.

Alderman Hulbert said he had given some attention to the matter, as one of interest to his section of the city, and it was his opinion that the building of the stable should be allowed. The opening of a new street the railroad company did not object to, and were willing that one should be opened which would better answer the purpose designed, in getting access to the Public Library. One of the principal movers in the matter originally did not object to the passage of the order as affecting the question of the street opening.

The order was passed.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

On petition of J. J. Birkmaier & Co., for leave to place a steam engine and boiler in building formerly No. 11 South street. Hearing Monday, 10th March, 4 P. M.

On petition of Benjamin Randall, for leave to place a steam engine and boiler on lot 13, on Chelsea street. Hearing Monday, 10th March, 4 P. M.

Rogers $4040, for land taken to widen Devonshire street; to pay James M. Beebe $8080, for land taken to widen Devonshire street; to pay Jane Montgomery $8980, for land taken in the name of heirs of Thomas Montgomery for the widening of Summer street; to pay John L. Bird $653 70, for land taken to widen Cottage; to pay Metropolitan Railroad Company $1380 45, for land taken to widen Stoughton street, and $2496 44, for land taken to widen Pynehon street.

Adjourned to Wednesday, one o'clock.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,

FEBRUARY 26, 1873.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held this afternoon at one o'clock, for the purpose of hearing certain petitioners in relation to the widening of Federal street—Alderman Cutter, the Chairman, presiding.

Alderman Stebbins suggested that as there had been no report from the Street Commissioners as to what they intended to do, it would be desirable to have a report from them as to their plans in the premises.

Mr. Smith, chairman of the Board of Street Commissioners, stated that the Committee on Streets were familiar with their plans, and could give the desired information.

Alderman Clark stated that it was the design of the commissioners to make the proposed widening, partly on one side and partly on the other, while the petitioners wished the widening to be entirely on the easterly side. The Board would be ready to put in their report tomorrow, and it was desirable that it should be acted upon at that time so that it might go for action to the Common Council on Thursday evening.

It was believed to be desirable to have this hearing to save complaint and the comments of the press, but neither the commissioners or the City Council had been the cause of delay in widening the streets. It had not been the commissioners, but individuals who had asked for changes and for continuous hearing, which had caused the delay.

D. E. Ware appeared for petitioners and stated that they believed public consideration required the widening to be on the easterly side of the street, at the outlet of which it was abrupt and difficult for the travel which passes through those streets. To show that, he would call several witnesses.

George C. Richardson said the views expressed by Mr. Ware were those entertained with him. He had been engaged in business for many years on Federal street, and there had been a constant difficulty in the blocking of the street at the corner of Milk street. When the Cunningham estate was cut off on the corner, individual owners of property contributed to the slight widening. When the plans were first proposed, it was contemplated widening the street on the easterly side, and that it was understood would be the widening until after the 1st January. When the proposed change of widening to sixty feet and on both sides was determined upon, the petitioners were not notified, and that was the reason of their coming here.

Federal street must continue to be a great thoroughfare, and to widen on the westerly side would be to bring the travel against the new post office. If either street was to be widened, he believed it should be Federal street, yet with the widening of several of the streets in this vicinity, there was not a great width required in widening.

George O. Hovey said he had no interest in the matter except as a taxpayer, but he had often been subject to blocks at the corner of Federal, Milk and Congress streets. If one of the streets was to be fifty and the other sixty, the sixty should be Federal street. The block where he mentioned was one of the worst that he knew of, and the street should be widened on the easterly side to bring the street more nearly to Congress street.

To Alderman Clark he said he was not aware that Milk street was to be widened to sixty feet. Yet that would not be enough to prevent the difficulty in the way of blocking.

To Mr. Ware—There ought to be fifty per cent. more width at the corner of the streets mentioned than at other points, and if the widening was to be sixty feet, at the corner or junction of the streets, it should be ninety feet, and he would prefer to have it one hundred feet. The extension of Franklin street he did not think would relieve this blocking much. He was in favor of wide streets. Federal street should be sixty and Congress street fifty feet.

Charles W. Freeland said he had testified before the Street Commissioners that the widening should be done on the easterly side. He had been in favor of rounding off the corner of Milk and Congress streets, (which Mr. Ware said the Government would object to as a portion of the post-office purchase). In view of this statement he believed there should be a rounding off on the corner of Federal and Milk streets at the lower corner. The appearance of the plan exhibited to him he thought would take off more than was necessary.

In relation to the widening of other streets, he said if it was understood that Devonshire street, from Milk to Franklin street, was to remain at its present width of forty eight feet, he did not see why fifty feet was not wide enough for all the streets running in the same direction below that street. The streets being near together, there was not much need for widening. It would be more natural to widen Federal street than any other, from its natural outlet.

Charles H. Parker (A. & A. Lawrence & Co.) concurred in the statements in relation to blockades at the corner of Congress, Milk and Federal streets. The standing of teams in the vicinity had been discontinued to cause the removal of the difficulty, but it did not remedy the evil, and the only remedy he could see was to cut off on the lower corner of Federal street. The travel on Federal street was northwardly towards the water, the outlet being from Federal to Congress street. It was not so much consequence which side the street was widened provided the lower corner should be widened to eighty or ninety feet. In the property in which he was interested, he was willing to pay reasonable betterments to secure the improvement needed.

R. L. Holt (Holt & Steadman), as a truckman for many years, had known no other place in the city for blocking so bad as the corner of Milk, Congress and Federal streets, and frequently had lost trains in going to the railroad depots on account of the blocking of the street. By taking off the east side, with the widening of Milk street, a great relief would be afforded. There was a great deal of suffering in going to the northerly depots. He was not aware until today of the proposed widening of Milk street to sixty feet, which would give great relief. He was afraid that the widening of Milk street would not give the relief required.

Richard Bradford, truckman, gave similar testimony in relation to the blocking at the corner of Milk, Federal and Congress streets. The widening of Milk street would not alone give all the relief needed, and the widening of Federal street should be on the easterly side on account of the grade, and to bring the street more nearly in junction with Congress street.

Alonzo Hamilton, for many years located in Federal street and vicinity, had long been familiar with the blocking at the corners specified, and on hearing of the proposed widening on the westerly side, he was astonished, believing the convenience of the public should require bringing Federal nearer to Congress street. The widening of Milk street would by no means remedy the difficulty, which was to get rid of right angles of the streets.

William Endicott, Jr., (Hovey & Co.,) was of opinion that the widening should be on the easterly side, to bring Federal street nearer to Congress street, the natural continuation of the street. Federal street should turn into Congress street with as little interruption as possible.

To Alderman Clark—Even though it cost from $150,000 to $200,000 more to widen on the easterly side, it was desirable to make the widening when it can be done, so that it shall meet the wants of the public for twenty years to come.

Henry Adams, formerly in business in the vicinity, concurred in the statements in relation to the blocking at the corners mentioned. He would have Federal street sixty feet in width from Channing to Milk street, deflecting towards Congress street. There was now a prospect of making Federal street one of the best avenues in the city and it should be done for all time, as easily right as wrong. It would not do to have Federal street come against the Post Office, but as far as possible Federal street and Congress street should be one avenue, much more travel passing from Congress to Federal than in the continuance of Congress street.

L. J. Bradish agreed with the other witnesses generally in regard to the proposed widening.

George S. Winslow concurred also in the views expressed by others.

Mr. Herschell, engineer, in the proposed widening believed Federal and Congress streets should be brought as near together as possible, but the difficulty was greater in the grade, inasmuch as few teams would be likely to turn up Milk street from Federal street. In the octagonal plan the proposed widening at the corner would take 2000 feet, and the rounding off about 1900 feet.

F. L. Key, teamster, found the same difficulty in blocks, and agreed with others as to the means of relieving the blocks by widening on the easterly side.

Michael F. Lynch, newsman, believed the widening should be on the easterly side of the street. Mr. Lynch proceeded, in a speech of much earnestness, to protest against the proposed action of the Street Commissioners, when Alderman Clark objected, and

Mr. Lynch closed by saying if he could not be heard here he would be at the polls.

Mr. Ware said he would close here, it having been hoped that Mr. Burt, the postmaster, would be heard, but he was absent at Washington.

Robert K. Potter, as a remonstrant, objected to the plan of petitioners. The subject had been thoroughly considered in three exhaustive hearings, in which he gave his views fully. He had long been familiar with the corner where the blocks occurred, and he did not believe they were any greater than in many other places. He believed fifty feet was wide enough for Federal street, with the widening of many other streets in the vicinity. If Congress street was to be a continuation of Federal street, let it be continued through to Chauncy street or beyond, and it would not wipe out more property than it would under the plan of petitioners.

Mr. Potter called upon the Street Commissioners to give their reasons for the proposed action by them.

Mr. Smith, chairman of the Street Commissioners, stated the various plans which came before the Board, and the reasons given in favor of those plans, in relation to which the friends of the measures used the most urgent means to carry out their plans. Admitting, he said, that there had been a great cause of complaint in the blocking at the point specified, the widening of Milk street and the extension of Franklin street would give great relief. Atlantic avenue would also take a great amount of travel which has hitherto gone over these blocked streets. The commissioners were at one time in favor of fifty feet for Federal street, but on account of the great pressure, a delay was occasioned, and now if no changes are required they would be prepared to lay these plans before the City Council within forty-eight hours.

The delay occasioned in giving lines was not on account of the Street Commissioners, as had been attributed, and when their plans were matured, they generally obtained the approval of the Committee on Streets, to prevent delay in the City Council. No matter which side of the street the widening should be made on, there would be the same objection, and the opposition now made to the plans of the commissioners were almost entirely by the parties interested.

To Alderman Stebbins he said the widening as proposed, partly on both sides, was for the purpose of straightening the street as far as possible.

Alderman Hulbert wished to correct the commissioner by saying the Committee on Streets were not entirely unanimous in favor of widening Federal street to sixty feet.

Mr. Smith said to Mr. Ware that one cause of the blocking at the corners specified was that Milk street was narrower at Federal street than above or below, but that difficulty would be remedied in the widening of Milk street. He did not believe there would be so much obstruction to travel at the corner by turning at an angle as there would be in crossing diagonally from Federal to Congress street.

Mr. Talbot, commissioner, agreed with Mr. Smith as to the relief which would be afforded by the widening of Milk street, and this would be aided by the extension of Pearl street. The expense of street widenings it was hoped would come within $3,000,000, yet with the widenings to be presented tomorrow, the cost to the present time would amount to $2,700,000. He was satisfied with the action of the commissioners, and was willing to rest their reputations upon it in the future.

General Burrell, Commissioner, agreed with the other Commissioners in relation to the action of the Board.

Mr. Richardson was called in relation to some statements made, and stated that the project of the additional widening of ten feet was not a matter in hearing, the chairman having repeatedly stated that while there were two lines on the plans, it was not expected that the widening would be more than fifty feet in width.

Mr. Smith replied that it was true he did not believe more than fifty feet in width would be required, but in that the Commissioners were overruled by the public, but the lines were each on the plans, and in relation to these lines, Mr. Talbot concurred with him that both of the lines were matters of hearing while Mr. Richardson was present.

Mr. Ware concluded the hearing in remarks upon the testimony of the petitioners, in which he urged that the petitioners were not heard in relation to the proposed widening, and as the action of the Commissioners was not conclusive he entreated the Board to take such measures as may be necessary in providing convenient, suitable, proper streets for the transaction of business. The loss of minutes was a loss of time, a waste of wealth, and it should be the object in street improvements to prevent delay in travel, by making streets as far as possible continuous lines of travel.

Mr. Ware referred to the various plans which had been considered, some of which were to make continuous streets to State street, and this had reference to direct travel, without obstruction; and while the programme had been carried out to a great extent, it had been departed from in this most important thoroughfare, much to the surprise of the petitioners.

It could be carried out with but little sacrifice, of 1500 to 2000 feet of land, which would secure continuous travel from Federal to Congress street. There had been six conflicting lines of travel at the point of blockade, but, as proposed by petitioners, these lines would be reduced to four. Every argument in favor of the extension of any streets was equally favorable to a continuance of Federal street to make the travel easy to Congress street.

Upon the conclusion of the remarks of Mr. Ware, the question was raised as to what should be the disposition of the petition.

A motion to lay the petition on the table was objected to by Alderman Power, who thought it should be referred to the Committee on Streets.

Alderman Clark said there would have been no hearing if the matter had been for the committee to act upon.

The Chair stated that the petitioners had obtained their object in a hearing, when the petition was laid on the table.

An order was read once to change certain assessments for sewers.

On motion of Alderman Gibson, the Board adjourned to Thursday, twelve o'clock.

STREET WIDENINGS.

The following communication was received from the Street Commissioners, covering orders for widening several streets, as specified:

The resolves and orders adopted by the Board of Street Commissioners, today, and sent to your honorable body for concurrence, are for the widening of Milk street, between Washington and Batterymarch streets, to fifty feet, in all but that portion between Devonshire and Congress, where the width is increased to sixty feet; the widening and extension of Franklin street, from Devonshire across Federal and Congress streets to Pearl street, at Sturgis street, as a forty foot street, and making a continuous avenue from Washington street to Atlantic avenue in a direct line, and by an easy grade; the widening of Federal street to sixty feet, by takings upon both sides of the street to produce a perfectly straight street from High to Milk street; the widening of Congress street by takings upon both sides to sixty feet until the vicinity of Milk street is reached, when the new line is carried on the easterly side above, increasing to a width of seventy feet opposite the proposed Post Office site to Water street—the intention being to complete the widening of the street thence to State street when the surveys shall be completed; the fifty feet wide extension of Pearl street, from Milk street to Water street, at Congress street, about eighty feet north of the corner of Milk and Congress streets, leaving an open space or square some 160 feet in width from the westerly side of Pearl street; and the extension of Oliver street from Milk street to Liberty square at fifty feet width.

The interdependence of these streets has led the Commissioners to treat these several widenings and extensions as parts of one whole improvement, as in their judgment this course will result in less expense to the city in the payment of damages, and greater benefit in the future assessments for betterments.

The Commissioners beg leave to represent to the Honorable Council that the labor upon the necessary surveys of these streets, after the lines had been decided on, was the principal cause of the delay attending the presentation of the accompanying orders. They were, however, happy to say that the surveyors' work upon the remaining portion of the streets in this part of the city in which changes are contemplated is in such a state of forwardness as to insure its completion within a few days.

Alderman Clark stated that this measure had been before the Committee on Streets, and they were in favor of its approval.

Alderman Clark stated that all of these widenings had been before the Committee on Streets, who had given them full consideration and were in favor of them all. There was no occasion for delay, and it was desirable to send them at once to the Common Council. They were satisfied that they were the best widenings which could be made for the benefit of the Government.

In the matter of land damages, it was believed to be better to have all these measures passed at the present time, and that none of them should be laid over.

Alderman Clark moved that the order take its second reading at the present time.

The second reading was ordered, and the question was on its passage.

Alderman Power hoped the order would not be passed, as it was an important departure from the plan first drawn up by Mr. Davis, City Surveyor, which was generally accepted. Federal street was an important thoroughfare, and it should be widened so as to prevent the blockade at the corner of Milk and Congress streets. It was more important than any other measure which will come before the Government, and this had better be carried out rightly if all others had to be abandoned. He was surprised at the remarks of the Street Commissioners, and believed the improvement was as much needed as was the extension of Washington street or Devonshire street.

Alderman Quincy believed the petitioners yesterday made out a good case, and he was in favor of the change proposed, believing that it would be better to have delay than to make a mistake in the widening of the street.

A petition was presented from Michael F. Lynch, asking for a delay in the widening of Federal street, and asking to be heard on the subject.

Alderman Clark stated that the little plan before them, made by Mr. Davis in about a week after the fire, was of a general character only, which gave a favorable impression, but upon mature reflection it was believed that important changes should be made. Some of these changes he indicated; and in relation to the blockade in question, he said it was not necessary that testimony should be introduced here to show it, for they were all aware of it. Yet that blockade was not greater than in many other places, and the various extensions of the streets would greatly relieve that portion of the street.

The Street Commissioners, he said, had had this subject under consideration for nearly three months, and in the various hearings which had taken place it was believed that three-fourths of those who had paid attention to it were in favor of the plans of the Commissioners. The additional expense of the widening as wished by those who asked for the widening on the easterly side, would cost $200,000 more than that of the plan of the Commissioners. No widening could be made satisfactory to all persons, and in regard to the width, some of those who are opposed to the plan of the Commissioners agree that the street should be sixty feet in width.

In regard to the importance of immediate action, he said, if the order should not be passed, as proposed, it would cause a delay of at least four weeks, and that to the great inconvenience of owners of property, who would have not less than 150 buildings under construction at the end of the period named if they could have their lines at once.

Alderman Power did not question that the Commissioners had consistently discharged their duty, yet they had changed their minds, as it appeared. The change of the lines of Federal street to connect more fully with Congress street, would be more important than the widening of the street.

As to blocks elsewhere there could be no doubt that if the territory where they occur was burned over, improvements would be made to prevent such blocks. In relation to the persons who have taken part in the matter, those who asked for a change had no personal interest, while there were interests involved in favor of the plans of the Commissioners.

Alderman Clark said he had not intended to allude to interests of parties who appeared here, yet it was in evidence that some of those who favored a change were interested. It would be impossible to make Federal street a straight street, and although the Commissioners did not at first agree in all matters, they did so finally. There is now no difference of opinion as to the manner of widening.

Alderman Power said, in regard to Eastern avenue, which had been alluded to, there was no positive determination as to where it shall come in, and it may as likely be at Federal as at Congress street. At any rate, Federal street would always be a largely travelled street, and it would be better to widen that properly rather than put a foot of widening on Congress street.

Alderman Quiney said he did not doubt that the Street Commissioners had conscientiously discharged their duties, but he believed the petitioners of yesterday made out their case, and it was now a matter of responsibility upon this Board how it was best to make the widening of Federal street.

Alderman Clark called attention to the fact that in the negotiations last year it was determined that the Eastern avenue would come in at Congress street, and it would not be many years before the improvement was made.

Alderman Power said that his belief of the matter was that the Eastern avenue would not come in at Congress but at Federal street, and he did not believe the city would agree to the terms of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, and under such circumstances it was not likely that the improvement would be made short of ten years.

Alderman Gaffield stated that the improvements made were not for temporary purposes but for all time, and while some persons were in favor of very wide streets and others were opposed to any widenings, the Commissioners had taken a golden mean. In relation to the Eastern avenue he had been assured that it must come in at Congress street. If there had been no determination to go beyond a fifty-foot street, he did not believe there would have been any opposition. It was due to the Commissioners and to all parties interested that this matter should be settled at once.

Alderman Hulbert defined his position as a member of the Committee on Streets. He was in favor of fifty feet both for Federal and Congress streets. Federal street could never be as it was, because other avenues had been opened, which would relieve that street. On the grounds of business and of business interests he advocated the widening of the streets to fifty feet only, and he believed it would be an injury to business by having wide streets. Wool dealers did not seek Congress street because it was wide; on the contrary, they sought to be in crowds, where it was busy, and that was the policy of the best business men. It was not desirable to have wide streets for business, except to get room for the business. The crowding of streets was not an unmitigated evil, and the widening of them was not always for good.

If Federal street was to be fifty feet wide, it should be on the easterly side, and he should prefer not to have it any wider than that. The business would be distributed much more by the other street changes, and Franklin street would be much better for business should it be narrowed up. Should the crowded streets be much widened, the crowds would seek business quarters elsewhere. As to the Post Office being a common centre of business, he denied it, for it could not be. As to the cost, the difference between fifty and sixty feet streets for Federal and Congress streets would be $1,000,000, which would add $100,000 yearly to their tax bills, and the whole cost of the street widening on the burnt district, with the paving, would not be less than $6,000,000. For these reasons he could not favor the proposed widenings.

Alderman Clark believed the Alderman to be incorrect in his calculations, for the whole expense of widening Federal and Congress streets, as estimated by the Commissioners, was but $850,000.

Alderman Hulbert, in reply, stated that the estimates before the Board did not include the widening of Congress street, from Water street to State street. His figures would make about a million of dollars when the bills were all paid, much allowance being necessary in settling up damages.

Alderman Clark questioned the figures of Alderman Hulbert, and stated that he knew something of the reasons why wool dealers went to Congress street, which was for cheap rents and abundance of loft room. In that street land had sold within three years for $12 a foot with good granite buildings upon it, and since the fire sales had been made of land in that street at $15 a foot. The Alderman practically favored wide streets while he was in business, removing from narrow to wide streets.

Alderman Hulbert, in further statements, said business men would go where there was room, and where there was a crowding in the kind of business done. In his own case, he removed from other considerations than a wide street. In regard to the costs, he made additional statements, citing the chairman of the Street Commissioners as estimating the cost of the widening of Congress street to State street, additional, to be $650,000.

Alderman Clark declared the Boston Post Office to be the centre of business, not necessarily, but in fact; for the value of land was much more within a radius of half a mile of the Post Office than it was beyond. He was not satisfied with the figures of the Alderman, and could not agree to them.

Alderman Quincy agreed with Alderman Hulbert that it was better to have streets of a moderate width than to have them wide, provided there was a pulsation in the flow, and he had been assured by a dry-goods dealer that Federal street would be wide enough at fifty feet, with a rounding off at the corner.

Aldermen Hulbert and Clark made further statements in sustaining their respective positions, the last named stating that a portion of Federal street had been fifty feet wide, and that portion was often blockaded.

Alderman Gibson said he was at first disposed to agree with Alderman Hulbert, but on looking at the plans he could do no other than agree that the Commissioners had done the best which could be done, taking the connections through from depots to depots. He was willing to compromise in width at fifty-five feet, and would agree to making Federal street sixty feet and Congress street fifty feet.

Alderman Gaffield said the committee had been importuned to give a width of at least sixty feet to this street, and it was a happy mean, for many persons advocated a much greater width. Reference was made by him to the various proposed changes, and he believed the expense of improvements, although great, would bring back revenue to the city in betterments. It was not true, that widening streets diminished their value, as he knew from the charge of an estate on Hanover street, which rented for 33 per cent. more with diminished room from the widening.

Alderman Gibson made some further remarks upon the effect of the extension of Washington street, and the opening of more direct routes of travel.

Alderman Hulbert moved to amend by making the proposed widening fifty feet instead of sixty feet.

The Chair ruled that the amendment could not be entertained, the question being upon concurring or non-concurring with the Street Commissioners.

Alderman Hulbert moved to recommit, with instructions to the Street Commissioners to provide for the widening of Federal street to fifty feet.

Alderman Clark opposed the motion on account of the delay which would be occasioned by recommitting, the loss to the community being not less than $50,000 a day.

Alderman Quincy said he would vote for the motion could it be modified to provide for a widening of sixty feet from Channing street to Milk street on the easterly side.

Alderman Gaffield opposed the motion, and he believed that if all the members of the Board had been on the committee they would have agreed with them generally.

Alderman Sayward opposed delay, stating that he was prepared to vote at once, and was when he came to the Board today.

Alderman Emery opposed delay, and the reduction of the street to fifty feet. If the width was to be but fifty feet, the widening should be on the easterly side. With the widening to sixty feet, he believed the public would be generally accommodated. Congress street and Federal street, both at sixty feet, must accommodate travel at present and prospectively.

Alderman Gibson believed it would be better to widen on the westerly side, as leading the travel near to Devonshire street, which would be the most desirable street to travel in. The termination would be much better through Devonshire street than through Congress street.

Alderman Emery stated further that he favored the plans of the Commissioners.

The question was taken on recommitting, which was lost, by a vote of 2 to 10, as follows:

Yeas—Hulbert, Power.

Nays—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

The concurrence in the passage of the order was agreed to by a vote of 8 to 4, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Brown, Hulbert, Power, Quincy.

EXTENSION OF OLIVER STREET.

Resolve and order for the extension of Oliver street, at an estimated expense of $131,220.

Alderman Hulbert opposed the order as unnecessary, and it was advocated by Alderman Clark as an important improvement.

Alderman Gaffield, as an additional reason for the order, said the city owned fifty thousand feet of land on Fort Hill, which would be greatly bettered by this extension.

The order was passed in concurrence.

The several items of expense are as follows:

Liberty-square Warehouse Company, 108-110 Milk street, 4772 feet, $18, $85,896; damages, $1500—total, $87,396. WIDENING OF CONGRESS STREET.

Resolve and order for the widening of Congress street between Water and Broad streets, at an estimated expense of $514,795.

The order being on its passage, Alderman Power opposed the widening beyond a width of fifty feet, as unnecessary, never to be a greatly travelled thoroughfare, and not to connect with Eastern avenue, at least for many years, if ever.

Alderman Clark advocated the order as called for by business men, and an improvement which will be very important in the future. He believed the expense of connecting with Eastern avenue would be much less by way of Congress street than by Federal street, and an appeal to the City Surveyor assured him that such was the case, on account of conflict with the Hartford & Erie Railroad Depot.

Alderman Power denied that there would be any conflict with the Hartford & Erie Railroad. On the contrary, it would be in harmony with that railroad, and they wished the connection there.

Alderman Clark reiterated his statement in relation to the Eastern avenue, and the building of a bridge at the Hartford & Erie Depot would interfere with their bridge.

Alderman Hulbert agreed in relation to the location of Eastern avenue with Alderman Clark, yet he did not believe the street should be more than fifty feet in width.

The order was passed, by a vote of 10 to 2, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Hulbert, Power.

Alderman Clark moved a reconsideration, with a view to sending the several orders to the Common Council, hoping the motion would not prevail.

Alderman Power wished the question to be taken on each separately, which was lost, when the reconsideration was lost.

Adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

FEBRUARY 27, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, at 7½ o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The petitions of Whitecomb & Potter, Patrick Campbell, Winchester & Hight, Nehemiah Barry and the communication of the First Baptist Society of Boston were severally referred, in concurrence.

The annual report of the Inspector of Buildings was ordered to be placed on file.

The following reports were accepted, in concurrence:

Report of reference to the Water Board of the subject of establishing a drinking trough at the corner of Tremont and Cabot streets.

Report (no action necessary) on remonstrance of S. S. Perkins and others, against proposed erection of an engine house on Upton street.

Reports (leave to withdraw) on petitions—

1. Of Ebenezer E. Hill, to be paid for loss on account of use of his house, 66 Hudson street, as a smallpox hospital.

2. Of Jane Logue, for compensation as a smallpox nurse.

The order to pay bills of certain police officers for extra services was read once.

The non-concurrence in the reference to the Committee on Engineer's Department, and passage of the order for City Engineer to inspect the arched entrances for towers of Boston & Lowell Depot, came up for action.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said that the Council would perhaps concur in the passage of the order, should the gentleman who offered the order give some reasons for its passage.

Mr. Jones, of Ward 14 moved that the Council recede from its reference.

Mr. Perkins repeated that no reason had yet been given for the passage of the order.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said that from the character of those who were engaged in the construction of the building, it was prima facie evidence that it was properly constructed, as much so as any in the city. Before they meddled with the matter, they should know something about it.

Mr. Pease said it would appear to be the object of the other branch to send the order immediately to the Engineer. In answer to an inquiry of Mr. Perkins, the occurrence of today, he said, showed the necessity of looking after all buildings believed to be unsafe.

Mr. Jones said it would be a matter of courtesy in any event, if the committee reported in favor of it, to refer it to the City Engineer, and it might as well go to him to be looked after at once. Many people believe these arches to be unsafe, and it would be as well to have them examined.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5, of the Committee on the Engineer's Department, said the committee would make no objection to sending the order at once to the Engineer.

Mr. Perkins objected to acting upon orders without knowing reasons for them, otherwise they would be constantly sending the City Engineer from Dan to Beersheba.

Mr. Jones said there were many who believed the arches in question to be unsafe, being merely tied together, and the sooner the security of them was looked into the better.

The Council receded from the reference, and concurred in the passage of the order.

ELECTION OF FIRST-ASSISTANT-ASSESSOR.

The certificate of the election of James Dennie as a First-Assistant-Assessor in place of Artemas R. Holden, chosen by the Council, was read, when the Council proceeded to an election, which resulted as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	56
Necessary to a choice.....	29
Artemas R. Holden.....	29
James Dennie.....	12
James K. Crowley.....	6
H. N. Holbrook.....	5
Theophilus Burr.....	4

Mr. Holden was declared to be again elected, in nonconcurrence.

STREET WIDENINGS.

The Chair stated that he would take up first the papers received from the Board of Aldermen today, before taking action upon the Salary bill.

WIDENING OF CHAUNCY STREET.

The resolve and order for the widening of Chauncy street was read once, and Mr. Pease of Ward 1 moved a suspension of the rules for the passage of the order tonight.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said it was the opinion of members of the Committee on Streets that it would be better not to pass the various street widenings tonight.

Mr. Pease said it was known to every one that the owners of land in these streets were very anxious to build, and the Street Commissioners and the Committee on Streets had given the matter very careful hearings, and the sooner they were disposed of the better.

Mr. Perkins replied that the gentleman might have authority to speak for others, but not for the Committee on Streets. The Street Commissioners were of opinion that all of these orders should be passed at once, and for that reason they did not wish to have action upon two when there were half a dozen connected together. Rather than compel the city to pay more for land in consequence of the passage of any one of them, they should all lie over.

The original and favorite plan was to have Federal street run into Congress street, thus making it a continuous street. The plan was changed to allow the enlargement of the Post Office, to which it was believed the General Government was inclined. At the last meeting of the committee, a communication was laid before them from the Secretary of the Treasury, relative to the widening of the streets opposite the Post Office, and the House of Representatives was in favor of the plan of the Postmaster to have a space on Congress street of eighty feet. The plan before the Senate was to lay out the whole triangular piece of land between Congress and Pearl streets, and as it is believed they are opposed to further appropriations for public buildings in Boston; the City Council should not act until the action of Congress was definitely settled. It was desirable that the course of the Government should be known, and if the additional piece of land is not to be taken then the original plan of Federal street should be carried out. Nothing would be lost, then, by a delay of one week.

Mr. Pease said his object was to facilitate matters, and that was his reason for the motion made by him. He did not pretend to speak for the committee, and this measure was not connected with the others.

Mr. Perkins said he understood that the committee would have no objection to the passage of the order for the widening of Chauncy street.

The rules were suspended, and the order was passed

WIDENING OF FEDERAL STREET.

The resolve and order for the widening of Federal street was read once.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 said he did not fully understand the reasons of the gentleman from Ward 6 for postponement. The subject had been under consideration nearly four months, and it was necessary for the owners of property to commence forthwith the rebuilding of their stores as soon as their lines were fixed. After the deliberations of the Street Commissioners and the action of the Board of Aldermen, they could safely act upon the conclusions to which they had come, and unless there were serious objections in each instance, action could be taken at once in their passage. The owners of land were clamorous for action, and great blame would be cast upon them for any unnecessary delay.

It was not the Street Commissioners, but others, who had caused the delay, and many persons were of opinion that the Street Commissioners should have acted independently of what others might say, and fix the lines, whoever it might hurt. The damage had been very great from the delay, and there had been no hasty legislation and could be no objection to passing each one of those orders to which no objection could be made.

Mr. Perkins said the Commissioners and the committee were unanimous in their opinion as to each of these measures except the widening of Federal street. They were at first in favor of a through street, and if the Government does not want the additional land for the Post Office, Federal street would be laid out through that land. Otherwise it would be better to turn the travel down instead of up from Federal street. It would be absolutely impossible to comply with the terms of the United States House of Representatives in the widening of streets, and before the next meeting of the Council the question must be settled by Congress. If it must be a choice between that and the plan of the Street Commissioners, the last must be chosen, as recommended.

Mr. Denny said if it was a question of lines merely, and not the widening of Federal street, he did not see why they could not discuss it tonight. Reasons could be given why the easterly and not the westerly side of the street should be cut off. The question of widening had been fully discussed in the papers, and was fully understood, and if the question of widening on the easterly side could be disposed of, he did not see why it could not be settled tonight.

Mr. Perkins said the Council might talk all night if they chose to. Referring again to the original plans, he gave the reasons for a change, on account of the Post Office, and if the Government would not take the land on Congress street, he thought the city had better run Federal street straight through it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 could not see why the subject should not go over, for it would take from three to five weeks to clean out cellars in that neighborhood, and nothing could be lost by allowing the matter to lie over.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 hoped the matter would not be pressed tonight. The subject had just come before them, and was one of the greatest importance which could be acted upon. The public had little idea of the importance of Federal street as a thoroughfare.

The Chair stated that there was no question before the Council, and the debate had been out of order.

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 moved a suspension of the rules for the passage of the order.

Mr. Birditt of Ward 16, said the Mayor was now in Washington in relation to the action on the subject of the Post Office, and on that action this order hinges. The mayor would be at home on Saturday or Monday, and it would be better to have the matter lie over.

Mr. West of Ward 16 hoped the order would not be passed now, for much depended upon the action of Congress. It would not do any harm to let it lie over one week.

Mr. Denny said he had no desire in the slightest degree except to secure right action. There was a necessity for action, and if no objection was made to any particular measure, that might be passed, the should act on every one they can.

Mr. Perkins said he had been unfortunate if he had not made himself understood. The Street Commissioners did not wish to have action on any one of these tonight if they could not all be passed. If action should be taken on any one, it would affect the land to be taken in other cases, and it was the desire to keep down the prices of land until they were all passed. It was obvious that one alone should not be passed. There could be no time lost in laying the subject over one week.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said it was agreed by the committee that they should be passed altogether, and there was no reason why they should be hurried through tonight. They should all lie over.

The question on suspension of the rules was lost.

The several orders for the widening of Milk street, the extension of Pearl street, the extension of Oliver street, the widening of Congress street, and the extension of Franklin street were read once and laid over.

SALARY BILL.

The report and orders establishing the salaries of city officers for the year, beginning the first day of April next, with amendments of the Board of Aldermen thereto (Printed City Doc. No. 27, 1873,) were considered.

Mr. West of Ward 16 moved that the report and orders be laid on the table, to allow time to look through them.

Mr. Flynn asked to have the motion withdrawn to allow him to give notice of amendments.

The motion was withdrawn.

Mr. Flynn gave notice that he should propose amendments to make the salary of Chief-of-Police $4000, captains of police $1500, lieutenants $1400, sergeants $1300, and patrolmen $1200 per annum; also on page 16 to amend by making the salaries of Chief-Engineer of Fire Department $1000, assistant-engineers $700 in place of $500, secretary of the board $2600; section 4, foremen of companies $525, instead of $325; assistant-foremen, etc., clerks, etc., section 5, $500; enginemen $3 75 per day; firemen $3 50 per day.

Mr. West of Ward 16 asked if it was designed to strike out the distinctions against the members from Ward 16.

Mr. Flynn replied that he did so design.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 raised the question by what rule any thing could be struck out which was not before the Council.

Mr. Flynn replied that he gave notice only of what he proposed to do when the subject should come up.

Mr. Shaw wished to know where could be found sections 5 and 6 relating to firemen, because if he was called upon to act he should wish to know whether such sections were before the board, and he would call for the reading of them.

The Chair said there was no motion pending, and he stopped the reading of the report on a proposed question. There was nothing but the reading of the report before the Council, and the discussion was wholly irregular.

Mr. West renewed his motion to lay the subject over.

Mr. Flynn said if the gentleman from Ward 5 had put on his spees he would have found the sections in question.

Mr. Shaw called for the reading of the sections.

The Chair stated that he was going on to read the whole order when he was stopped.

Mr. Shaw said he only wished for the reading of a part of it.

The Chair proceeded to read the orders.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 moved that the reading be dispensed with.

Mr. Shaw claimed that under the rules, when any member called for the reading of an order or report, it was not competent for any one to ask to dispense with the reading. It was the right of any one that when he asked it should be read.

The Chair stated that it was competent to call for the reading, or that it be dispensed with. It was competent to ask that a document be read by its title. In this case the Chair was stopped in his reading, and he should go on. The Chair should have proceeded to read.

Mr. Perkins moved that the bill be read by its title, and the motion was carried.

Mr. Shaw said he still had the right to call for the reading of the order in full, or in detail, and he called for the reading. He wanted to know what he was to vote upon. It was his right to have the order read, and it must be read.

The Chair said he would first decide on the question of order, and stated that as a general principle it was correct that a member had a right to have a document read, at any time. Yet a motion might also be made to have the reading by its title. The order would first be read by its title, and he now read it by title.

The Chair then stated the question to be upon giving the orders a second reading.

Mr. Blackmar inquired if a motion had not been made to lay the orders on the table; if not he would make the motion.

The motion was put and carried.

The Chair stated that there was a communication from the Board of Aldermen, stating that sections 4, 5, 6 and 7 of the orders relating to pay of the Fire Department had been stricken from the orders and referred to the Committee on Fire Department.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 moved the further consideration of the subject be referred to the next meeting of the Council.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 inquired if the references were not in the nature of an amendment of the orders.

The Chair ruled that they were not.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 inquired if the sections were not those stricken from the orders by the Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Shaw rose to a point of order, that the gentleman had no right to refer to the action of a coordinate branch of the Government. He had a right to refer to what was before them for their action, but not to criticize or refer to any action of the other branch, which was out of order.

The Chair said he did not understand the point of order made by the member from Ward 5.

Mr. Shaw replied that the gentleman had no right to refer to any matter on the table, or that had been referred by the Board of Aldermen.

The Chair did not understand what the gentleman considered as not in order.

Mr. Shaw said he was stating his point of order.

The Chair asked him to state it, there being nothing before the Council debatable.

Mr. Shaw proceeded to state that sections 5, 6 and 7 were laid on the table by the Board of Aldermen, and his friend had spoken of them as having been laid on the table or had been referred to a committee.

Mr. Flynn rose to a question of order, that the gentleman was not talking to the subject matter, and had not raised any point of order.

The Chair stated as his understanding of the point of order, that the gentleman from Ward 14 was out of order for referring to the action of the Board of Aldermen. He heard nothing improper in his allusions, and there was nothing disrespectful in his reference to the Board, which disrespectful allusions alone are not in order in either branch towards the other.

Mr. Jones said he was engaged when the communication was read, and he made the inquiry for information.

Mr. Wells seconded the motion for an assignment.

Mr. Perkins inquired what the motion of assignment was.

The Chair stated that the Board of Aldermen had stricken out sections 4, 5, 6, and 7 of the order relating to the pay of the Fire Department, and they were referred to the Committee on Fire Department.

Mr. Perkins moved that inasmuch as the others had been so disposed of, the communication and references be laid on the table. Carried.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The order that the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to allow for payment to the City Treasurer $1343 01, the amount paid by him on an execution in favor of Sylvester Gardner and Rosanna, his wife, for injuries from a defect in a highway was read a second time and passed.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

S. D. Crane and forty-two others, for a steam fire engine in Ward 11. Referred to Committee on Fire Department.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously passed:

Resolved, That the thanks of the City Council are hereby tendered to Captain Snow and the officers and men of the Boston Fusileers, Company G, Third Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., for promptly volunteering their services and for the valuable aid they rendered to the police at the fire in Hanover street this day.

Resolved, That the sympathy of the City Council is hereby tendered to the families of those firemen and others who lost their lives at the fire in Hanover street this day, and to those who were injured in the discharge of their duty, and to the other persons injured and their families.

The last resolution was passed by a rising vote.

NOMINATION OF ENGINEERS OF FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. Marston of Ward 10 moved to take from the table the order for the appointment of a committee to nominate a Chief and Assistant Engineers of the Fire Department.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said the appointment of the committee to make the nominations proposed should be delayed for action on certain recommendations referred in the report of the Fire Commissioners to the Committee on Fire Department, in relation to the nomination of Chief and Assistant Engineers to be made by the Mayor and confirmed by the City Council. It was an important and very excellent change, and as the subject was now before a committee of the City Government it would not be well to take action upon making nominations. Until those recommendations were passed upon or a report was made, he hoped the order would not pass, and moved that it lie over until the next meeting.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 hoped the motion to lay the subject over would not prevail, for sixteen members of this branch and twelve of the other were just as well qualified to make nominations as the Mayor could be. With all due respect to the Mayor, he would not take the question of making the nominations from the City Council.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said he had no doubt the Mayor would be delighted to be relieved of such a responsibility.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 did not think there were any such suggestions in the report of the Fire Commissioners. The committee were in favor of some changes in the ordinances hereafter, to take place at some future time, by which the Chief and Assistant Engineers would be given more power than they have now.

Mr. Flynn hoped the matter would not be laid over, for he felt competent to judge for himself as to the nominations for engineers.

Mr. Train of Ward 13 said with due deference to the suggestions made for a change, the nominations should be selected by the members of the several wards, who are more competent than others can be to judge of the qualifications of the engineers in their own sections.

Mr. Dean said that after the Fire Commission had presented a report, and certain recommendations had been referred to the committee, it is now said the Committee on Fire Department will sometime propose a change in the ordinance, but go on now, and commit themselves this year beyond the possibility of changes, which they say may be made at some future time.

Now it would be the strangest thing, so soon after the fire, to turn a deaf ear to these recommendations of the Commissioners, and not try to have any improvements made in the Fire Department. The gentleman from Ward 7 moved that the report be laid on the table, and, unless he had great leisure, he could not have read much of it. He did not understand that it was giving up a prerogative, but it was a recommendation to consider whether the appointment of a Chief, and he believed also of Assistant-Engineers, could not be better made in a different way than it now is. If he was convinced that it could be, he would not object to giving up the prerogative of the Council, and would part with the power. There was not a member of the board who had the power to select independently, for it was always a foregone conclusion what the result would be from the measures used to secure the nominations.

He could understand that the members of the Fire Department and their friends desire that a change should not take place, and they can make it difficult to take place. They were not sure that there will be any change, but the committee should report promptly, and they should take a careful consideration of the subject, as to what shall be for the best interests of the city in the long run. It may be best not to exercise the power proposed, or in a particular way, yet there should be no lugging of a prerogative. He hoped, therefore, the appointments would be laid over, and that the committee would take prompt action, which should prove to be for the best interests of the city.

Mr. Jones said there was no design by the committee to cover up anything. He could not say that there would be any change proposed in the manner of election, but it was believed an amendment would be recommended to give the engineers of the Fire Department more power. As an old member of the department, he knew it was the feeling that they did not have power enough. The committee would probably soon report on the subject.

Mr. Dean was of the belief that the mode of election was before the committee as much as anything else; and before an election was made there should be a report on the subject.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said he believed from what he could learn, the Fire Commissioners would be glad to get their report back again for their own credit. They knew so little about the matter that they did not know what was meant by coupling or uncoupling hose.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 said he had listened to the gentleman from Ward 12 for the purpose of learning his duty, whether they should or not postpone action on the subject of nominating officers for the Fire Department, and he failed to see why the committee should not be appointed tonight. They were acting under the present ordinance and should act now.

Mr. Jones, in justice to the Committee on Fire Department, said it should be stated that they would probably report on the matter in their hands before the Committee on Nominations make their report.

Mr. Dean said the gentleman had said they had heard from the committee, but it was not so, for the hearing from one member was not hearing from the committee. The matter was once laid on the table for the purpose of hearing from the committee, and there could be no objection to looking into the matter.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 believed the gentleman from Ward 14 answered all the objections of the gentleman from Ward 12, in the statement that the nominations would not probably be reported upon before the committee made their report on the suggestions of the Commissioners.

Mr. Dean believed there could be nothing lost by delay, and hoped the appointment of a committee would not be made tonight.

Mr. Flynn said it was true he made the motion to lay the report of the Commission on the table, which report was laid before the Council on the 30th January, since which time there had been abundant opportunity to consider the matter.

Mr. Jones stated that there would be but a month before the new board should be elected, failing in which the engineers would hold over.

Mr. West of Ward 16 moved as an amendment that the committee shall not report on the nominations until the committee shall report on the report of the Fire Commissioners.

The Chair stated that the motion was not now in order, the question being on postponement one week.

The motion to postpone was lost.

The question being upon the appointment of the committee, Mr. West offered his amendment again.

The amendment was lost, and the order for the appointment of the committee was carried.

The Chair appointed as the committee on the part of the Council—Ward 1, Tower; 2, Daegy; 3, Wells; 4, Powers; 5, Mahan; 6, Perkins; 7, Flynn; 8, Darrow; 9, Prescott; 10, Marston; 11, Caton; 12, Dean; 13, Woodward; 14, Boardman; 15, Edwards; 16, West.

Mr. Dean asked to be excused from serving on the committee, but the request was not granted.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, Messrs. Page, Pickering of Ward 6, and Thacher of Ward 15 were appointed a committee, to be joined, to nominate a candidate for Commissioner on the Sinking Fund.

ANNUAL REPORT OF COMMISSIONERS OF CEDAR GROVE CEMETERY.

The fifth annual report of the Commissioners of Cedar Grove Cemetery states that the services of F. M. Safford were secured as Superintendent on the first of May last, and he has performed the duties of the office to the satisfaction of the Commissioners and the acceptance of those having relations with the cemetery. The work during the year embraces the raising and grading of a part of Linden avenue, changing the location of another part of the same avenue, and of a part of Cedar avenue and the grading of the same; the grading in part of the large tract of land lying between these two avenues; the preparation of the ornamental spaces for plants and shrubbery; the planting of trees, plants and shrubs, and other work of clearing the ground.

Twenty-five of the lots previously sold have been newly graded and sodded at the expense of the proprietors; twenty lots were sold and twenty-six were graded in 1872, and the number of interments was forty. A public lot large enough to afford room for one thousand single graves has been laid out in an eligible location on Maple avenue, the grading of which will be carried on as occasion may demand. Under the authority to expend $6000 in improving the grounds, the expenditures have amounted to $5156.49, of which $3492.05 was for Superintendent and laborers, $514.48 for horses, carts, etc., $273.20 for plants, trees and seeds, $231.51 for manure and loam, $200 to clerk, $188 for tools, $140 for posts, $113.68 for printing, engineering, removal of bodies, etc. Since the last annual report the Shawmut Branch Railroad Company has completed its track through a part of the cemetery grounds, and is running its cars, but the railroad company has yet considerable work to do in the grounds to place them and the crossings of the avenues by its track in the condition required by law.

Laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

PAYMENT OF CLAIMS FOR WORK ON SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the report "leave to withdraw" on petition of Holohan & Maguire to be paid for plumbing work on Smallpox Hospital destroyed by fire, was taken from the table, and considered.

Alderman Sayward offered an order as a substitute for the report, to pay the parties $1024 for work done on said hospital.

Alderman Gaffield stated as the grounds for the report, that the opinion of the City Solicitor was obtained, that as the work under the contract was not accepted, it would not be legal to pay for it, and, admitting it to be a hard case, as they were not called upon to exercise charity, the committee could not report in favor of the payment of the claim.

Alderman Sayward did not agree with the committee in their conclusions, for he believed the contract to be virtually completed, there being but three or four extra hours' work to be done; and it would be a species of robbery not to pay them for their work. If the contract was fulfilled, the city ought to pay them.

Alderman Quincy stated as the difference, that if the contract was nearly completed it was not fully, and it was a question whether they had a right to pay for work not delivered, simply because it was a hard case. He heartily sympathized with the parties, but they were not there to exercise pity, and should not vote for the order if it was illegal, as they were assured it was by the City Solicitor.

In answer to a question of Alderman Stebbins, he said the work was not at the time the city's, but to be delivered, and was at the risk of the builders. If completed and accepted, the city would have been liable; but at the time the building was owned by the contractors, and it was at their risk.

Alderman Sayward declared that they did deliver their work to the city on their grounds, and on the second contract, after the fire, what was picked up as the remains of the fire were accepted by the city. If the contract was not admitted to be completed, why did the city accept the materials saved from the fire?

Alderman Clark believed there could be no doubt there was an equitable claim. The circumstances of the case were peculiar, and was for work in plumbing, not like that of a schoolhouse or engine house, to be completed and delivered. It was so far completed that orders had been given to put in the furniture the night on which it was burnt. All the work would have been completed if it had been thought necessary to use lights. Inasmuch as the city had given orders to its agents to put in furniture, and it would have been done but for the storm on the night of the fire, and furthermore as it was in the charge of the city's agents, as watchmen, it might have been set on fire through the carelessness of these agents, it should be considered as a virtual acceptance of the work, and an equitable claim for payment.

A precedent for the payment of this claim could be found in the case of Rockwell & Churchill, city printers, for work destroyed in their office during the great fire. In that case the City Solicitor believed the payment was not legal, yet considered it an equitable claim. Here was a case of mechanics suffering for the sum of $1000 or $1100 because they did not work till twelve o'clock to complete their work. If not legal it was an equitable claim, and it would be complete robbery and the greatest injustice not to pay every dollar of it. Inasmuch as the city did accept the old material, and it was deducted from the other, he had no doubt they could collect the claim legally. Why recognize the ownership of the material if not pay the claim for the work?

Alderman Gibson inquired if the building was not insured by the parties, and if not, it was not the concern or loss of the city.

Alderman Gaffield replied that there was no insurance on this work.

Alderman Gibson wished to know then why the case was here when the city was full of insurance offices, ready to insure such property, and if it was not their lookout to get it insured it was not the city's fault. They paid a City Solicitor $10,000 for his opinion, and they should regard his opinion, or start him off. He pitied the men, but there was no reason why they should be paid a cent.

Alderman Clark did not believe there was one plumber in a thousand who got an insurance on his work, and they could not afford to pay in such a case. It was a case of equity if not of law, and it was no more than justice that it should be paid. The cost of the building would be cheap enough with the payment of all the bills, and when improvements are made and additions made to it it will answer the purpose for which it was designed for many years to come. As to the salary of the City Solicitor, they did not pay him $10,000 but $5000.

Alderman Sayward expressed a doubt whether the parties could have got an insurance.

Alderman Gibson believed they were derelict of their duty if they did not, and it was none of the business of the city if they did not. In the face of the opinion of the City Solicitor, and he did not mean that he was paid $10,000, but that the office cost that sum, they ought not to pay that claim. It was the fault of the parties if they did not get insured. He could not see that it was a hard case, for if they had intended to bear the loss they would have got insured.

Alderman Sayward replied that the parties agreed to do certain work and they had done it. The only contract they had was a verbal one, and as they were honest they acknowledged that they made such a contract, when they might have put in their work by the day, and got their pay for it.

Alderman Clark referred to the case of the Girls' High and Normal School, as a precedent, in which the city paid for work destroyed by a gale of wind. In that case the contractors could have afforded the loss, while in this case the contractors could not.

Alderman Gibson said it was news to him if the city was to be a gale, fire and accident insurance company.

Alderman Sayward referred again to the fact that the contract was a verbal one, and that the parties might, if they had so chosen, put in a bill for their work by the day. There was a moral if not a legal obligation to pay the bill.

Alderman Gibson held the verbal contract to be as strong as a written one, and if the parties failed to get insured, they could not come upon the city for their pay. They could have got insured at twenty-five cents a month upon $100. He did know of insurance companies that write on buildings blown down, and the city had nothing to do with the neglect of others.

Alderman Quincy said the Committee on Claims were clear that the city was not liable for the payment of this claim, and if paid as a precedent, what would follow? In the cases of the blowing-up of buildings at the fire, they believed the city was not liable, and so reported, and there was no reason for it in these cases, so there was none in this. If it was to be paid it should be taken on the shoulders of the Board, and not on those of the committee.

Alderman Sayward stated that the city received all the contractors agreed to give it in work.

Alderman Gafield believed the payment of such a claim would open the door to a multitude of claims. The City Solicitor says it should not be paid, and that should be reason enough. In a recent case before the committee, the party being asked his amount of claim, replied $3000; yet the committee reported leave to withdraw, because it would open the door to other illegal claims. If every unfortunate person who suffers by fire and accidents and comes to the city because his case is a hard one, to pay them all would make the city bankrupt. He was willing to use his purse so far as might be necessary to meet hard cases, but could not vote to take the money of the city.

The committee reported leave to withdraw in this case, because they did not believe the parties fulfilled their contract, yet the Alderman now says they might have brought in their bill for days' work. He did not believe in doing business in that way. It was in evidence when the building was burnt that when it was asked how much the fire would cost the city, the reply was not a dollar. The city was not liable for the work until it was delivered, and it was not in a condition to be delivered up.

Alderman Power said the payment of claims for accidents was not to be compared with this. But in the comparison as to the payment for broken arms and legs, is it an uncommon thing to continue to pay the wages of those in the employ of the city, who meet with such accidents? As in the case advocated by him for the payment of the claim of Rockwell & Churchill, he was in favor of this, and did not like to have the city take advantage of a legal quibble to cheat a poor man out of a few dollars under such circumstances as this. There was not a voter in the city who would object to the payment. Rockwell & Churchill had not a legal claim, but in justice it was believed the claim should be paid.

If these parties should now make out a bill for their days' work, they could not refuse to pay it. As to getting insurance on their work, he never heard of a mechanic doing such a thing under such circumstances in his life. There were precedents for the payment, and in justice they ought to pay it, and should there be more claims, and there was nothing worse than this, no citizen would find fault for so doing.

Alderman Gibson said he had never heard of any mechanic not getting an insurance in such cases; it was their duty to do it, and if they did not they should get nothing. The city was not a hurricane, fire or accident insurance company. There was no money due, and he considered it a put-up job to get their sympathy. The city had a large pocket, and long-armed men liked to get their hands down deep in that pocket. He moved the previous question, but withdrew it on request.

Alderman Clark denied that this was a put-up job. He had no doubt if the City Solicitor was familiar with all the facts in the case that he would agree that the city had virtually accepted the work, for they were putting in bedsteads, bedding and other articles that day. As they were putting in these things it was just as likely that our agents set the building on fire. He doubted whether the Solicitor knew it was virtually accepted, by putting in supplies and provisions. In justice and equity, to the city and to the citizens, this was a fair case to be settled by paying it.

Alderman Gibson said the contract was not completed, and the claim should not come here. Offices were open to them for insurance, but they failed to get it, and ought not to come here for their pay. The work might be said to be well along, but it was not done.

Alderman Clark said the work was virtually accepted, and orders were given to occupy the building that day. If not accepted, then it was not right in the city to occupy the building. He doubted whether the Solicitor would have given the legal opinion he did if he had known all the facts. But for the storm, furniture would have been placed in the building during the afternoon and evening, and an allowance had been made for the materials saved from the fire.

Alderman Brown, in view of the difference of opinion, and for the purpose of ascertaining whether the City Solicitor knew all the facts in the case, moved that the subject be laid over one week, but withdrew the motion.

Alderman Gibson said if it was understood the work was completed he would vote to pay for it.

Alderman Sayward replied that the work lacked an hour or two of completion. He could not understand what was meant by the Alderman's saying it was a put-up job, unless the term applied to buying old steamboats. The work was put up in a building of the city, and he believed it to be a legal claim.

Alderman Quincy stated that all the evidence in the case was before the City Solicitor, as to moving in articles. On the statement of the Alderman the contract was made with a mental proviso, that if not paid, it was to be charged as days' work. He had no right to say so.

Alderman Sayward said he did not say that the parties claimed a right to charge for days' work. The verbal contract was held to be just as binding as a written one, and the parties meant to do right and acknowledged the contract. But it was believed that that was the cheapest way of doing the labor by days' work, and the Chairman of the Board asked why it was not done so.

Alderman Gibson inquired whether the Alderman considered the work to be done according to contract?

Alderman Sayward replied that the contract was a verbal one, for $1240. He knew nothing of the words of the contract, but knew that it was all done but an hour's work, and this might have been on account of extra work.

Mr. Stebbins wished to know of the superintendent of the work, who was present, whether the stoves put into the building were not put there by the city.

M. F. Wells, by request of the Board, stated in answer to questions, that the stoves were put in and run by the city, and the work was all done except in making connections with the boilers. It might have been done except for extra work. Beds, bedsteads, coal hods, etc., had been put in.

Alderman Stebbins contended that on these statements the work had been virtually accepted, and the city was legally bound to pay for it.

Alderman Gafield said the statements in relation to the knowledge of the City Solicitor touched him. His sympathies were all in favor of the parties, and all the evidence which was reported was submitted by him to the City Solicitor. He got the evidence, and again and again went to the City Solicitor with its details, told him all about the Superintendent's services, and the supplies, etc. But on this point ex-Alderman Jeuks testified that the supplies were to be sent the next day, and were so ordered. Yet this did not alter the legal liability, in the opinion of the City Solicitor, unless the contractors protested against putting in the articles.

Alderman Brown renewed his motion to recommit to ascertain whether the City Solicitor knew all the facts, and if so whether it was a legal claim.

The motion was lost—5 to 6.

Alderman Clark, to relieve doubts as to the question of acceptance, stated that certain kinds of goods were ordered to the hospital to the amount of $200 or $300, under direction of the employes, and would have been there but for the storm. On account of the storm they were stored on the way. But a certain lot to the amount of $100 was delivered. The work was virtually accepted, for the city had its own stoves, coal and the care of the building when burnt.

Alderman Quincy stated that the work could not be accepted before delivered. The next day the keys were to be delivered, when the acceptance would have taken place.

Alderman Sayward wished to know how it could be learned what was the language of the contract when it was not written.

Alderman Gibson was sorry the motion to recommit did not prevail. There appeared to be a disposition to choke off obtaining the opinion of the City Solicitor on the full facts in the case. They were guardians of the city's property, and should look over matters to see that no illegal payments were made.

Alderman Sayward said he knew something of the work. There were stoves in the building put in by the city, but he never heard of stoves being put in to dry plumber's work.

Alderman Gibson reported that there was no claim, for the job was not done. It appeared to be only a put-up job. If one or two hours' more work was required, it was not complete, and there was nothing here for us. It had no business here, and there was nothing to pay for. He moved the previous question and the yeas and nays on the motion.

The order was lost by a vote of six to six, as follows:

Yeas—Brown, Clark, Emery, Power, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Bigelow, Catter, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy.

The question recurred upon the acceptance of the report, leave to withdraw.

Alderman Hulbert said he was going to move a re-committal, for no one wishes injustice done in anything. Every member of the Board desired to do right, and if the payment was to be made it must be made in accordance with the authority for doing it. It should be submitted to the City Solicitor, who is bound to know the legality of the measure. He should be glad to know that he was acquainted with all the facts, and if, after they were all stated, he should give a like decision, he should vote in accordance with that opinion. That it may be fully understood by the City Solicitor, he hoped it would be re-committed to the committee to report again upon it.

Alderman Quincy said he would vote for re-committing if there were more facts to be reported upon. There had been nothing said here that had not been told to the City Solicitor. He could not see any necessity for re-committing, and could not vote for it.

Alderman Gibson would not pay the claim if not due, and the difference of opinion, 6 to 6, called for another investigation.

Alderman Gaffield had no objection to the commitment, yet all of the evidence had been given to the City Solicitor. The question was put to him relative to the goods being sent to the hospital, and he replied that it made no difference at all, if there was no protest.

The motion to recommit was carried.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, the report "leave to withdraw" on petition of Smith & McGarragle to be paid the amount of their contract for erection of the Smallpox Hospital which was destroyed by fire, was taken from the table.

Alderman Sayward asked for the reasons for the conclusion of the report.

Alderman Cutter (Alderman Gibson in the chair) addressed the Board in defence of the report of the committee. He said there were a large number of witnesses before the committee, and everybody who knew anything of the matter was summoned. The report of the evidence was then sent to the City Solicitor, who gave it as his opinion that the claim was an illegal one, and it was their duty to report that it should not be paid. He would never report an illegal bill for payment if not required to. The powers of the city were created by charter, and they were not to vote away money in charity. By virtue of law money was raised and by virtue of law it was expended. Most of the claims which are made against the city are illegal, and if the parties think justice is not done them, they have their remedy in the courts.

He was surprised that this claim was advocated here, for all there was of it was sympathy, and they had nothing to do with it. In corroboration of his views he would cite from the opinions of the Mayor, while a member of this Board in 1871. The views of the Mayor were given in the House of Correction cases, in which a distinction was made between that of Freeland, Beard & Co., who required a receipt for all the goods delivered by them, and those of other parties who did not. In that Alderman Pierce argued that the City Council must act within its corporate powers.

Alderman Clark wished the Alderman would read the argument on both sides in those cases.

Alderman Cutter said he wished to give the opinion of the present Mayor, which was that they were debarred the payment of illegal claims. So far as related to the furnishing of stoves in this case, they were for the convenience of builders as much as they were for the city. The contract was to be completed the next day, when the building was to be delivered at noon. It was in evidence that the last thing they did at night was to look after the stoves, and in less than half an hour after they left it was burned. The next morning, in answer to his question, the Alderman in charge of the work, said the city had not lost a dollar. He replied that if the city was not holden he had nothing to say. If holden, he would have asked for an investigation. When this present contract was made, it was not given to the lowest bidder, for the reason, it was said, that the city did not own the piling. If the building had been accepted, then the city would have owned the piling.

Alderman Sayward said, I call this report from the table at this time for the purpose of asking the committee what are the reasons for giving these petitioners leave to withdraw. While I believe we have an able and discreet judge in our City Solicitor on all legal questions, still he is human and liable to err. Now he says these parties have no legal claim for the labor and materials furnished to the city of Boston in building the smallpox hospital on Swett street, which was destroyed by fire on the night of the 26th of December, 1872. Now this may be so, but I think all will admit that they have a claim in equity. Now, sir, as to the legality of this claim, I have so much confidence in this that were it my own case and I could not get my claim allowed here I should ask for a jury to decide it.

I think these parties have a legal claim, and I will endeavor to give my reasons for this, so that the members of this Board will see it in the same light in which I do. In the first place let us see what the contract says, and I will merely glance at some of its provisions. It provides for insurance when the roof is on and the policy be made payable to the city of Boston. Why this precaution on the part of the city? Does the city by the terms of this contract agree to pay at this time? or is there any evidence that the contractors made a demand for money at this time, and that this was the reason the city desired to be insured? No, sir! the city knew that when the roof was on this building, whatever labor and materials had been put into that building the city were bound to pay for, hence the request to insure. If this is not so, and it was the contractors' loss, in case of fire or any other calamity, what right has the city of Boston to say when or how much insurance shall be effected on this building? Another provision in this contract is, that this smallpox hospital is to be completed on or before the 28th of December, 1872. These parties claim that it was completed the day before it was destroyed by fire. If this was the case, have they not fulfilled their contract? It may be said they had not delivered it to the city. Is there any clause in the contract requiring them to make any formal delivery of this building to the city? But suppose there was such a clause. The city did not wait for such a notice, but took possession by placing furniture in the building, causing fires to be made, and placing watchmen there to tend fires, and I think firemen and police to guard the building.

But if what I have already said should fail to convince members of this Board that the contractors should be paid for the labor and materials furnished to the city for this hospital—for no one denies that the materials were furnished, and the labor performed—the only question is will the city pay for this? In the absence of a contract, these parties would get their pay. Now there is a contract, and that contract having been fulfilled on the part of the contractors, by completing the building on or before the 28th of December, 1872, the city of Boston is bound to pay the amount agreed upon. But, as I said before, if I have failed to convince this Board thus far, there are still other reasons.

The first is, that the party who superintended the building of this hospital for the city of Boston has been paid in full for his services, namely, by the usual percentage for plans, specifications and superintendence on the full cost of the building. If this is not proof that the city accepted this building, what other proof is wanted?

I presume it will not be denied that if the city owned any portion or part of this building, it owned the whole. To show that it did claim to own the part that was not destroyed by fire, in asking for proposals the parties were told that the foundation was there and need not be included in the bids. Was this not saying the city owned this building? Then I ask why should we, as agents for the city, refuse to pay this claim?

I have but few words more to say on the subject, and then shall leave the matter with the Board, hoping that they will believe with me that they are both legally and morally bound to pay these petitioners. If these parties had not fulfilled their contract at the time of the fire why did not the city insist that they should, instead of making a new contract? It may be said in answer that there was not time. Under the circumstances the time could have been extended and a compromise have been made with the contractors to put up such a building as we now have, in place of the one they had previously contracted for. But everything that has been done on the part of the city goes to show that it was considered that this smallpox hospital that was destroyed by fire must be paid for.

Alderman Cutter said they had but to discharge their duty in the refusal to pay an illegal claim, and take the consequences.

Alderman Sayward replied that that was what he proposed to do, to discharge his duty, and he did not wish that any one should call his vote in question.

Alderman Quincy referred to the clause in the contract in relation to insurance as an acknowledgment of liability of contractors when the roof was on.

Alderman Sayward explained that it had reference to the time when it was to be insured, and not when delivered up. There was some extra work after the contract was completed, having nothing to do with the contract.

Alderman Gaffield stated that the contractors swore the contract was not completed. Suppose they should take the same course proposed in relation to school houses, in assuming that there was an obligation to pay for contracts before completed. There would be a great liability upon the city in the amount of work always going on.

Alderman Sayward said he would pay in such cases if there was a similarity in the completion of the contract.

Alderman Clark said he was clear about the other case, but he had not made up his mind about this, and he hoped it would go back to the committee. He wished to know positively as to whether the putting in of goods and stoves was not a virtual acknowledgment of the acceptance of the work, and he moved a recommitment.

Alderman Quincy had no objection to recommitment, but believed there would be no change in the result, for the same evidence would be put before the City Solicitor, to receive the same answer.

Alderman Sayward could see no reason for recommitting to the same committee, who had made up their minds, and did not desire to change them.

Alderman Cutter said there were no reasons for sending the report back. The keys of the building were in the contractors' hands, and the City Solicitor had given his opinion that the city was not bound to pay the claim. They stood in the place of the city, and should stand by the treasury and not spend the money in an illegal and trifling manner. If they did, it would open a wide gate, and they could not get rid of a multitude of such claims. It fit became them to pay illegal claims.

Alderman Sayward objected that the Alderman still says he has no right to vote according to his convictions. When he voted as he believed it to be right, he did not wish to have the vote called in question.

Alderman Power claimed that all the citizens and taxpayers are the city, and it was a part of their business to defend the rights of citizens, to defend every claim which was a just one. A claim might be just, although illegal. The City Solicitor was supposed to look at the question in one way merely, as to whether it is legal, while it was not their duty to compel parties to go to law to get their rights. If justly entitled to pay, they should not hesitate to pay claims.

Alderman Sayward said he knew that not everything was stated to the City Solicitor. There were not stated to him the facts in relation to the piles, or that the superintendent of the work on the buildings on the part of the city had been paid for his services, which were two important points. He moved the substitution of the order in place of the report of the committee.

The question was taken on the recommitment, which was carried.

ADDITIONAL ROOM FOR CITY OFFICES.

On motion of Alderman Sayward the report and order to hire the Missionary Building in Pemberton square, at an annual rent of $7000, for city purposes, were taken from the table.

Alderman Sayward said all the inquiries had been made which were required in relation to rooms in the church on Somerset street, and another building had been looked at, but none of them had the conveniences which were needed. With the adoption of the order, the building in question could be occupied with but trifling expense, and all the accommodations provided which would be needed for years to come.

Alderman Gibson said he went with the chairman of the committee to look around, and found that the rooms in the church would not answer at all, and the members of neither board would be willing to go there. They looked at another house in Pemberton square, the rent of which was $3500, which was illy adapted for the uses of the city. The building on the corner was very desirable if they needed so much room. He did not think so much was needed, and on inquiry whether the City Solicitor's present rooms could be given up, it was believed they could not, but they might be rented at a less rate than now paid.

Alderman Clark believed the city must hire some rooms, and thought the rooms in the church might answer the purpose. It was thought, however, that they might make a shift, by removing the Lamp Department and giving the room to the Board of Health. The Milk Inspector might also be removed. With such changes they might get along for awhile.

Alderman Brown inquired how many committees needed accommodations?

Alderman Sayward said the rooms were not wanted for committees but for office accommodations for departments. The Board of Directors for Public Institutions, Assessors and other departments had asked for more accommodations, and if the Legislature does what they had suggested, certain changes must be made requiring other rooms. If this opportunity should be lost, another would not be had so good for years. The building on the opposite corner rented for $10,000, while this could be had for $7000.

Alderman Quincy could not agree with the Alderman as to the accommodations in the church, and the rent of the Missionary Building was believed to be exorbitant at $7000. Until convinced of the exigency he could not vote for the order.

Alderman Sayward believed the rooms in the church were not fit for the Board of Health.

Alderman Gibson estimated the cost of the rooms in the other house in Pemberton square, fitted up, would be $3500.

Alderman Sayward said he had the opinion of Mr. Bradlee, who had the house to rent, that the Missionary building at $7000 would be cheaper than the other at $3000. That was the opinion also of Mr. Kirby, Mr. Cotton and others. The other building was the house of Mr. Atkinson, the next above the State constable's office.

Alderman Hulbert said he believed it to be desirable to have all the public offices in the City Hall, and it was his conviction that with certain changes all of the departments could be accommodated in a manner of which they could not complain. Such accommodations could be afforded as were better than four-fifths of the merchants of this city put up with.

Alderman Sayward said he should like to know where the accommodations are which the gentleman speaks of, for he did not know of such accommodations.

Alderman Hulbert believed there was no occasion for the removal of the Board of Directors for Public Institutions, who were well enough off as they are. As to the matter of accommodations in the City Hall, he knew whereof he spoke. Should a consultation be made with the Board of Health, he did not doubt satisfactory arrangements could be made with them for their accommodations.

Alderman Power referred to the large amount of room in the upper part of the City Hall, and the ample accommodations of the Superintendent of Schools. They had been debating a long time about saving $1200 in the payment of a claim, and he thought they might as well save the rent of $7000.

Alderman Gibson, in further remarks in relation to the Missionary Building, was of the opinion that with the taxes and repairs it would cost $10,000 a year.

Alderman Clark said he had been waiting to get more light from the Committee on Public Buildings, who were divided in opinion on the subject. He had looked at the rooms in the church, and believed such as were needed for the Board of Health and Public Institutions might be had for $1000 a year, the city making its own repairs. The rooms answered well for a high school for girls for ten years, and provision might be made for the care of them by the janitor of the building at a small expense.

In regard to rooms in the City Hall, the Superintendent of Schools had large and magnificent rooms, and it may be that they were all needed. Of that he did not understand. Accommodations might be had up stairs for some offices, and the Superintendent of Lamps and the Inspector of Milk might perhaps be removed to the church.

Alderman Sayward said in regard to the room adjoining the Common Council chamber, that that could not be used for offices, and the Superintendent of Printing was placed in a corner of it because no quarters could be had anywhere else.

Alderman Clark made a few remarks upon the suggestions of Alderman Gibson, that some occupants of rooms should double up, and he moved an indefinite postponement of the order, which was carried by a vote of six to four.

Adjourned

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

MARCH 6, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening, at 7½ o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

A call of the roll showed the following named members to be present, there being a quorum:

Abbott, Adams, Barnes, Bicknell, Bleiler, Boardman, Brackett, Brennan, Burditt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Dacey, Darrow, Dean, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Hughes, Lamb, Loring, Madden, Mahan, Marston, Martin, McCue, McKenney, Morse, Page, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Risteen, Shaw, Thacher, Tower, Upham, Warren, West, Weston, Whiston, Woods, Woodward.

AUDITOR'S ESTIMATES FOR 1873-74.

The Auditor's estimates were laid before the Council, in print, as follows:

OFFICE OF THE AUDITOR OF ACCOUNTS, (CITY HALL, February 27, 1873. }

Edward O. Shepard, Esq., President of the Common Council: Sir—The Auditor of Accounts has the honor of submitting to the City Council, as required by the ordinance relating to finance, the accompanying estimates of the money which will be needed to defray the expenses of the city of Boston and the county of Suffolk for the financial year 1873-74, which commences May 1, 1873, and terminates April 30, 1874, and pay the State tax of 1873.

The estimated expenditures for 1873-74 are... $10,932,147 00
The estimated income for 1873-74 is... 2,545,650 00

To which add three per cent. for the amount of taxes which will not be paid into the treasury during the financial year... 251,595 00

We have a total which, in the judgment of the Auditor of Accounts, should be the gross tax for 1873, say... $8,638,092 00

The amount to be raised by taxation this year, as compared with that of last year, shows a large increase, as follows:

Tax of 1873... $8,638,092 00
Tax of 1872... 7,759,842 00

Increase of tax in 1873... $878,250 00

Taking the valuation of the city at a sum of $45,000,000 less than it was last year, which was $682,734,300, in consequence of the loss of property by the great fire of November 9, 1872, and other causes, over the gains from valuation of new buildings erected during the year 1872, and the increase of value of real estate in some portions of the city, it will require to raise the amount of the tax, as above stated, of $8,638,092, and the percentage to be levied by the Board of Assessors to meet abatements, a rate of about $14 per $1000 of property. This is an increase of $2 30 per $1000 over that of 1872, which was $11 70. The following table exhibits the rate of taxation on each $1000 of property for the past ten years:

1863	$11 50	1868	$12 30
1864	13 30	1869	13 70
1865	15 80	1870	15 30
1866	13 00	1871	13 10
1867	15 50	1872	11 70

The average rate for ten years being $13 52 per thousand dollars.

The aggregate of the interest to be paid on the gross debt of the city, and the gold premium, shows an increase of $434,000. The debt was largely increased the last municipal year, and has already been increased $3,000,000, for street improvements in the burnt district, and it will require in all probability $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 more for that purpose. With this large increase of the debt of our city, a large increase of the interest account must of necessity follow.

The estimates show the introduction of three new standing appropriations as compared with those of 1872-73: one for the Board of Health, a department created by an ordinance relating to health passed by the City Council of 1872, who have charge of the general health of the city, the abatement of nuisances, etc.; one for Cedar Grove Cemetery, to the Board of Trustees of which the City Council granted an appropriation after the passage of the general appropriation order of 1872; one providing for the registration of voters and election expenses. The expenses attending elections have, heretofore, been charged to Printing and Incidental Expenses; the latter appropriation has been decreased the amount usually charged to it for that purpose. The amount for registration of voters is to defray the expenses to be incurred in adopting the new method of registering voters, which will be enacted by the present session of our State Legislature.

Several of the departments, it will be seen, ask for largely increased appropriations. The increase for the Fire Department is $106,316, asked for principally to increase the force of that department, four steam engines, live horse hose carriages, and one hook and ladder truck. For the carrying on of the schools $139,525, of which amount $105,275 is for instructors, the salaries of the grammar and primary school instructors having been increased in 1872. For the Board of Health and Health Department an increase of $101,874, the increase being wanted for the purpose of organizing a new gang of street sweepers, and the more thorough abating of nuisances. For the police, $30,000, to meet the pay for an increase of the number of policemen. For East Boston ferries, $50,000, for a new boat. For sewers, $50,000, to meet the increased wants for sewerage. For water works, $95,500, caused by the laying of new service pipes, and increased cost of carrying on the works in consequence of their extension into the Roxbury and Dorchester districts. For the West Boston and Craigie's bridges, $49,000, the city having to bear one-half the cost of rebuilding Craigie's Bridge.

The above gives the largest items of increase and the causes for it, and the following tables show the appropriations of 1872-3, compared with the estimates for the financial year 1873-74, exhibiting the increase and decrease of each, and the table shows a comparison of the estimated revenue of 1873-74 with that of 1872-73.

The total amount asked for the carrying on of the schools, is $1,406,125, and for interest and premium $2,348,000.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The order to allow for payment sundry bills for extra services by certain policemen therein named, being under consideration—

Mr. Page of Ward 9 inquired the nature of the services for which payment was asked.

Mr. Martin of Ward 7 replied that he was not aware that the matter had been before the Committee on Police.

On motion of Mr. Page, the order was referred to the Committee on Police.

WIDENING OF FEDERAL AND OTHER STREETS.

The resolve and order to widen Federal street to sixty feet from Summer to Milk street (Printed City Document No. 31, 1873,) coming up—

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 moved to lay on the table the several orders for widening and extending streets, with a view to offering a resolution.

The Chair stated the question to be on the single order under consideration and the question being taken, the order was laid on the table.

Mr. Perkins offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the resolves and orders now before the Common Council for the extension of Oliver street, the widening and extension of Pearl street, the widening and extension of Franklin street, and the widening of Milk, Federal and Congress streets, except those parts of Federal and Congress streets north of Franklin street extended, have the support of the Council, and that the Council hereby assures the property owners affected by the contemplated changes in the lines of the foregoing streets, that the said resolves and orders, subject to the foregoing exceptions, will be adopted whenever a decision can be reached in regard to the portions of those streets reserved in this resolution.

Mr. Perkins stated in explanation of the resolve that there was no question in regard to the proposed improvements, except that of widening Federal street between Franklin and Milk streets, and Congress street, north of Milk street. The Street Commissioners were not prepared to ask for the passage of the resolves and orders at the last meeting of the Council, and since then the text of the appropriations by Congress had been sent by telegraph requiring a further widening of streets in the neighborhood of the Post Office and the removal of the buildings on the triangular space of ground between Congress, Milk and Bath streets. This despatch he read, as containing all the information known on the subject, and it was desired to ascertain the whole conditions before action was taken in the matter.

The question to be decided was what should be for the best interests of the city, and whether to concede to the United States Government in relation to the line of widening, to secure the expenditure of one and a half millions of dollars. The Street Commissioners had no recommendations to make, and the Council was called upon to indicate their choice as citizens and not as members of the Council. No action could be taken until further orders should be sent to the City Council in relation to the triangular piece of land, and the reason was obvious, that if the present orders should be passed without providing for the taking of so much as will be left in the extension of Pearl street, the value of the land will be so increased that it cannot be had except at an exorbitant price.

It was accordingly desirable that the resolution should be passed, so that all persons in the burial district embraced within its provisions should be relieved as to the action of the City Government, and the property owners assured that those are the lines to be established just as soon as the question on the whole of these connected orders can be put to the Council. There will be no change in the plans so far as relate to the extension of Oliver street, the widening of Milk and Franklin streets and the widening of Federal and Congress streets as far as the northerly line of Franklin street, which are satisfactory to every one.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 inquired what effect the action of the United States Government would have upon the widening of Federal street, at the corner of Milk street, for the gentleman from Ward 6 had not explained it. Before he voted he wished to know what effect the action of Congress would have upon the widening of Federal street.

Mr. Perkins replied that it would have no effect at all. The resolution was offered simply because, so far as the contest was settled, there should be no delay. The reason why the Street Commissioners do not send out the necessary orders for further taking of land is that they do not wish to until there is an expression of opinion whether it is desirable to go into such an expense as will be required.

Mr. Shaw said the gentleman had not answered his interrogatory. Everything was to be passed upon by a wholesale sweep of a resolution except in relation to the widening of Federal street, and when he asked the basis of the action, he was answered by reference to the action of Congress in regard to another matter. Again he asked what the action of Congress had to do with the widening of Federal street to its junction at Milk street. The gentleman takes it for granted that all the other matters are agreed upon, and yet no votes have been taken to indicate any such feeling.

It had been said that the report of the plan of the Street Commissioners received the unanimous vote of the Committee on Streets. There had been two weeks' delay in the action upon it, and the cry of the citizens was, why this delay? And now there was to be another delay in regard to Federal street. It was an unusual thing to pass such measures by a sweeping clause of this kind, and if adopted it would be an extraordinary state of things. It was proper to consider these several streets in detail and not by a wholesale resolution, important as were these measures to the public.

The city of Boston was competent to act in these matters without the dictation of Congress, or knowing from whom or to whom it may come. The resolution appeared to be the result of the action of the Committee on Streets, but no explanation had been made to satisfy him. He did not wish to impede progress, but believed they were here for the purpose of acting upon the order in the report of the committee. If he was not correct he asked to be set right. He thought it would be boys' play to have the reports laid over or passed by resolution. It might be his stupidity, but he had yet to learn the necessity of passing the resolution.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said the order was laid over from the last meeting to ascertain the action of Congress, and since then the Government had called for the laying out of a piece of land of 5000 feet, at a cost of some $200,000. It was believed that a space of seventy feet in front of the Post Office was sufficient, and he was not in favor of action to please the postmaster or anybody else.

The resolution was passed—39 in favor, none in opposition.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12 offered the following order:

Ordered, That the resolve and order for the widening of Federal street from Summer to Milk street be recommitted to the Street Commissioners, with instructions to report a resolve and order for the widening of Federal street from Summer to Franklin street, substantially in accordance with the plan made by the City Surveyor, dated January 27, 1873, and adopted by the Street Commissioners, February 27, 1873; also a separate resolve and order for the widening of Federal street between Franklin and Milk streets to sixty feet by taking land on the easterly side.

Mr. Loring, in support of the order, said in view of the weight of testimony, the widening of Federal street from Franklin street to Milk street should be on the easterly side, so as to make, as far as possible, a continuous street to Congress street, and he had yet to hear of the first good reason for the widening on the westerly side. For the purpose of satisfying himself in regard to travel, he watched the course of it yesterday, and found that three-fourths of the travel from Federal street into Milk street was to Congress street; and of fifteen teams or carriages fourteen went down to one up. One of the arguments for the widening on the westerly side was that the travel would go into Devonshire street. Devonshire street was extended for the purpose of relieving Washington street, and Devonshire street was now crowded with travel.

The termination of Federal street at Milk street, as proposed by the Commissioners, was against the Post Office, and not, as it should be, a continuous street. The effect of it would be as in State street, where the travel seeking Court street goes up the northerly side of the Old State House, and if one portion of it should be closed it would be the southerly portion in preference to the other.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said he had taken notice recently of the course of travel in that vicinity, with reference to the blocks in consequence, and he was of opinion that the resolve and order should be referred back to the Commissioners.

Mr. Flynn replied that it should be understood that Milk and Congress streets were to be widened to sixty feet, which would greatly relieve the crowds at that portion of the streets, and it should further be considered that Congress street would be a great thoroughfare to South Boston in the future.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 inquired what would be the difference in expense between the plans of widening on the easterly and westerly side.

Mr. Loring replied that he put the question to the Chairman of the Street Commissioners, who said that there would be no material difference in the expense; and in relation to grade he would like to know of the committee if the difference of grade had been considered by them.

Mr. Flynn replied that his impression was that an order had been passed to make the grade the same through the territory of the burnt district.

Mr. Loring said he should judge that the difference in grade was at least ten feet between Congress and Devonshire streets. Federal street and not Congress street must be the thoroughfare to South Boston. The construction of the bridge to South Boston to connect with Congress street could not be within ten or fifteen years, and if he was to be governed by self-interest rather than by his judgment, he should prefer to have Congress street the thoroughfare. As an owner of seven acres of flats he would give his check for $10,000 could the new avenue be completed in ten years. It was all nonsense to contend that Congress street is to be the great thoroughfare, for Federal street is and must be the thoroughfare to South Boston and out of town. The manner of agreeing to the street widenings he objected to, in the Street Commissioners holding conferences with the Committee on Streets, making it an ex parte matter. By looking to the naked facts in the case, the committee would arrive at better opinions.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said he was favorably impressed with the plan of the gentleman from Ward 16 when he first looked at it, because from his knowledge of the corner of Milk, Federal and Congress streets in the last twelve years in its being constantly blocked. In the widening it should be considered that Milk street is to be widened, and the grade is to be raised, and by widening on the westerly side, the travel will be more easily divided, passing into Devonshire street as extended as a thoroughfare.

Mr. Brnditt of Ward 16 said if it was possible to have Federal street a direct street, running into Congress street, he would go with the gentleman from Ward 12, but it could not be without going across the Post Office. It was desirable, then, to divide the travel, and he believed the marginal streets would, in future, take much of the heavy travel.

Mr. Flynn, with reference to the building of the new avenue to South Boston, called attention to the indenture made last year, by which he believed the avenue would be made in five years, and he could take the check of the gentleman on that condition.

Mr. Perkins offered the following as a substitute for the order of Mr. Loring:

Resolved, That the Common Council approve the plans of the Street Commissioners for the widening of Federal and Congress streets from Franklin street extended to Milk street, and hereby assure the property holders on those streets that the orders in which those plans are embodied shall be passed as soon as the other orders with which they are necessarily connected can be prepared and considered.

Mr. Perkins stated, in explanation of the views of the Commissioners, that as it was not expected that Federal street would be a continuous street to Congress street, it would be better to take the travel so that it might be divided between Congress and Devonshire streets, the foot travel especially taking the upper side to Devonshire street.

Mr. Hall of Ward 10 hoped the substitute would be passed, for the Street Commissioners, after full consideration of the subject, believed the widening of Milk street at this point would be ample to obviate the difficulty of blocking the street, and it should be considered that this street was but thirty-eight feet wide previous to the widening.

Mr. Wells stated that the travel downward was a continual stream, and with the widening of Federal street on the easterly side, there would be a chance to turn without blocking. Nineteen of twenty teams would take the down grade rather than the up one, and he failed to find any man who would drive up 150 feet to turn a sharp corner, when by going ten or twelve feet he could make a better turn. He hoped the substitute would not prevail.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 hoped the substitute would prevail, for it would give the abutters the same assurance that those have on the other streets, that there is to be no further delay. The Street Commissioners gave three hearings on the subject, the result of which was that in their best judgment the widening should be on the westerly side of the street. These all were related to one whole, and if one was to be changed, it might necessitate the change of others. He would abide in the judgment of the Commissioners rather than have more delay. During the debate in the Board of Aldermen, the Chairman of the Committee on Streets stated that a recommitment would involve a delay of four weeks, at an expense of $50,000 a day. The report was entitled to their consideration and respect.

Mr. Loring stated that those most interested in the widening on the easterly side would be the greatest sufferers in case of delay, and the weight of testimony in favor of the widening on that side came from these persons who were to be affected by it. The question was how to make the widening to serve the public interest, and if there should be any loss from the delay, those who wished this widening would be the sufferers.

Mr. Flynn stated that should there be a recommitment there must be fourteen days' notice after the action taken by the Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Perkins said it was a mistake to say that the abutters on the easterly side ask for the widening on that side.

Mr. Loring replied that the weight of testimony showed that they were in favor of it, although he would not claim that all the abutters were in favor of it.

On motion of Mr. Perkins, the previous question was ordered, and the substitute was adopted for the order of Mr. Loring.

The several resolves and orders for the widening of Milk street, the widening and extension of Pearl street, the extension of Oliver street, the widening of Congress street between Water and Broad streets, and the extension of Franklin street to Sturgis street, were laid on the table.

Mr. Perkins offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the City Council it is expedient to take and lay out as a public way of the city, that parcel of land remaining between the proposed extension of Pearl street to Congress street, at Water street, Congress street widened to seventy feet on the easterly side, and Milk street after the completion of the said contemplated improvements, and also to widen Water street between Devonshire and Congress streets, on the northerly side, to sixty feet, by taking land from the estate of Edward A. White and others, trustees, and the estate of Beals, Greene & Company; and requesting the Street Commissioners to report orders and estimates of the cost at the earliest practicable moment.

Mr. Perkins said the order was offered simply for the purpose of obtaining the views of the Council on the subject. It was not one of those cut and dried matters of which the gentleman from Ward 12 had spoken, and did not come from the Committee on Streets. Yet if Water street was to be widened further, it would be well to have an expression of opinion, and without it it is supposed there will not be the large expenditure on the Post Office which is contemplated.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 believed that the order would keep one week, and moved that it be laid on the table, which was carried.

Ordered to be sent up.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11, from the Committee on Claims, reported leave to withdraw severally on petitions of William Whittaker to be compensated for the death of his son caused by the discharge of fireworks at Independence square on the 5th of July, 1872, and of Philip McDonough to be compensated for injuries received by his son from an explosion of fireworks at Independence square 5th of July, 1872; also of M. C. Murray to be compensated for damages to his property caused by an alleged defect in Tremont street. Severally accepted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on petition of Joseph K. and Mary J. Melcher to be compensated for damages caused to said Mary J. Melcher by her being sent to the smallpox hospital without cause, and on petition of Lydia A. Edgecomb to be compensated for damages caused by the failure of the health officers to remove from her house a person sick with smallpox. Severally accepted.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department, to whom was referred the petition of Samuel D. Crane and forty-two others that a steam fire engine be located in Ward 11, after a careful consideration of the subject, reported that they find there is no steam fire engine located in that section of the city, while it contains a taxable valuation of $25,000,000; Engine No. 3, located on Washington street, near Dover street. Engine No. 12, being the next nearest steamer, located on the corner of Warren and Dudley streets, a mile and one-fourth from Engine No. 3, while across the city from east to west are a mile and three-eighths.

In this large area of territory there are some of the largest manufactories of the city, with many extensive lumber yards. In view of all these facts, the committee are unanimous in the opinion that the prayer of the petitioners ought to be granted, and would therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Chief-Engineer be authorized to locate and equip a steam fire engine in the house now occupied by Chester Hose No. 4 on Northampton street, and the expense thereof to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

The report was accepted and the order was passed.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, to whom was referred the order of the Board of Street Commissioners authorizing the taking by the city of the estate of M. H. Gleeson on Summer street, at the corner of High street, made a report that the order ought to pass. They also recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Streets be and they are hereby authorized to sell in such manner, and upon such terms as they may deem best for the interest of the city, the portion of the estate taken from M. H. Gleeson on the corner of Summer and High streets, which is not required for the improvement of said streets, the proceeds of said sale to be paid into the City Treasury.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 moved, as an amendment, to provide that the sale shall be by auction, but on the statement being made that the remaining land would be but a small parcel, valuable only to the owner of the adjoining property, the amendment was withdrawn and the order was passed, together with the original order.

Mr. Flynn, from the same committee, to whom was referred the order authorizing his Honor the Mayor to release to Samuel E. Pierce, upon certain terms and conditions, a parcel of land discontinued from Forest-Hills avenue, in widening the same, made a report that the order ought to pass.

The order provides for the release of 8880 square feet of land adjoining the estate of said Pierce, upon the conveyance to the city by him of a parcel of land amounting to 8320 square feet, taken from an estate of his to widen said Forest-Hill avenue, by an order of the Street Commissioners, December 31, 1872.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Mr. Flynn offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Streets be authorized to sell, in such manner and upon such terms as they may deem best for the interest of the city, the portion of the estate taken from C. M. Wheelwright on the corner of Water street and Broad street, which is not required for the improvement of said streets; the proceeds of said sale to be paid into the City Treasury.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 moved an amendment to provide that this sale of land shall be by auction.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 stated that this case was similar to that just acted upon, there being but a small piece of land of little value except to the adjoining estate, and it would save expense by making the sale private, while if it is required to be public, and imperative, there may be no other bidder than the party immediately interested, whose policy would be to get it by as low bid as possible.

Mr. Loring of Ward 12 wished to know the bounds of the land.

Mr. Page stated that the width of the lot on Broad street was very slight, but quite deep on Water street.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 said there had been no argument of any force why the lot should not be put up to the highest bidder, which he thought to be a good policy which should always be followed.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 wished to know if there was no minimum sum fixed, otherwise in a public sale the land might be sacrificed.

Mr. Page stated that in the case of a sale of a small lot of land on South Market street, last year, the lot was sold less by public auction than it would have brought at private sale.

Mr. Loring moved that it be laid on the table, with a view, he was proceeding to say, when Mr. Shaw raised a point of order that the motion was not debatable.

The point of order was sustained and the order was laid on the table.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, to whom was referred the petition of P. Campbell & Son for leave to erect a wooden addition to shed situated on Reed street, near Swift street, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be authorized to issue a permit to P. Campbell & Son to erect a wooden addition to shed, situate on Reed street, near Swift street, in accordance with an application on file in the office of the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

The report was accepted and the order was passed.

Mr. Caton, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Winchester & Hight for leave to erect a wooden building on Dorchester avenue and Foundry street, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be authorized to issue a permit to Winchester & Hight to erect a wooden building in Dorchester avenue and Foundry street, in accordance with an application on file in the office of the Department for the Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Mr. Caton, from the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, made a report that in their opinion the public safety demands that immediate measures should be taken to examine all buildings in Boston in which operatives are employed, for the purpose of ascertaining their safety and the means of escape in case of fire.

The destruction of the workrooms on the burnt district has necessitated the occupation of a large number of rooms which were not originally intended for such purposes, and which in most cases are located in the upper stories of high buildings accessible only by long flights of narrow stairs.

Should a fire occur in the lower stories of any such buildings while the operatives are therein employed, it would be almost certain to cut off all means of escape, and the loss of life would be fearful. The committee already know of one building, in which 225 persons, mostly females, depend upon a staircase 3½ feet wide for means of escape in case of fire. The committee feel the necessity of immediate action, and in order that there may be no delay in making the necessary examination, they respectfully request that authority be granted to employ, temporarily, a sufficient number of persons to make such examinations.

The committee therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Inspector of Buildings be directed to immediately examine all buildings in Boston in which operatives are employed, to ascertain whether they are provided with sufficient facilities for escape in case of fire, and that he be authorized to employ such temporary assistance as may be required to make such examinations, at an expense not exceeding $1000; to be charged to the appropriation for the Inspection of Buildings.

The question being upon the second reading of the order—

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 rose for information, and wished to know how many assistants were now employed.

Mr. Caton replied that until today there were but three assistants, and they were not able to attend to the new work which required their attention, while it was designed to employ these to be provided for temporarily.

Mr. Shaw wished to know if the persons to be appointed were practical men, or were broken-down policemen.

Mr. Caton replied that all of the inspectors were practical men, master mechanics, masons or carpenters.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 stated that the law required them to be practical men.

Mr. Shaw said the reason for his inquiry was that last year a police officer was appointed against whom serious charges were preferred.

An amendment was proposed to require the approval of the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings in the appointments to be made.

Mr. Caton stated that the appointments of inspectors were made with the approval of the Mayor, and in answer to inquiries stated that there had been three assistant-inspectors, and three additional appointments had been submitted to the Mayor today.

The amendment was lost—16 to 19—when the order was laid over under the rules.

Beals, Greene & Co., against the proposed widening of Water street upon their estate. Read and sent down.

The remonstrance is as follows:

To the City Council of the City of Boston—From our report of the proceedings of the Common Council at its meeting on Thursday evening last, we learn that a resolve was offered that in the opinion of the City Council it is expedient to widen that part of Water street which lies between Devonshire and Congress streets, by taking land from our estate on the northerly side of Water street; that is to say, by taking a part of the Boston Post building. The resolve, we observe, was laid on the table. We embrace the earliest moment possible, upon being informed of this contemplated movement, respectfully to remonstrate against the passage of the resolve. And we submit for your consideration some reasons personal to us, but in which, nevertheless, as with other citizens in like circumstances, the community, we believe, has also an interest, perhaps not altogether indirect, and which are quite apart from the reasons usually urged against the expediency of such street widenings. The chief reason usually urged in such case is the cost. And where, as in this case, it is manifest that the cost must inevitably be very large, with no urgent need of the widening nor reasonable expectation of a corresponding public benefit from it, this reason would seem to be sufficient. We think, in any case of street widening involving an appropriation of public moneys, it should be made to appear affirmatively that the public safety and convenience require such widening. But to us, one of whom, at least, has passed many years in business in the immediate neighborhood, and all of whom are familiar with the locality, and, we think, competent to form an opinion of some value upon the question, it is, on the contrary, apparent, in this case, that no such want of safety or convenience exists. It is not true that travel is ever obstructed, unless, indeed, it be in some quite extraordinary circumstances, in this part of Water street. Nor do we believe it is likely to be so obstructed in many years to come as seriously to impede travel. Our building was a costly one, yet it cost much less when built, a few years ago, than a like building would cost at the present time. It is occupied in part by ourselves. Other parts are let to tenants, some of whom are entitled to hold for a term of years yet to come. The building was fitted and furnished with especial reference to our business. It has machinery and other costly fixtures and implements suited to our work and business. To cut off the building proposed would destroy it for our purpose. We should be obliged to remove from it when the cutting is begun; and when it is ended and the building repaired, it will be too small for and unsuited to our use. The machinery, fixtures and implements, so adapted to the building as it now is, would then be of little value. Meanwhile the publication of our paper cannot be stopped. We must seek out somewhere, somehow, as best we may, another place. Our tenants' leases are not destroyed by the cutting. They have rights which we cannot impair or change. Meanwhile, we may find ourselves, against our will and inclination, involved with the city and our tenants in a lawsuit, in which each will occupy and maintain, as best he may, at no little expense, one side of the triangle, with the certainty on our part that we cannot be compensated. Altogether, such a complication is not pleasant to contemplate. We are aware that the answer to all this ordinarily is, "But the city must pay you." But this is the answer of the ill-informed or the unreflecting only. Now the value of our building as it is to us is a very different thing from its market value. We did not build it to put on the market; nor altogether nor chiefly as an investment; but we designed it especially to meet our own wants, and fitted it to that end and purpose. We would not sell it for what would be deemed by others to be a reasonable price. To occupy it, as it is, is of the first importance to us. Such, sketched in hurried outline, are our reasons for this earnest remonstrance. We are not strangers to the public. Indeed, we are nearly related to it. It is not capricious. It is not inclined to mischief or wrong. We know its wants in this case; and we know, too, that while it is fairly represented it will not tear down our building under a false pretence.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on the Fire Department, made a report that the authority on the part of the City Council to appropriate money for the relief of firemen disabled in the service of the city, and for the relief of the families of such firemen as have been killed in the performance of their duties, is limited to the sum of $1000 per annum. The act giving this authority was passed in 1851, when the city was much smaller than it is at present, and it is proper that the amount should now be increased. A communication on the subject from the Chief-Engineer is appended hereto. The committee would respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be requested to appear before the proper committee of the General Court now in session, and urge the passage of an act authorizing the City Council of Boston to expend a sum not exceeding $3000 annually for the relief of such firemen as have been disabled in the service of the city, and for the relief of the families of such firemen as have been killed in the performance of their duties.

ANNEXATION OF BROOKLINE.

Alderman Quincy offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be instructed that in the opinion of the City Council no opposition or hindrance should be offered on the part of the City Government to petitions by inhabitants of the town of Brookline to the General Court in favor of annexation.

Alderman Quincy, in explanation of the above order, stated that its design was to obtain a discussion for the purpose of ascertaining the attitude of the city in relation to the annexation of Brookline. Several days ago, when the question first came up before the legislative committee, as a member of the Committee on Legislative Matters he stated as the attitude of the city that no action should be taken until the report of the commissioners on the subject of the annexation of Charlestown and other places should be made, and as there was no exigency for action at the present time it would be better to have the matter go over.

This course had been viewed by some of the friends of annexation in Brookline as in the nature of opposition. The design of the order was to show that while not directly in favor, the city did not oppose the application of the citizens of Brookline, and that there should be no delay or hindrance by the action of the city. If the order should be passed, he would withdraw the objection made by him, and state the position of the city to be in accordance with the order not to hinder or oppose any action which may be taken.

Alderman Hulbert said he did not understand the purport of the order, that they represented the attitude of the city as set forth.

Alderman Power said he understood the committee represented the views and interests of the city in such matters. Before the annexation of Brookline should be favored by him, he wished to know the amount of the debt of the town, if any, for he was not in favor of annexing towns with large debts to be paid by the city. His impression, however, was that Brookline stood well pecuniarily, and he wished to be informed on that point by the committee.

Alderman Clark stated that he did not understand that the order committed the city one way or the other; but as the chairman of the committee did say before the legislative committee that the subject might perhaps as well be over to another year, and as the citizens of Brookline had obtained a hearing, they were astonished at the supposed position of the city. The committee of last year were in favor of annexation, that it was desirable for several reasons.

On the proposition of the city of Charlestown for annexation a commission had been appointed; Somerville had expressed favor for annexation and he had an impression that West Roxbury had also,—all of which was under consideration of the commission; but as the town of Brookline is before the Legislature, and if a majority of the voters declare in favor of annexation, it is desirable that the order should be passed, simply requesting the committee not to oppose it. He did not understand the committee were to advocate it, but at a proper time he should advocate it. Brookline had a valuation of $29,000,000 or $30,000,000, a debt of half a million and town property worth a million of dollars, and financially was all right. But that was not the question; and if the people of Brookline favor annexation the city should not oppose it.

Alderman Quincy amended the order to meet an objection of Alderman Hulbert, in adding the word "Government" after city, the word not being in the original draft. He wished only, he said, to withdraw his objection in relation to annexation so far as related to Brookline, and leave it to be acted upon its merits.

Alderman Stebbins believed the original position of the Alderman to be a correct one, for, as he understood it, the attitude of the city was that whenever any city or town wished for annexation a commission would investigate the subjects of debt and the reasons for annexation. The exigency of Brookline he understood to be the want of water, and if in the opinion of the City Engineer, we shall be obliged before many years to seek other sources of supply of water, it may be a question for consideration whether we can meet the supply required by annexation.

Alderman Clark stated as the position of the question that it looked as though the committee threw cold water on the subject, and opposed it, and the order was to set that right, by providing that no objection will be made if a satisfactory arrangement is brought about. In case the people of Brookline obtain a bill, of which they have hopes, then a commission would be appointed by the town to meet similar commissioners from the city, and make all necessary investigations.

The order was passed.

ORDERS READ ONCE.

On motion of Alderman Clark, orders to Sampaynel Stillman, trustee, $19,805, for land taken to widen Washington street; to pay Edward Wigglesworth $31,175, for land taken to extend Devonshire street; to pay Harriet E. Joyce $1074, for land taken on Walnut avenue.

On motion of Alderman Power, authorizing the Committee on Printing to take charge of the unfinished business in relation to the abstract of the United States censuses relating to this city.

CITY PHYSICIAN AND HIS DUTIES.

On motion of Alderman Clark the order to establish the salary of the City Physician was taken from the table.

Alderman Stebbins submitted a communication from the Board of Health stating the duties of the City Physician, the communication being as follows: Boston, March 3, 1873.

S. B. Stebbins, Chairman of Committee on Salaries:
Dear Sir—Yours of the 25th ult., asking for a statement of what the duties of the City Physician will be the coming year, has been received.

I am directed by the board in reply to say that while it would be very difficult to state in detail all the duties which will be expected of this officer, yet a few may be stated, as follows: to render all professional services required at the City Prison, police stations and Jail, examine all applicants for the police, examine bad meats, etc., at the market, examine and report upon the causes of death of all persons dying without a physician in attendance, examine any vessel or suspected cargo at the wharves of the city, examine all contagious and dangerous diseases and the cause thereof, examine into the condition of tenement houses, and examine all nuisances which may be found in the city.

In general terms they would like to feel that the entire time of this officer is at the disposal of the Board of Health and that they may call upon him at any and all times to go where and do what the board will not find time for.

It will be impossible to have prompt action on the part of the City Physician unless he be in readiness at all times. Very respectfully, Your obedient servant,
CHARLES E. DAVIS, JR., Clerk.

Alderman Power stated that should the City Physician devote all his time to the office which was designed in the establishment of the Board of Health, no objection would be made to paying him a salary of $3000 a year. It was designed in the organization of the Board of Health that the physician on the Board should perform the duties of City Physician. But as the duties had been lessened, and the office remained separate, he could not consent to the payment of an increased salary.

Alderman Gafield read from the ordinance establishing the Board of Health, so far as related to the duties of the City Physician.

Alderman Clark wished to know before fixing the salary whether the City Physician would be required to devote all his time to the city.

Alderman Sayward was surprised at the objections made, for it should be enough that the City Physician was under the direction of the Board of Health.

Alderman Stebbins believed the salary should be established, as proposed, as it was expected by the Board of Health that the City Physician would give his entire time in the future as in the past. The City Physician, whoever he may be, will cheerfully obey all orders of the Board of Health. He thought there was some mistake about sick persons being turned away by the City Physician; but had known of applications to him at unreasonable hours by those who should have gone somewhere else.

Alderman Power said he had heard that the City Physician had turned people away who came to him, as not having time to attend to them, but if he is to be paid as proposed he should devote all his time to the interests of the city.

Alderman Gibson wished to know what the City Physician would have to do. There had been a general vaccination by an army of physicians, enough to kill or cure all of the people; and as this was the principal business of the City Physician, which has been taken away, he would like to know why the salary was to be increased. It was said he was expected to examine tenement houses; but it was understood there were nine or ten inspectors, whose duty it is to look after such houses; and if it should be added that he should visit all the police stations and had work enough to make up the employment of his time, it might be some reason for the increase of salary.

Alderman Stebbins stated that the ordinance required the attendance of the City Physician upon the several station houses.

Alderman Power said it was the expectation of the committee who framed the ordinance that the Board of Health would inspect and look after the tenement houses, which was one of the objects of the establishment of the board. The Board of Health called for an expenditure of $100,000, which would be a great surprise to the citizens who asked for its establishment, and should it go on in this way, there would be a call for its abolition. He would move a reference of the order to a special committee to report upon the duties of the City Physician.

Alderman Clark moved to amend by adding in connection with the salary, a provision that the City Physician shall devote his time to the service of the city.

Alderman Sayward read from section nineteen of the ordinance relating to the duties of the City Physician, in looking after all cases of disease or danger to the public health, and in giving his advice at all times, as sufficient to satisfy any reasonable man as to the amount of service required of him.

The motion of Alderman Power was lost—5 to 6.

The question recurred upon the amendment of Alderman Clark, that the City Physician shall not actively engage in any other business except such as is designated by the Board of Health or City Council.

Alderman Sayward objected that if the City Physician did not perform his duties, the Board of Health could at any moment remove him and nominate some other man. If it was aimed at the present City Physician, he could not say whether or not there was ground for it, but he would remind those who were in favor of the new Board of Health, that it was said no one would be willing to take a place on the Board of Health for $4000 a year.

Alderman Clark framed his amendment to read "devote his time exclusively to the interests of the city."

Alderman Power inquired how they were to know that he gives his whole time to the city. A competent man and an honorable man would hold to an agreement if he made one, but he would like to see the agreement.

Alderman Sayward urged that if he wished the City Physician to give his whole time, why did not the gentleman say so when he framed the ordinance?

Alderman Power replied that he did not frame the whole ordinance, and some of the most important things were struck out, while others they could not agree upon. If he had had his way the duties would have been defined more clearly.

Alderman Gibson did not think the salary would be too much if the Physician had enough to do; but as the whole duties of the office had been done heretofore for $1500 a year, he could not see how the salary should be double when there is nothing to do. If they could save $1500 why should they double the salary?

Alderman Sayward said if it was their duty to save, then they should abolish the Board of Health.

Alderman Gibson believed they should do so, and by so doing they might save $80,000. The business could be done well enough by the Board of Health, as formerly. The chairman of the board last year was at the head of more committees than he could shoulder, and consequently could not give the attention to health matters which was required. With less of such responsibilities on the chairman, he would guarantee that the business would be done well enough in the future by the Board of Aldermen.

Alderman Sayward referred to the argument in favor of the new Board of Health, that the people demanded it, and now it is objected to paying the necessary salaries.

Alderman Power did not think there was any question that the citizens demanded the establishment of a new Board of Health, nor did he doubt that it would be beneficial. Yet they might get up the expense to be so enormous that the citizens would demand that it be abolished. It was their duty to look closely after the economical management of the board. He would move a reconsideration of the vote rejecting his motion, believing that it would be best to have a committee report upon the subject.

Alderman Clark suggested that they should go into committee of the whole and have a conference with the Board of Health in relation to what they proposed to do. He did not believe that all of the members of this Board had interested themselves enough to know what the Board of Health are doing or propose to do. The Board of Health, he believed, would be a good thing, but it may be expensive.

Alderman Sayward could not understand how the people should demand a Board of Health, because the Board of Aldermen as a Board of Health did not know anything, yet they are expected to look after the Board of Health to see if they properly discharge their duties.

Alderman Power did not believe it to be strange that the people demanded the establishment of a Board of Health, and it was their duty to see that there should be no unnecessary expense attending it. He believed the question could be settled to the satisfaction of the Board of Health.

The question was stated to be on the amendment of Alderman Clark.

Alderman Sayward moved as an amendment that all the duties prescribed in the ordinance to be done by the City Physician be stricken out.

The Chair ruled the amendment to be not in order. Alderman Clark withdrew his amendment, and moved that the order be laid on the table, which was carried.

A further motion was made by him and carried, to hold an informal meeting with the Board of Health on Tuesday at one o'clock in relation to the election of the City Physician.

Adjourned.

The order that the Committee on Legislative Matters be instructed that, in the opinion of the City Council, no opposition should be offered on the part of the City Government to petitions by inhabitants of Brookline to the General Court for annexation, being under consideration, Mr. Loring of Ward 12 offered the following substitute:

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be instructed that the City Council, while not directly in favor, does not deem it expedient to oppose or hinder the annexation of the town of Brookline to Boston.

Mr. Loring stated, in explanation, that under the statement of the chairman of the Committee on Legislative Business, an order of seven lines required much more language in making known the position of the city, and it was desirable to make the matter more explicit.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 spoke of the order as extraordinary in character, in instructing a committee what not to do, and in its assumption that the citizens of Brookline have no right to petition the Legislature in relation to annexation. Further he objected to the appearance of the Committee on Legislative Business before the committee of the Legislature without being instructed on the subject by the City Council. It should not be the position of a committee to appear before the Legislature to state what shall or shall not be the policy of the city on the subject. He was opposed to the order and preferred that of the gentleman from Ward 12.

Mr. Shaw made some further remarks on the subject, and until the commission on the subject of annexation made a report, he thought it ill became the city to take any action on the subject in instructing the committee of the Legislature in any particular, especially in the form of this order.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 replied, in explanation, that it was because of the action of the City Council in relation to the Commission on Annexation that the Committee on Legislative Business took a position against immediate action; yet, in consequence of the application from the town of Brookline, it was believed not to be desirable to make any opposition, and the order was accordingly offered to meet the case.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 stated as his understanding of the question, that the chairman of the Committee on Legislative Matters having stated that the city declined taking any action until the report of the Commission was made, he desired to relieve himself from the appearance of opposition to the annexation of Brookline.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said if it was true that the chairman of the committee made any statement committing the city without authority to annexation, it would not be objectionable to make a correction of it, if not correct, yet he concurred with the gentleman from Ward 5 in his remarks, and unless instructed to go before the Legislature, as a member of the committee he should not go there.

Mr. Loring believed more definite action should be taken on the subject, for as the matter now stands, should the order go before the committee and the gentleman die before making an explanation, it would never be known what the reason for offering it was.

Mr. Dean, in another statement, said he believed the chairman of the committee had a right under the action in relation to the Commission, to appear before the committee of the Legislature.

The concurrence in the order was rejected, when, on motion of Mr. West of Ward 16, the order was indefinitely postponed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Report and order to authorize plans and estimates for a new primary schoolhouse on city land in the Prescott and Chapman districts, East Boston.

Order authorizing not exceeding $300 to be expended in repairing and furnishing the armory of said company.

Order that there be allowed an additional sum of $70 70, for repairing and furnishing the armory of Company K, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., on corner of Third and Dorchester streets.

Order that the City Council be requested to furnish the rooms for the use of the Normal School.

Severally referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

ADDITIONAL FUNDS FOR SCHOOL EXPENSES.

The following communication was also received from the School Committee:

To the Honorable City Council—The Committee on Accounts of the School Committee respectfully represent to the City Council, that, owing to the Board of School Committee having raised the salaries of the school instructors during the past year over $81,000, and also introduced two new music books at a cost of some $4000, a new text book on Nature at a cost of about $2000, together with the fact that the Council allowed the expenditure of $1000 for the entertainment of the National Convention of Teachers, for which there was no appropriation, and that we are short some $4500 for books for indigent children and advertising; the committee feel obliged to ask the City Council for an additional appropriation of $27,000 for Salaries of Instructors and School Expenses, in order to meet the just requirements of the schools and to enable them to close their accounts for the ensuing month.

The committee, since its organization, during the past seven years, have never before asked for an additional appropriation, and it is with regret that they feel the necessity of making this request.

For the Committee on Accounts, School Committee,

WILLIAM B. MERRILL, Chairman.

Referred to the Committee on Finance.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR WATER WORKS.

The following communication was laid before the Council from the Water Board:

COCHITUATE WATER BOARD OFFICE, (Boston, March 10, 1873.)

To the City Council—To meet the expenses of the current year, it becomes necessary to ask an additional appropriation of $12,000.

In the month of November last, a bill of pipe, amounting to $33,690 13-100, which had been contracted for Wards 13, 14, 15, 16, became due; but the special appropriation for those wards being insufficient to meet the bill, the amount was paid from the general appropriation; we are, therefore, obliged to make the above request.

The high service in South Boston being completed, the balance of the special appropriation for that object, amounting to $3,167 50-100 will not be required.

CHARLES H. ALLEN,

President of Cochituate Water Board.

Referred to Committee on Finance.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Bart of Ward 16, from the Committee of the Common Council on Police, to whom was referred the order for the payment of certain bills for extra service performed by police officers, made a report that the order ought to pass.

It was stated in explanation, in answer to inquiries, that the services rendered were after the usual day's service, and the officers were entitled to pay for it.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11, from the Committee on Claims, reported leave to withdraw severally on petitions of Catharine Barrett, to be compensated for personal injuries caused by an alleged defect in Chardon street; of James King, to be compensated for personal injuries caused by an alleged defect in Ruggles street; and of Robert Irwin, to be compensated for injuries sustained by his wife from an alleged defect in Tremont street. Severally accepted.

BURRILL CLAIM.

Mr. Blackmar, for the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Charles Burrill, that his claim for services in procuring credits upon the quota of the City of Boston in 1864, may be left to three disinterested persons to determine what compensation is due to him, made a report as follows:

The character of this claim is so well known that it would be superfluous for the committee to do more than state, as briefly as possible, the circumstances under which it is presented at this time. All the details of the case may be obtained by reference to City Documents 98 of the year 1869 and 53 of 1872. The city authorities having refused to pay the full amount claimed under the contract, on the ground of non-fulfillment, Mr. Burrill entered a suit in the latter part of 1864 in the Supreme Court of the State. When the trial took place at Dedham, the evidence for the plaintiff was put in, and the Court (Gray, J.), on motion of the counsel for the city, took the case from the jury on questions of law. Before these questions could be passed upon by the full bench the plaintiff removed to another State and brought his case before the Circuit Court of the United States.

The claim was presented there both on the contract and for services rendered to the city. Judge Clifford, who presided at the trial, ruled that he was "not entitled to recover in any view of the case." Exceptions were taken to the ruling, but previous to the time for a hearing before the Supreme Court at Washington, the plaintiff withdrew his suit and petitioned the City Council for compensation. This was in 1869. In 1870 an order was passed by the City Council and approved by the Mayor for the payment of $40,000 in full settlement of the claim. Upon this an injunction was applied for by the requisite number of taxpayers and obtained. In 1871 an act was passed by the Legislature, of which the following is a copy:

"The city of Boston is hereby authorized to pay to Charles Burrill of Brookline the sum of $40,000, in satisfaction for all services rendered and money expended by him in procuring credits upon the quota of volunteers of said city during the War of the Rebellion, in conformity to the order passed by the City Council of said city, and approved September 12, 1870, and may raise the said sum by taxation or otherwise."

Following the passage of this act an order was presented to the City Council for an appropriation of the sua named, but it failed to pass by the requisite two-thirds vote. It was presented again last year, and again failed to pass.

The petitioner now asks to have his claim referred without limitations or restrictions, to outside parties. In the opinion of a majority of the committee it would not be expedient to grant this request. The total amount of the claim, with interest up to the present date, is about a million of dollars. It is not necessary to inquire how the sum of $40,000 was arrived at as proper compensation for the services of Mr. Burrill. That sum was fixed upon, Mr. Burrill signified his willingness to accept it in full satisfaction for all services rendered and money expended by him, and the action of the Legislature prevents the City Council from authorizing the payment of a larger amount. There is therefore nothing in this case which can probably be referred to arbitration, and the majority would respectfully recommend that the petitioner have leave to withdraw.

A minority report was presented, signed by Messrs. Brackett and Train of the Council, as follows:

The undersigned, members of the Committee on Claims, respectfully dissent from the recommendation of the majority of the committee, in the matter of the petition of Charles Burrill, and beg leave briefly to state their reasons therefor.

Although the subject of Mr. Burrill's claim has become somewhat familiar, we believe there are some points concerning it which have not been fully understood, and that this misunderstanding has tended to prejudice the claim. It is the general impression that the case has been "turned out of court," both in the State and United States courts, and that having pressed his legal remedy to the furthest possible extent and failed, the petitioner now asks the city to pay what both the State and United States courts have decided that he cannot recover by law; and from this it is argued that the city should pay nothing, because his claim is illegal. Accordingly it is important to state the position of the case when Mr. Burrill first presented his petition to the City Government.

The first trial of the case was before Judge Gray of the Supreme Court in April, 1865. Before the conclusion of the trial, questions of law as to the legality of the alleged contract were raised, and reserved for consideration by the full bench. The counsel for Mr. Burrill, however, preferred to become nonsuit for the purpose of transferring the case to the United States Court. The questions were not, therefore, submitted to the full bench of the Supreme Court, and no judgment was rendered by it upon the legality of the claim.

At the trial before the Circuit Court in September, 1866, after the plaintiff's case had been put in, the City Solicitor asked the court to instruct the jury that the evidence was not sufficient in law to warrant a verdict for the plaintiff on either of the counts of his declaration, and the court accordingly instructed them to render the following verdict:

"The jury find that the defendant did not promise in manner and form as the plaintiff hath alleged against it in either count in the said declaration."

To this ruling of the Circuit Court exceptions were taken, and the case carried to the Supreme Court of the United States. In 1869, before any hearing was had before the last named court, the suit was withdrawn by Mr. Burrill, and consequently the legality of the claim has never been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, the tribunal to which the plaintiff had a right to take the case, and the decision of which would have been final. It seems to us, therefore, that it cannot fairly be said that the case has been thrown out of court. The question as to the legality of the claim was still pending in court. The decision of the Circuit Court was not final. The plaintiff had a right to have the question decided by the Supreme Court. He had taken steps to avail himself of that right by removing the question to that court.

At the time, therefore, when he voluntarily withdrew the suit the question was still an open one, and his act in withdrawing it could not make the claim illegal, when the question of its legality at the time of such withdrawal was still before the court. These reasons appear to us to justify the statement that the right of Mr. Burrill to recover by legal means for his services to the city has never been finally determined by the courts, but was abandoned by his own act, and therefore the argument against paying him anything because his claim is illegal is not a valid one.

Why did he withdraw the suit? Was it because he had any encouragement to believe that if he abandoned all efforts at law to maintain his claim on the contract, his claims for compensation for services would be favorably considered by the City Government? Upon this question the following facts are instructive. It appears from the records that on the 23d of February, 1869, Mr. Burrill presented a pe-tion to the City Council for an adjustment of his claims, but the Board of Aldermen refused to entertain the petition while his suit was pending in the courts, as this would give him an undue advantage when his case came to be heard. Accordingly it was not until May 17, when the following paper was received from the City Solicitor, that the Board took any action upon the petition:

"In the matter of Charles Burrill vs. The City of Boston, now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States, the plaintiff in said case hereby withdraws his suit and the prosecution of the same. And he hereby personally and his counsel pledges himself and agrees that such entry may be made in said suit upon the docket as the City Solicitor or counsel for the city shall hereafter deem necessary or advisable."

Signed by Charles Burrill, and by H. W. Paine and G. W. Tuxbury, counsel for Burrill.

By this act the minority say Mr. Burrill abandoned all power to obtain by legal means the fulfilment of his contract, and the courts had rendered no decision in the matter. They therefore are led to inquire whether this act of Mr. Burrill was in the nature of a compromise between him and the city. It is plain that he must have been actuated by some strong reason for this voluntary withdrawal of his suit. Why should he agree to anything of the kind unless there was some consideration for the agreement? Whether there was any real or implied understanding they do not know, but the attendant circumstances strongly favored the inference that such was the case; for immediately after the reading of the paper withdrawing the suit, his petition was taken from the table and referred to the Committee on Claims.

This prompt action of the Board of Aldermen and the concurrence of the Council they believe to be significant, and as the whole proceedings were with the cognizance of the City Solicitor, who acted subsequently in the hearings on the petition, it was clear and conclusive that the claim for compensation is legally and properly before the City Council. Otherwise why did the city go to the trouble and expense of making this long investigation, or at the expense of determining the amount which should be paid? For these reasons and from the fact that every committee which has investigated the claim has reported in favor of paying the petitioner something, they believe that he has a claim for a greater or less amount, and that amount should be promptly determined. It is clear that he has rendered the city some service, and for this service he should be paid.

The language of the majority report of last year is quoted to show an admission that Mr. Burrill performed valuable service as agent for the city at a critical period, and at a large expense to himself. With this view of the case, they came to the question whether it is expedient to refer the petition to arbitration. It is objected to such a course generally, but there are exceptional cases, and during the present year an order has been passed by the Board of Aldermen authorizing claims to be settled by arbitration.

In whatever light the claim is regarded, it should be definitely and finally disposed of, and not suffered to come before the Council year after year, to the delay and detriment of public business. Should an attempt be made by the Committee on Claims to fix upon the amount to be paid, it is not probable a decisive result would be reached. As evidence of this, reference is made to former reports, in 1869 the highest sum being $125,000. If the committee could not come to a definite decision after a consideration of the question for half the year, it could not be expected that the Council could act understandingly after a few hours' discussion.

A large majority of the committee of 1870 were in favor of a reference and so reported, but the discussion showed such a diversity of opinion as to the whole matter, that no definite result was obtained, and judging from the reports of the committees in 1871 and 1872 and the action thereon, the same difficulty will continue in the future as in the past to prevent any satisfactory adjustment of this claim by the City Council. Another reason urged for arbitration is, that it appears to be the only means by which a final settlement can be effected. Nothing but a settlement satisfactory to Mr. Burrill can prevent his coming to the City Council again and again, "and they will be called upon to repeat our experience as we have that of our predecessors."

They conclude as follows:

In granting the petition of Mr. Burrill and referring his claim to the arbitration of three disinterested persons, we believe that the action of the City Council will be approved by the citizens generally. In the appendix marked "B," is given Mr. Burrill's petition and the indorsement of the same by a large number of prominent citizens, whose opinions are always respected in matters affecting the welfare and honor of the city, and who represent millions of its taxable property. They may safely be taken as a good representation of the desires of the taxpayers, of whose interests we are so often reminded that we are the trustees, as to the disposition of this long pending claim. Strengthened by this consideration in their behalf that arbitration is the most judicious method of settling once and for all this long vexed question, as from this tribunal Mr. Burrill can have no appeal, it being his own proposed mode of settlement and he being bound by the result, the undersigned respectfully recommend the granting of his petition and the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Joint Standing Committee on Claims of the present City Council be and they are hereby instructed to select three disinterested and impartial persons, subject to the approval of his Honor the Mayor, to whom shall be referred the claim of Charles Burrill against the City of Boston. The said arbitrators shall have power to decide whether anything, and if anything what, is justly and equitably due from the City of Boston to said Burrill upon his claim for services rendered and money expended in filling the quota of the city in 1864. The decision of a majority of the arbitrators shall be binding and final upon the parties. The printed testimony in City Document No. 98 of 1869 shall be laid before said arbitrators, and such other evidence in the case as either party may introduce. And his Honor the Mayor is hereby authorized to execute, in behalf of the city, jointly with said Burrill, all the proper and necessary instruments to render the award of said arbitrators conclusive and final.

The reports were laid on the table, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, from the joint special committee appointed to nominate suitable candidates for the Board of Overseers of the Poor, made a report recommending the reelection of Frederic W. Lincoln, Joseph Buckley, Phineas W. Crane and Thomas F. Temple. Laid over.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Committee on the Fire Department respectfully request an additional appropriation of $30,000, for the carrying on of the department for the balance of the present financial year.

The appropriation for the Fire Department for the present financial year having become exhausted by expenditures authorized on account of the numerous bills presented as contracted, on account of the large fires at the close of the municipal year and the extra expense to this department on account of the severity of the winter; heretofore this department were able to obtain extra horses for their keeping, but owing to the horse distemper we could not obtain them this winter, and have been obliged to hire at a large expense.

The force of the department has been nearly doubled in horses to meet the exigency of the winter, and this has required an extra force of men in the department.

The committee are under the necessity of making application for an additional sum to meet the requirements of the department for the remainder of this financial year.

In order to meet the bills and pay roll, there will be required, as before stated, a further sum of $30,000 for the remainder of the present financial year.

The following is a statement of the expenditures made which were not contemplated, and which causes the deficiency in the appropriation since the amount last asked for:

For bills on account of the fires which came in after the extra appropriation was made up.....	$11,477 00
For horse hire on account of the severity of the winter.....	1,044 00
For extra services, on account of the severity of the winter.....	1,973 00
Pumps and pump hire, on account of the severity of the winter.....	625 00
For hay and grain for extra horses.....	584 87
“ horse hose carriage at South Boston.....	1,000 00
“ chemical engine.....	500 00
“ repairing reservoirs, and salt for the same..	1,524 00
“ new horses.....	4,825 00
“ increase of supplies for the department.....	1,152 50
	$21,405 37

Your committee would therefore respectfully ask for an additional appropriation of $30,000.

For the committee, L. R. CUTTER, Chairman.

Referred to the Committee on Finance.

REPORT ON INCREASING THE EFFICIENCY OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The following report was submitted in print:

IN COMMON COUNCIL, March 13, 1873.

The Joint Standing Committee on the Fire Department, to whom were referred (1) so much of the Mayor's Address as relates to increasing the efficiency of the Fire Department, and (2) the report of the Commissioners appointed to investigate the cause and management of the great fire in Boston, having carefully considered the subjects, beg leave to submit the following report:

The substantial recommendations of the Mayor and the Commissioners are—

1. That additional engines should be located in the business portions of the city—some of them larger than any now in use.

2. That larger water pipes should be laid in the burnt district, and in some other sections of the city.

3. That the Lowry hydrants should be more generally connected with the street mains in the city proper.

4. That the Committee on the Fire Department should have a wider jurisdiction over matters pertaining to the management of that department.

5. That the Chief and Assistant-Engineers should be appointed by the Mayor and confirmed by the City Council, instead of elected, as at present, by concurrent vote of the City Council.

6. That a corps should be organized under the direction of the Chief-Engineer to use explosives in cases of emergency.

7. That the general use of portable apparatus should be encouraged.

8. That proper sliding valves should be placed on the gas mains and distributing pipes.

9. That additional safeguards should be provided against the loss of life by fire in buildings used for public purposes and in tenement houses and manufactories.

Although the committee do not feel that they would be justified in making a critical examination of the finding of the commissioners as to the management of the fire, it is proper to state, before entering upon the considerations of the several recommendations, that a careful review of the testimony establishes the fact that the extent of the fire was owing mainly to the delay in giving the alarm, and to the insufficient supply of water, and not to mismanagement on the part of the Fire Department.

It appears from the returns (pp. 646, 647 of the Commissioners' Report) of the men having charge of the engines and the hose and hook and ladder carriages that there was no material delay in getting the apparatus to the fire on account of the lack of horses. In fact, the special measures taken by the Chief and Board of Engineers, in view of the prevalence of the horse disease, placed the department in a more efficient condition to meet a great emergency than it would have been had the department relied upon such horse power as was available at the time to draw the apparatus to the fire. There were a large number of extra men in service; and all the members arriving on the ground at the same time that the apparatus arrived were enabled to respond for duty without delay.

It should be stated that the frequent whistling of the engines, which was supposed by the spectators of the fire to be calls for fuel, was intended as much for signals to the hosemen in regard to the supply of water or the bursting of hose, as for a notice that the supply of fuel was running short. The extraordinary demand for a particular kind of coal, of which only a comparatively small quantity can be obtained in this market, could not be met readily; but there appears to have been no substantial loss of time or power in working the engines with the materials which were furnished.

Upon the first of the foregoing recommendations, namely, that additional apparatus should be provided for the department, the committee have already taken some action. It is proposed to purchase three additional engines at this time, one to be located in the burnt district, one in Ward 6, and one in Ward 11. The committee have inquired particularly in regard to the expediency of procuring larger engines than those now in use, but from all the evidence which they have been able to obtain upon this point, it would not appear desirable to make any change. Some of the builders state that they can furnish larger engines, but they do not believe they would be as effective as those now used. The agent of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, Hon. E. A. Straw, says—

“The first-class engines built by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, such as all the later engines furnished your city, I believe are the most powerful engines in use in any fire department within my knowledge. They have been placed in all the principal cities in this country, and put into successful competition with the engines of all other builders. They will, if well supplied with water, propel a stream a horizontal distance of 312 to 320 feet; a vertical distance of from 210 to 220 feet—about as far as it is possible to throw a body of water through the air. With a single stream and an ample supply of water, through the ordinary amount of leading hose, they will maintain a working water pressure of about 260 pounds to the square inch, which is as much as any leading hose, light enough to be readily handled, can be made to sustain, and more than hosemen at the 'butt' can handle.

For the last ten years in building steam fire-engines the tendency has been to procure steamers of lighter weight; and the effort of manufacturers has been to produce light engines, and still maintain their efficiency and capacity to throw water. Most departments prefer engines of the second size rather than of the first, considering that the thousand pounds saved in the weight of the engines is worth more than the little difference in their capacity. My own opinion is, that but little would be gained by the use of steam fire engines of a larger size. No department should be without perhaps one or more very powerful engines, but the gain would be in the number of streams that could be thrown rather than in the distance or size of the streams. A fire engine like your fire boat, which you have recently put into service, illustrates this idea."

The success which has attended the trials of the Babcock chemical engines now in use has been such as to justify the organization of a special corps to operate one or more of these machines. It is also proposed to organize a new hook and ladder company, to be located in the vicinity of the burnt district, and a new hose company, to be located on Longwood avenue. When these additions are made, the apparatus of the department will consist of 29 engines, 13 hose carriages, 8 hook and ladder carriages, 1 steam fire boat, 3 fire-extinguisher wagons and 1 insurance wagon. Other apparatus will be purchased from time to time, as the wants of the city require. In this connection the committee would call the attention of the superintendents and managers of the railroads which terminate in this city to the propriety of furnishing better facilities for transporting heavy fire apparatus between the cities and towns in this vicinity. At present there is great delay in obtaining or furnishing assistance on account of the want of suitable means for loading and unloading engines. Some officer connected with the railroads should be authorized to make the needful arrangements upon the application of the Chief-Engineer.

Great improvements have been made during the past ten years in the means for the extinguishment of fires by portable apparatus; and the recent heavy losses by fire in all our large cities have stimulated invention in this direction to such an extent that undoubtedly still more important improvements will soon be made. In all large public buildings, manufactories, hotels and tenement houses, the owners should be required to furnish the most improved hand pumps and extinguishers, and see that some person connected with the premises is competent to use them properly when the occasion requires. The Board of Engineers are now making investigations in regard to the different kinds of fire escapes in use, with a view to the introduction of those which are found to afford the greatest security.

Measures have already been taken by the Committee on Legislative Matters to procure such additional legislation as may be needed to prevent loss of life from insufficient means of escape, or from improperly constructed walls in case of fire in buildings now erected. The laws of 1871 and 1872 were sufficient as to buildings to be erected, but they did not apply to what had been done previous to their passage except as regards certain matters relating to tenement houses.

Several changes are necessary in the organization of the Fire Department, in order to increase its efficiency. The most important, perhaps, is that which relates to the nomination and appointment of foremen of engine, hose, and hook and ladder companies. Under the ordinances now in force it is provided that "every engine, hose, and hook and ladder company shall have a foreman and clerk, and every hook and ladder company an assistant-foreman in addition; the foreman and assistant-foreman shall be nominated annually, or whenever a vacancy occurs, by the members of the respective companies, from among their own number, and a return of the same made to the Board of Engineers; and in case of rejection by them, the name of the person so rejected shall be returned to the company, and the members thereof shall select another person for approval; and whenever any person so nominated shall be approved by the Board of Engineers, his name shall be sent to the Board of Aldermen for approval or rejection, and in case of rejection another person shall be nominated, as aforesaid, before the next regular meeting of the Board of Aldermen, and the like proceedings had as before." (Sect. 30. Ordinance relating to the Fire Department.)

This method of proceeding, subversive of all discipline in the companies, is a legacy from the volunteer system, and the committee are unanimous in the opinion that it should be changed. In the absence of an engineer, the foreman directs the placing of the engines, and has the charge and direction of the hose and hosemen. It is of the highest importance that he should be thoroughly conversant with the duties of the position, and should have the most complete control over his subordinates. Where the choice is left to the company, inexperienced men are sometimes selected; and whoever is selected has a feeling of dependence upon the members which prevents him from acting with the energy and decision which are necessary in an emergency. As the foremen and assistant foremen are subject to the orders of the Engineers, they should be nominated by them and appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen. It has been suggested that the foremen of engine companies should be permanently employed, and that the city should be divided into as many fire districts as there are steam-engine companies, the foreman in each district to make an inspection from time to time of all the buildings located therein, and report weekly or oftener if necessary, to the Chief-Engineer. In this way the Engineers would be furnished with accurate information as to the condition of every building in the city; and such information is absolutely necessary in order to enable them to act intelligently in case of fire. The committee are not prepared to recommend the adoption of this suggestion at present, as they have not had time to consider it fully.

In order to give the Chief-Engineer the proper control at fires over his subordinates, the Assistant-Engineers should be nominated by him, and appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen.

The purchase of land for fire stations should be made by the Committee on the Fire Department instead of the Committee on Public Buildings, and the plans for the erection of new buildings for the department, and for the repair of old ones, should be subject in all cases to the approval of that committee.

Prompt and efficient measures are being taken by the Water Board to furnish an adequate supply of water hereafter for the use of the department. Larger pipes are to be laid in the principal streets in the burnt district, and the Lowry hydrants are to be connected with them and also with the large mains in other portions of the city proper.

To prevent danger in future from the escape of gas in buildings destroyed by fire, the Boston Gas Light Company are introducing valves in their street mains so as to enable them to shut off the gas in small sections, or districts, of the city without delay; and in furtherance of this scheme, an agreement has been entered into between the treasurer of the company and the Chief-Engineer, as follows:

1. The fire-alarm telegraphic wires shall be connected with the office of the Boston Gas Light Company in West street, and a suitable gong placed therein and kept in working order by the city of Boston.

2. The employes of the Boston Gas Light Company, wearing the company's fire caps, or such other badges as may be agreed on, shall be allowed to pass the lines of any fire in the city proper, with such a number of workmen as may be required by the emergency.

3. One or more of the employes of the Boston Gas Light Company shall report in person to the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department, on the occurrence of every considerable fire within the limits of the city proper.

In regard to the expediency of using gunpowder or other explosives, to prevent the spread of fire, there is such a variety of opinions that the committee hesitate to recommend any special action at this time. The use of powder in connection with the late fire is condemned by nearly every officer in the department. In most instances in which it has been used in other cities it has failed to accomplish what was intended, and in some cases its use has been attended with the most disastrous results. With the powerful explosives which have recently been discovered, more satisfactory results may be obtained, and the committee would commend the subject to the careful consideration of the Board of Engineers.

In order to carry out the changes proposed in the organization of the department, the committee would recommend the passage of the accompanying order.

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to report amendments to the ordinances relating to the Fire Department, providing that the Assistant-Engineers shall be nominated by the Chief-Engineer and appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen; that the Foremen and Assistant-Foremen of engine, hose, and hook and ladder companies shall be nominated by the Board of Engineers and appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen; and that the Committee on the Fire Department shall have jurisdiction of all violations of the ordinances or rules and regulations, committed by members of the department; also to report an amendment to the tenth section of the ordinance concerning public buildings, by which the Committee on Public Buildings will be relieved from the purchase of land for engine, hose and hook and ladder houses.

Laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. Hall of Ward 10, an order was passed for the appointment of a committee of conference in relation to the election of a Second-Assistant-Assessor in Ward 3.

Messrs. Hall of Ward 10, Wells of Ward 3, and Pease of Ward 1 were appointed the committee on the part of the Council.

SALARY BILL.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 moved to take from the table the report and orders establishing the salaries of city officers for the year, beginning the first day of April next, with amendments of the Board of Aldermen thereto. (Printed City Doc. No. 27, 1873.)

Mr. Blackmar stated as his design, if the motion prevailed, to move to recommit the report, believing that they should be extremely careful in relation to the increase of salaries at the present time, and no increase should be made except for the best of reasons.

The motion to take up the report was carried, when it was recommitted.

The question then recurred upon the order referring sections 4, 5 and 7 of the Salary bill concerning the Foremen, Assistant-Foremen of the Fire Department, and members of the companies in Ward 16, to the Committee on the Fire Department.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 inquired if the whole Salary bill was not before the Council, the report as a whole having been made to the Council as well as to the Board of Aldermen, and the Council not having passed upon the merits of it as a whole?

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 wished to know the state of the question.

The Chair stated the question to be on referring sections 4, 5 and 7 of the order relating to the Fire Department to the Committee on Fire Department.

Mr. Perkins was of opinion that the question was before them in two forms, as a part of the Salary bill and on a question of reference from the Board of Aldermen. He thought it would be best to non-concur in the reference.

Mr. Shaw wished a more explicit statement of the question that he might know how to vote. Portions of the orders were laid on the table in the other branch, and those could not be before the Council. This question of reference came before them in an irregular way.

The Chair explained that the orders were amended in the other branch by striking out the sections referred to, which were referred to the Committee on Fire Department, and the question now comes up on concurrence in the reference.

The motion to concur was lost.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 gave notice that he should, on Thursday evening next, call upon the committee on so much of the Mayor's address as relates to a home for the poor to make a report on that subject.

WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the following resolution was taken from the table:

Resolved, That it is expedient to lay out as a public way the land remaining between the proposed extension of Pearl street to Congress at Water street, Congress street widened to seventy feet upon the easterly side, and Milk street after the completion of the said contemplated improvements. Also to widen Water street between Devonshire and Congress streets on the northerly side, by taking certain estates of Edward A. White and others; and that the Street Commissioners be requested to report the necessary orders and estimates at the earliest practicable time.

Mr. Perkins stated that this was not a resolution from the Committee on Streets, which committee are unanimously of opinion that there is no necessity for the widening of Water street, so far as the requirements of public travel are concerned. It was not presented as a street improvement, and the Committee on Streets had nothing to do with it. It had been iterated and reiterated that the United States would enlarge the Post Office if the city would do certain things in the widening of the streets in the vicinity of the Post Office to sixty feet. The text of the conditions was not fully known when the resolution was offered, but since then a despatch had been received from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

This despatch gives it as the opinion of the First Comptroller of the treasury that the widening is required on the burnt territory on Milk and Water streets, between Devonshire and Congress streets, and no further whatever. This would not cut off the Post building, but it would take twenty feet from the Simmons building, with the triangular space on Congress and Milk streets. The question then, was, whether it was worth while to make this improvement on Water street. If this cutting off is made, the question was whether a jog should be made, or the Post building cut off. Although they have not asked to cut that off, was it not their duty, in view of having the finest building in New England, which should cost $3,000,000, to go to the expense of $300,000?

In such an expenditure, he believed they would get it back in the increased value of the property in that vicinity. The Post Office must be the business centre for the next fifty years, and the property would be extremely valued for the very reason because the Post Office is there. Value was given to property in State street because of the locality of the Post Office there, and State street may be hurt by the removal, but having wide streets on three sides of the Post Office, increased value would be given to the property on those streets. If this requirement of the Government is not complied with, when an appropriation is asked for the harbor, it may be met with a refusal to grant it.

Should it be said that this was a measure of the Postmaster, it is believed that it is not so, on the authority of the Mayor. The committee of Congress urged as a reason that there would be a great deal of valuable property in this building, and it would not be safe nor would they be justified in the expenditure unless the streets were reasonably widened. It was not, then, the Postmaster's measure, although it might have originated with him. It was a question between the United States and this city, and not between the Postmaster and Boston.

If it should be said, the question could be passed over in the hope of better terms next year, it was a sufficient answer that all the land adjoining the Post Office would be built upon if not taken by the United States, for the owners would ask for their lines and we should grant permits to build, as they cannot afford to have their land lie idle. The question then came to this, if we want the enlarged Post Office and its contingent advantages, we must spend $300,000 to secure it.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said this was more important to taxpayers than anything which will come before the City Council this year. It should be referred to the Committee on Streets, and not to the Council, for consideration. It was not a question of $300,000 merely, but as many believed, millions of dollars. The Committee on Streets should submit a detailed report as to the cost of the proposed widening before any action is taken, and he moved its reference to the committee.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 inquired if the order of notice on the proposed widening was not returnable next week on Thursday. If so, nothing would be lost by delay of action at the present time.

Mr. Perkins stated that was so, yet nothing could be gained by referring this to the Committee on Streets, except to get an estimate of expense. It was not the question of expense, but of the Post Office extension which was in issue. It might be well, perhaps, to procure from the Street Commissioners an estimate of the expense. It was more desirable for the Council to express an opinion than to have the opinion of the Street Commissioners as to the expediency of the measure.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 agreed with Mr. Flynn in relation to referring the resolution to the Committee on Streets, and the reference was carried.

Alderman Clark asked for the passage of the resolve and order, the Committee on Streets having considered the subject, and were in favor of the passage.

Alderman Hulbert called for separate action on the two portions of the order, that of the widening of Arch street and the extension of the street.

The Chair stated that such a motion would not be in order, since the order must be acted upon as a whole, and as such must be concurred in or rejected.

Alderman Gibson inquired what was designed by the extension of Arch street.

Alderman Hulbert replied that the so-called extension was through Morton place, and as the two matters were distinct, and the expense separate, he should prefer to vote upon them separately.

Alderman Gaffield stated that there was but one order, and that could not be divided.

Alderman Clark stated that if objection was made to the passage of the whole order, the proper course to pursue would be to move to recommit. But he hoped such a motion would not prevail, for it was desirable to have action upon the passage of the order at the present time in order that the abutters might know what course to take.

Alderman Hulbert said his position was simply this: that he was in favor of one portion of the order and not in favor of the other, believing them to be two distinct questions. He was opposed to the extension through Morton place. The argument in favor was mainly for two reasons: that it could be done at no great expense, and that it would increase the value of the taxable property in the vicinity, being virtually an extension of Chauncy street. The argument failed to convince him that the supposed gain would be equivalent to the material loss by the destruction of so much taxable property. As for the termination of Chauncy street, it would be better to have that termination in the wide Franklin street than in the narrow Milk street. Franklin street would be a much better ending than Milk street can be, and he could see no occasion nor necessity for the proposed extension.

Should it be said the expense is not large, it is much the larger of the two measures, the widening being some $156,000 and the extension $177,800. There could in his view be no necessity for the extension, while it was objectionable on account of the loss of taxable property, and there was no exigency in public travel which can require incurring the expense.

Alderman Clark replied that the extension of Arch street would cost $170,000, and a considerable portion of the expense would be returned in betterments. The property to be taken in Morton place was valued at $8 or $9 a foot, and it will bear a large betterment, for it will be worth as much as the property in Arch or in Franklin street. It was a very important improvement being virtually an extension of Chancy street to Milk street, where the street will be sixty feet in width, but if delayed much longer, will be 100 feet wide. It will make almost a straight street from Milk street to Roxbury, and after the payment of betterments, the cost will not be more than from $75,000 to $100,000. As members of the Board might not be aware of its importance, he invited them to look at the plan of the extension.

After an examination of the plans by the members of the Board, Alderman Brown moved a recommitment of the order, with instructions to the Street Commissioners to report two separate orders with an estimate of the cost of each.

Alderman Clark hoped the motion would not prevail, for they could have little idea of the damage to owners of real estate by delay. Materials had been provided and the owners of real estate on Arch street were prepared to build at once, waiting only for the action of the City Government. He believed they were ready today to act upon the order, and hoped a straight vote would be taken. A recommitment would occasion a delay of two or three weeks, which would occasion a damage more than the cost of putting the street through.

He hoped the motion would not pass, for it was easy to estimate the expense of each measure. The cost of widening would be about $168,000, and the balance was for the extension. The betterments would bring back so much that the whole expense would not exceed $100,000. The opportunity was too good a one to let slip, and the project was as good as any which had been suggested the present year. It originated with the Street Commissioners, and it was a very wise measure.

The motion to recommit was lost, by a vote of 5 to 7, as follows:

Yeas—Brown, Cutler, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy.

Nays—Bigelow, Clark, Emery, Gaffield, Power, Sayward, Stebbins.

The question recurring upon the passage of the resolve and order in concurrence, it was passed.

WIDENING OF HAWLEY STREET.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Hawley street to forty feet, by taking land of sundry persons therein named, at an expense of $277,730.

The several items of cost in the proposed widening are as follows:

Alderman Clark stated that the Committee on Streets had considered this question, and they fully concurred in the action of the Street Commissioners.

The resolve and order was passed, in concurrence.

WIDENING OF WASHINGTON STREET.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Washington street, at the corner of Summer street, by taking land of John C. Gray, amounting to 577½ feet, at $50 per foot, and damages of $525, the aggregate cost being $29,400.

Alderman Clark stated that the Committee on Streets had considered this order, and they believed it inexpedient to pass it at the present time. They were hardly prepared to commence a widening which would require several years for its completion, at a cost of a million or more of dollars. They believed it advisable to allow parties to go on and build, the owners of the property protesting that it would be a material injury to them to require the building to be set back, and a good claim for damages would be made in consequence. It would also naturally effect other estates.

Should there be rebuilding beyond Avon street, and the owners be required to set back their buildings ten to fifteen feet, they would also have a good claim for damages. He knew something of such matters, for he had knowledge of suits which had been settled for such causes. Unless they were prepared to extend the widening to Essex street, or to Bedford street, it would be inexpedient to make a commencement. The Street Commissioners had sent the order here, deeming it important to have the opinion of the City Council on the subject. He hoped the question would be taken, so that the owners can have the lines upon which to build.

Alderman Power believed they ought to widen Washington street as far as they can at the present time—as far as the fire will allow it. There was not a member of the Board but believed it to be but a question of time when Washington street must be widened further south. It would be bad policy to allow valuable structures to be put up when the only expense now to be incurred for widening was for the land. There was nothing more important or desirable to be done than the carrying out of this improvement, and he was surprised that a gentleman should advocate the widening and extension of private streets and alleys and allow the principal thoroughfare not to be widened when such an opportunity was presented. He could not understand the policy, and believed it to be the poorest piece of judgment to act upon such a policy.

Alderman Gibson said he believed the chairman of the committee had good reason for his course. It would cost much more to cut off this land now and wait for further improvements to be made hereafter, than it would to allow the owner to build up and cut it off in the future. The city was now poor, and when it gets able, then it may require the owner to set back his line. If set back now, it will injure his rent, and the cost in interest and taxes will be twice as much as it will be when they get ready to put the street clear through. As a matter of economy, the cost will not amount to anything worth talking about, if delayed ten or fifteen years, as compared with the loss and damage by commencing the widening at the present time.

Alderman Power said he was astonished at the argument of the gentleman, for he generally considered him pretty sound in his views. On Washington street there would be a constant putting up of valuable buildings, and it would be a matter of economy to take advantage of the opportunities of rebuilding for the purpose of widening the street. As to damages in setting back estates, he guessed there would not be any. If Aldermen were preaching economy in such matters, let them go to some of the back streets they were widening, and which were costing hundreds of thousands of dollars, but could not be the thoroughfares which Washington street must continue to be. There was no more valuable improvement in which the citizens would more quietly acquiesce in, than in the widening of Washington street to Essex street. In the opportunity for widening below Summer street they did not wait, and this was one of the most important matters which would come before them.

Alderman Clark said he was prepared to advocate the extension of the widening of Washington street to Essex street, if thought advisable now, but not the widening of thirty-five feet of the distance. Suppose half a dozen of such buildings should be set back, there would be damages to pay in each case, as there was in a case in Kneeland street, where the owners were paid $3000 or $4000, and there could be no doubt there would be large claims for damages, amounting to $150,000 or $200,000 in ten years. Unless they were prepared to make the entire widening to Essex street, it would be cheaper to let the parties build, and nine-tenths of those above would petition against such widening of one building at a time. As it is, he did not doubt but Washington street was better for retail business than it would be if wider. If all the widening was to be at once, he would go for it. The owner of this building was decidedly opposed to the cutting off, as it would be a serious damage to him, and he should have a just claim for damages.

Alderman Power said he did not doubt every owner of a building would object to cutting off his estate. There was no reason why Mr. Gray's objection should have any more weight than that of any other person. If objection was made to this widening, he could not see why there was any widening of the street below. That widening would never have been done if it was not intended to widen the street above. The cost of the widening would never be so low as it is today. If the order is passed, then every person who rebuilds will know that he is to set back his building, without pressing the measure, until the whole is consummated. It should be done, for the street is blocked every day. He should be glad to see the street widened to sixty feet, and every one will be pleased when it is so widened. They should go on as far as the fire now, and he was astonished that the Committee on Streets should oppose it.

Alderman Gibson believed that Summer street was the natural terminus of the widening of Washington street. The widening, by leaving a jog, would make a stopping place for teams and an accumulation of rubbish, and he did not believe that the proposed widening to Essex street would be accomplished in twenty years. When other streets, as proposed, are widened, a large amount of travel will not go up Washington street. Tremont street will be widened by taking a strip of the Common, and that will take much of the travel. Down as far as the old State House the travel was much larger. In a money, sanitary and public point of view it would be better not to have such jogs in the widening of the street, and the street would be neater and cleaner. It would be a wrong step to widen in that way, and he would not do any such thing.

Alderman Power said he took it for granted that no one doubted that Washington street would be widened below the burnt district as fast as the buildings were torn down. He hoped no one thought Boston would stand still. Every year Washington street is shown more and more to be too narrow. It is the principal street and the fashionable street, and it should have been widened years ago. No amount of widening of other streets will change its character as the principal thoroughfare. They might figure up the interest as much as they would, and as a matter of economy no one doubts that the widening can be made less now than hereafter. It was only a question of time as to the widening, and it would be unwise not to make a commencement now.

Alderman Halbert said that, as a member of the Committee on Streets, he was convinced that they must stop somewhere in the expenditures for improvements. There were some things which they must do. He was opposed to this widening, for the determined widening below was finished as a complete whole. If more should be attempted now, it would be but an invitation to go beyond. He did not believe that the citizens would commend the proposed widening as in accordance with a good judgment, for it would leave a blemish on the looks of the street. It was an open question whether it would be completed in three, five or ten years, and the extra expense of cutting off buildings would be small in comparison with the consequences which would grow out of widening gradually. The city was not able or prepared at present to make the whole widening, and he would prefer to leave it as it is.

Alderman Gibson repeated that much of the travel would be kept back from Washington street by the widening of other streets. Heretofore with narrow streets, travel had been forced into Washington street, and he believed that now Washington street would have as much room as would be required. It was better to see things moving. The opening and widening of other avenues would be ample for the travel for ten or fifteen years, and with the retaining of taxable property with the interest which would be saved, he would guarantee the amount would pay the entire cost of cutting off buildings, when it should become necessary to widen Washington street.

Alderman Power said it did not make any difference how many avenues there were opened or widened, for there was no more reason to expect Washington street would be abandoned as a fashionable street than there was for ladies to wear bonnets that were worn twenty years ago. The travel will go there. He would not advocate the immediate widening of Washington street to Essex street, but as far as it is burned he would widen it, and he would make all beyond set their buildings back when changes were made, which could be done in a few years at little expense. By so doing, millions of dollars would be saved. Nothing would be more cheerfully acquiesced in by the citizens, and it was as desirable as anything has been or can be.

The question was taken on the order, which was non-concurred in by a vote of 2 to 10, as follows:

COMMUNICATION FROM THE COMMISSIONERS UNDER THE LOAN ACT.

A communication was received from the Mayor, transmitting the report of the commissioners appointed under the "act to enable the city of Boston to issue its bonds for certain purposes," as follows:

To the City Council of Boston—The commissioners appointed by the Mayor, with the approval of the Board of Aldermen, by virtue of an act to enable the city of Boston to issue its bonds for certain purposes, respectfully report—

That they were duly qualified and gave bonds, in compliance with the act and with the order of the Board of Aldermen on the 26th day of December, 1872, and on the 28th day of the same month gave notice through the newspapers that they were ready to receive proposals in writing for the loan of money upon first mortgage to the owners of land, the buildings upon which were burned by the fire in this city on the 9th and 10th days of November last, and that they might be found at their office in City Hall, daily, from ten to eleven o'clock A. M.

In pursuance of the provisions of the act they appointed George P. Lovering clerk of the board on the 28th day of December last, and a record has been kept of their doings, which record has always been open to the inspection of the Committee on Finance and of the City Council.

In order to fix accurately and by proper evidence the limits of the burnt district, to which the act was restricted, the City Surveyor was requested to furnish to this board a map or plan of a portion of the city and to give the lines which would include the land the buildings upon which were burned by the fire. He was requested to mark upon the plan the changes made by the Street Commissioners in widening and straightening streets, and to place upon each lot of land the name of the owner at the time of the fire, the area in square feet, and the valuation of the land, exclusive of buildings, by the Assessors on the 1st day of May, 1872. With this plan before them the board had a distinct view of the premises covered by their commission.

At an early day the board decided that in the absence of special reasons the value of the land should be the limit to the amount to be loaned in each case, and that all papers and titles should be passed upon and approved by the City Solicitor, and that policies of insurance upon the buildings should be made payable to the city.

The commissioners have attended at their room in City Hall a portion of each day from Dec. 28, 1872, and the clerk of the board has been in constant attendance. Printed blanks were prepared to be filled up and signed by parties applying for loans in order to keep in permanent form the statements upon which action might be had.

Two millions of square feet of land, excluding all streets and passageways, were burned over by the fire. The average assessed value of these estates was fourteen dollars a square foot. About two hundred and sixty thousand square feet will be taken to widen and straighten streets, and the cost of rebuilding may be estimated at $25,000,000. The value of the buildings burned did not exceed two-thirds of this sum, but the expense of building is much higher than formerly, and larger and more expensive structures will be erected in some portions of the district. Applications and inquiries have been made by many parties, but the delays necessarily incident to the state of the season and to fixing the lines of the streets, have been such that the commissioners cannot form any accurate estimate of the amount which would have been called for under this act.

One half of the estates on the burnt district, according to the Assessor's valuation, is owned by fifty-seven persons, trustees or corporations, the least valuation being $100,000, and the greatest, $899,000. The other estates are valued from $3500, the lowest, to $98,000 the highest, and are owned by a great number of parties. The commissioners have had conferences with the representatives of banking houses abroad, in reference to negotiating the loan authorized, but no arrangements, either to borrow the money on behalf of the city, or to make loans under the act had been completed, when the board was notified on the 7th February, 1873, that a petition to restrain the city from issuing bonds under the act had been filed in the Supreme Judicial Court. As the court upon that petition on the 14th day of March decided that the act was unconstitutional, this board has no authority to act.

The commissioners annex to this report one of the blank forms of applications adopted by them, and they submit herewith a statement of incidental expenses incurred, all of which were for advertising, blanks, books of records, stationery and postage stamps. The act provides that the compensation of the clerk of the board shall be fixed by the City Council and paid by the city, and we respectfully refer this subject to the City Council.

We transmit to the City Council all the records and papers of the commissions. For ourselves we respectfully request that no action be taken by the City Council upon the clause of the act which provides that the commissioners shall receive such compensation for their services as shall be fixed by the City Council to be paid by the city, as we prefer that these services be not made a matter of pecuniary compensation.

(Signed by), William Gray, Otis Norcross and J. G. Abbott, as commissioners.

Boston, March 17, 1873.

Referred to Committee on Claims and sent down for concurrence.

REPORT OF THE COCHITUATE WATER BOARD, ON ADDITIONAL SUPPLY OF WATER.

A report was laid before the Board in print, of the Cochituate Water Board on an additional supply of water for this city.

The Committee of the Board on Additional Water Supply state that immediately after the acceptance of the Legislative act, authorizing the city of Boston to receive an additional supply of water from Sudbury River, the Cochituate Water Board gave such attention to the subject as would secure temporary advantages from this source.

This being accomplished, the engineer employed upon that work (our present efficient City Engineer) was authorized to make such surveys and estimates as would lead to an intelligent decision upon the most feasible route for the construction of a new and independent conduit, which will give us the permanent advantages which the Sudbury River is so abundantly able to furnish.

These surveys being made, the board sent for Mr. E. S. Chesbrough of Chicago (the accomplished engineer under whose direction our present works were constructed), to examine the proposed route, and pass his judgment upon the plans.

Mr. Chesbrough cheerfully responded to our invitation, and spent several days upon the work.

The extended report of the engineer, and the comments of Mr. Chesbrough, are submitted herewith.

The rapid growth of our city, and the certain prospects of unprecedented increase in the immediate future, render it unnecessary to make any arguments in favor of the object.

This board would ask the early attention of the City Council to the consideration of the subject, and suggest that an appropriation of $500,000 be made, and the work commenced without delay.

The Engineers' preliminary report considers the question of the need of an additional supply, particularly from the experience gained during the dry season of 1871, the consumption having nearly equalled the supply to the lake as far back as 1850.

Taking into consideration the evaporation from water surfaces, it will be found that a yearly collection of twelve inches of rain upon the Cochituate water shed will furnish a daily supply of about 10,000,000 gallons, and to equalize the delivery to the conduit a storage capacity equal to at least five and a half feet in depth, above the flow-line of the conduit (taken at four feet above the bottom) would be required.

The actual storage capacity of the lake is equal to a depth of nine feet four inches above this flow-line, and, under the circumstances supposed, would admit of an increase of the consumption, from the accumulation of previous years, of about 2,000,000 gallons daily, giving a total daily supply of 12,000,000 gallons.

During 1871 the restrictions upon the use of water have been quite rigid, and a careful inspection has been maintained to prevent waste; yet the average daily consumption has been nearly 14,000,000 gallons, or two millions per day more than the source can be relied upon to yield in a year of light rainfall.

After an examination of a great number of sources of water supply, it was decided to ask for a charter granting the right to take water from the Charles or Sudbury River. Deducting three square miles for water surfaces, to offset the evaporation from the storage basins, the drainage area of the Sudbury River above the outlet of Farm Pond is seventy square miles, twelve inches in depth upon which would provide a supply of forty million gallons per day. Tables are given to show the rainfall for a number of years, and it is assumed that the storage must be increased to provide for a capacity equal to more than four hundred and sixty days' supply. Surveys have been made of seven storage basins, which are shown upon a plate. These, together with Farm Pond and Whitchall Pond (a reservoir built by the city in connection with the Cochituate works, to provide compensation water for the mills), give a total storage of about six hundred and forty-eight million cubic feet. It is believed that with these reservoirs Sudbury River may be relied upon to furnish a daily supply of forty millions, and with the usual or average conditions of rainfall and absorption about fifty millions gallons per day.

From thorough examination of the water, the conclusions are drawn that usually the water of the Sudbury River is clear and pure, and well suited for a domestic supply; second, that although subject, like all rivers, to temporary impurity of a vegetable origin, that impurity may be reduced to a harmless and inappreciable quantity by exposure to the air in storage basins and the conduit.

A number of trial lines have been surveyed to ascertain the best line for the conduit. The best point and method for crossing Charles River is still a matter of doubt. In the length of 16½ miles there are 8100 lineal feet of tunnels, 7900 feet of siphons, and 1400 of conduit supported on arches.

The necessity of soon beginning the work of construction is urged, and it is said it will require, at best, three seasons, and more probably four, to build the new works. By the time they are completed the consumption in the city will have very materially increased, and from two causes; first, by removal of restrictions upon the use of water; second, by the natural increase in the number of water takers, and in the use for trade and manufacturing purposes. While all effective measures to prevent waste should be applied, it is evidently for the interest of all that restrictions upon the legitimate use of water should be removed as soon as a sufficient supply can be provided. The use of hand hose and the playing of fountains, under proper regulations, should be encouraged rather than prohibited, not only for the comfort and pleasure of the people, but also as conducing to their sanitary welfare.

For the past two years the consumption has been kept at its lowest limits by the enforcement of rigid measures, therefore from this time, even with a continuance of those measures, it must increase in about the same ratio as the number of water takers increases. If this ratio prove to be seven per cent. per year, as for the past two years (in 1870 it was fourteen per cent.,) or twenty-two per cent. in three years, it will tax the Cochituate conduit to its utmost capacity to maintain the supply till the new conduit can be ready for use, even if the work of construction can be at once begun. The increase in consumption during 1872 has been eight per cent.

The estimated cost of works as now designed, excluding interest upon money during construction, and water damages (for reckoning the value of which there seems to be no well-determined basis), is as follows:

Three storage basins, dams, etc.....	$495,000 00
Wooden pipes connecting dams.....	70,200 00
Work at Farm Pond.....	8,500 00
Conduit, including gate chambers, waste weirs, culverts, siphons with one line of 48-inch pipes, inlet chambers, tunnels, etc..	3,497,300 00
Pipe in Bradlee Basin to connect the conduit with reservoir outlet chamber.....	72,318 00
Land damages, including mill property taken.	375,000 00
Superintendence.....	270,000 00
Total	$4,788,318 00

The appendix to the report is substantially that made verbally to the Water Board, Feb. 13, 1872, and contains speculations upon the probable growth and future wants of the city. In their estimates, in 1920 Boston will contain a population of 860,000, and allowance must be made for a large increase through annexation. A supply should then be made for a population of 1,000,000 of people. An allowance of sixty gallons for each person requires a total supply of sixty million gallons daily, of which fully twelve million will be furnished from Lake Cochituate and about forty-eight million must be obtained from new sources.

The estimate of cost of the complete works required to secure this supply and convey it to the Chestnut Hill Reservoir is $5,150,000.

The Sudbury water can be delivered to the reservoir by gravitation and no special operating expenses are required.

Interest upon $5,150,000 at 6 per cent.....	$309,000 00
Cost of delivering 14,600,000,000 gallons.....	309,000 00
Cost of delivering 1,000,000 gallons.....	21 17

The advantages of this source are: first, it will supply a water free from all dangerous impurities and liable only to such temporary impurity of vegetable origin as is found at times in the waters of all rivers flowing through farm lands; second, it has just sufficient elevation to furnish its supply by gravitation; third, the cost per million of gallons delivered from it is low.

The best point for taking water from the Charles River for the supply of Boston is between Newton

Ordered, That the time for erecting a building upon the lot of land on East Dedham street, as sold by the city in April, 1871, to Rand & Blake, be extended for two years from May 1, 1873, upon conditions that the sum of $300 be paid to the Superintendent of Public Lands, within ten days from the passage of this order.

The report was accepted and the order was passed.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on the Public Library, made a report that a very valuable library is now offered for sale to the Board of Trustees of the library, which said board are desirous of purchasing, it being an opportunity not often occurring of securing rare works. The committee concur in the views of the board as to the importance of the purchase, and to effect it will require at this time a sum of $15,000 in addition to the balance of appropriation in the hands of the Trustees unappropriated, and they, therefore, would recommend the passage of the accompanying order, which has received the approval of the Committee on Finance at a meeting held this day:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be, and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the unexpended balances of the present financial year 1872-73, a sum not exceeding $15,000 to the appropriation for Public Library.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

The order was referred to the Committee on Water.

Alderman Gaffield stated in explanation that there was no schoolhouse within a great distance of the locality, and many of the citizens there were desirous that there should be a public school in that neighborhood, which was supposed to be such that the people intended mainly to send their children to private schools. It was not designed to erect a schoolhouse the present year, but to secure the site and procure plans and estimates for a house.

The order was passed by a unanimous vote.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses, as follows: Jubilee Singers, to give concerts at Tremont Temple and Music Hall March 19, 22 and 26; J. ADDITIONAL STREET-IMPROVEMENT LOAN.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, made a report that in their judgment an additional loan of $2,000,000 should be granted, to be added to the loan of $3,000,000 already authorized for street improvements in the Burnt District. Orders have already passed the City Council for widening streets in the district, amounting to $1,079,888 50.

The widening and extending of the following-named streets have passed the Board of Street Commissioners and the Board of Aldermen, and are now awaiting the action of the Common Council:

Federal street.....	$341,869
Congress street.....	314,795
Milk street.....	297,462
Franklin street.....	314,892
Pearl street.....	170,300
Oliver street.....	131,220
Hawley street.....	277,730
Arch street.....	334,600

$2,382,868

The total amount of these improvements already authorized and now before the City Council is $3,462,756 56.

The remaining street improvements, as proposed within the burnt district, and immediately connected therewith, will, in the judgment of the committee, at this time require a further loan of $2,000,000.

This, with the previous loans authorized, will make a total loan of $5,000,000.

They would therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying order, making an additional loan of $2,000,000.

Signed by Alderman Clark.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be and he hereby is authorized, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, to borrow the sum of $2,000,000; the same to be added to the Burnt District Loan, making a total loan of $5,000,000.

The report was accepted and the order was passed.

COMMISSIONER OF THE SINKING FUND.

Alderman Gibson, from the joint special committee appointed to nominate a candidate for Commissioner of the Sinking Fund, made a report recommending the reelection of Newton Talbot for two years.

The report was accepted, and the Board proceeded to a ballot, when Mr. Talbot was reelected by a unanimous vote.

ORDERS PASSED.

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Calvin P. Elliot, lieutenant of police, twenty-five cents per day for each and every day between the 9th of March and the 23d of December, 1872, on account of extra service while acting as lieutenant with the rank of sergeant.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the sum of $700 be, and the same hereby is abated from the betterment of $1500 assessed upon the estate of Anna M. Amory on Lamartine street, by an order of this Board of November 20, 1871, on account of the laying out of said street; also by an order of this Board December 10, 1869, leaving the assessment now due upon the said estate at $800, upon condition of the payment of said assessment now remaining upon said estate by the said Anna M. Amory to the city.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the bill of Burditt & Williams for $5 for material furnished in February, 1872, be paid, provided it is approved and allowed in the usual manner.

WIDENING OF WASHINGTON STREET.

Alderman Power moved a reconsideration of the rejection of the order of the Street Commissioners for the widening of Washington street, at the corner of Summer street, by taking land of John C. Gray.

In making the motion, he said he did not wish to debate the question, and should ask to have the matter laid on the table should the motion prevail.

Alderman Clark hoped the motion would not prevail, the Street Committee having fully considered the subject, and were opposed to it, and the Board having determined against the widening by a vote of 10 to 2. The citizens did not want nor demand it, nor expect an expenditure which would cost $2,000,- 000 or $3,000,000. Such an improvement would be better delayed a while, and before widening above, the widening of Washington street should be completed, down to Cornhill. He hoped, therefore, that the Board would adhere to its action already taken.

Alderman Power believed the matter had not been well considered, and he wished to have it laid on the table, that a fair chance be given for its consideration. As to the motion for a reconsideration when there is a large vote against any measure, it was no unusual thing, for he had known of such a motion when there was a vote of eleven in opposition, and those who were in the majority afterwards expressed an opinion against their votes. It would be no inconvenience to lay the matter on the table for a week, for no one could build at present as it would take over a week to take down the walls of the building.

Alderman Clark disagreed with the Alderman as to the matter of delay, for the parties were in a hurry, and a delay of a week or a fortnight would be a great inconvenience to the owner and the tenants in proceeding with the work of rebuilding. If the vote had been 6 and 6 there might be some reason for a reconsideration. The Alderman said he did not know, but it happened to him, as a member of the committee, that he did understand the subject thoroughly, and that the parties were in a hurry, and if delay was occasioned, there could be nothing done before the 1st of May.

Alderman Power said he would not say anything to reflect upon the judgment of the Board, but he believed some of them had not had sufficient time to consider the matter, and nothing would be lost by a delay till Monday. It was proper to say that he did not know anything about it until it was brought before the Board, and although the vote was nearly unanimous, in some other cases it proved, where there was so unanimous a vote, that they were wrong. Nobody was waiting and there could be no inconvenience in a delay of ten days. It was his object that members of the Board could see how the matter stands.

Alderman Sayward hoped the matter would be reconsidered, for in other cases there had been delays for months. Members of the Board sometimes change their minds, for in one case, where there was a vote of 11 to 1, on the next day the vote was 6 to 6. He voted in the minority and hoped the motion would prevail, for there could be no inconvenience in a delay till next Monday.

Alderman Clark said he had no other interest in the case than had other aldermen, but he had been assured by the architect that a delay would be of the greatest injury to the owner. He knew what he was talking about, and while it was true that Boards of Aldermen change from year to year, if there was any probability of a reconsideration, he would not oppose the motion. The parties wish to know what their lines will be, that they may be able to make their contracts. If it was desired to widen now from Dover street to Cornhill, he might be willing to go with them, at an expense of $10,000,000 or $15,000,000, but he did not consider it expedient to commence a widening which would require several years.

Alderman Gibson said he would like to allow the largest opportunity for considering the questions, and if any one was groping in the dark, he would not object to delay. No member of the board could be in want of information, and a delay must be for persons outside of themselves.

Alderman Power inquired if the Alderman knew how many old buildings there were on Washington street which would be taken down to be rebuilt?

Alderman Clark replied that there were several buildings put up last year which if cut off would subject the city to $50,000 damages.

Alderman Power said the Aldermen could not know how many buildings might be rebuilt on the line the present year, and to allow rebuilding before widening was commenced might cost millions of dollars in the future. The widening could never be done at so low a price as it can be today, and if economy is the object they should do as the Street Commissioners wish to have them. For what purpose should such men be selected to consider street improvements if they were not to be heeded, employed for that very purpose, and it was understood they were unanimous in favor of it. He wished further time for himself and others to consider what the Commissioners ask them to do.

Alderman Clark stated that the Street Commissioners were not unanimous for the widening proposed. One of them was opposed, and another was about three-quarters against it. He did not believe there would be many new buildings put up on Washington street this year, for since the squelching of the right of the city to issue bonds, it would add five years to the rebuilding of the burnt district. The decision of the Supreme Court would prove to be a serious injury to building and to the business of Boston, and there would not be many buildings put on the line of Washington street in the next five years.

Alderman Power wished to know how the report came here, if one Commissioner was opposed to the widening and another three-fourths against it in a board of three. In relation to the bond question, he did not intend to say anything, yet in that case the one minority proved to be right and the eleven wrong, and that was a reason why a motion for reconsideration should prevail in this case, that time might be given to look into the matter. Immediately after the fire there was such an excitement that many persons did not act from level heads, and in many cases had there been delay they would not have voted as they did. It was a common thing in such cases to be actuated by the judgment of the committee and not by that of individual members.

Alderman Gibson believed the cost of the proposed improvement would be seventy-five cents more on a dollar than it would be if delayed. It would be injustice to parties to delay in action on the subject, and if the buildings were required to be set back it would be injury in rents of $1000 to $1500 a year, while the widened places would be a stopping place for wagons and a nuisance. The amount of loss in this case would be $27,000 in ten years. If, however, any one was groping in the dark, he would not object to enlightening him.

Alderman Gaffield said he did not believe he should change his opinion on the subject, but as a matter of courtesy he should not object to a delay until next Monday. There was no doubt a great deal of deference paid to the opinions of a committee in their reports, and as a member of the Committee on Streets, he wished to retain the good opinion of the members of the Board. He would then put the question on that ground in granting a delay as asked for until Monday next.

In committee, the members were nearly evenly divided on the subject, and if there had been four Commissioners there would probably have been two on each side. Neither the Commissioners nor the committee wished to take the responsibility on the subject. The committee stood four to three, and at one time he had a doubt himself on the subject, believing as the Alderman who made the motion, that the widening should be done now.

Alderman Clark further opposed the motion. He was not so egotistical as to believe that the Board voted as they did—10 to 2—simply on the report of the committee; or that they would be willing to subject the city to expenditures of from $150,000 to $600,000 or $700,000. As for delay, he was opposed to it, believing there should be none when there was no occasion for it.

Alderman Emery said he believed every member of the Board was just as well prepared to vote now as he would be a week or a fortnight hence. The Street Commissioners and Committee on Streets believed it to be a very important matter, and in their judgment it was desired that it should receive the action of the City Council. There was not the slightest doubt that the action of the City Council in its rejection would satisfy the Street Commissioners.

Alderman Gibson said the real question was one as to the proposed change, and not one of choking off debate. The vote was a test, and it was a question whether it should be considered further. If not, and there was no probability of a change, it was unnecessary that there should be further delay.

Alderman Emery said it was not desirable that further time should be taken for consideration, in the expectation of a change, but if any gentleman wished to look further into it he would give him an opportunity. By delay he believed a gain would be made in the vote instead of losing, and it might be that the other Aldermen would come over and make the vote unanimous.

Alderman Power said in relation to voting, how much could the chairman of the Committee on Streets know about sewers, their necessity and cost? What were the members of the Board divided up for into committees except to investigate in particular cases, and not a gentleman is supposed to know until a committee reports. It was nothing against the judgment of a gentleman that he could not understand a case when he has but one day to consider it. This measure was one of the most important submitted to them for the whole year and the first time it came up was last Monday, when action was taken upon it. It was not just or fair to refuse postponement because but two voted against it.

Alderman Clark denied the charge that he was forcing the matter. There had been three days for consideration of the matter, and he argued against delay because there was no probability of any member changing his mind. He wished to have the matter settled, and it could be just as well settled now as next Monday.

Alderman Brown said he was willing to vote for a delay if it was needed, but as the Alderman said the architect was waiting to go on with his plans, it was not desirable. He had several times been up to look at the line of the proposed widening, and as there were a good many valuable buildings between Summer street and Hayward place, which would be required to be cut off at a cost of $30,000 or $40,000 in each case, he believed there would be a saving of the interest by a delay. As in the case of widening of Federal street, when action was taken because parties wished for their lines, he thought there was a necessity to have the lines fixed in this case.

Alderman Quincy said he did not believe a single vote would be changed, but as a matter of courtesy he was willing to give the delay asked for.

The reconsideration was lost by a vote of 5 to 7, as follows:

Yeas—Emery, Gaffield, Power, Quincy, Sayward.

Nays—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Cutter, Gibson, Hulbert, Stebbins.

DIRECTORS FOR PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

The certificate of the election of Bradley N. Cummings as a Director for Public Institutions, in place of Albert J. Wright chosen by this Council, was read, when the Council voted to proceed to an election.

Mr. Dean, on leave, made some remarks in which he said it had been circulated among members of the Council that Colonel Wright had withdrawn his name as a candidate. It is true that he did write a letter asking to have his name withdrawn, but on the representations of his friends that letter had been withdrawn and he left the matter entirely with them.

The ground taken by Mr. Wright was that he did not wish to be in the position of a shuttlecock to be thrown back and forth and thus prevent an election of a Director for Public Institutions, but to this his friends urged that under the board as at present constituted no information could be obtained as to the probability of the removal of the public institutions from South Boston, whether there was room at Deer Island or elsewhere for them, and they believed that it was due to fifty thousand inhabitants that there should be a representative in the board from South Boston.

That was the feeling among the citizens, that on a board of twelve persons, they should be represented as there would be among the citizens of East Boston, who knew best about the ferries; that they should have a representative on the board, and this would be but a mere pittance of one member of the board. He would appeal to the Council, that in all fairness they should have a member of the board, and they had presented for the office as good a man as can be found in the city.

The Council proceeded to ballot, which resulted as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	57
Necessary to a choice.....	29
Bradley N. Cummings.....	35
Albert J. Wright.....	21
H. D. Bradt.....	1

Mr. Cummings was declared to be elected, in concurrence.

Mr. Woodbury was again declared to be elected, in non-concurrence.

WEIGHERS AND INSPECTORS OF LIGHTERS.

The non-concurrence in the recommendation of the report nominating Weighers and Inspectors of Lighters, came up, when the Council receded from the recommendation and proceeded to an election, the result of which was as follows:

The order authorizing an additional loan of $2,000,000, to be added to the Burnt District Loan, was read once.

A remonstrance against the additional widening of streets in the vicinity of the Post Office, was referred to the Committee on Streets. The following is the remonstrance:

To the Board of Street Commissioners and the City Council of Boston.—The undersigned taxpayers of Boston respectfully, but earnestly, remonstrate against the proposition now before the city authorities to enlarge the area around the new Post Office building, involving, as it does, so large an outlay of money, and the practical destruction of so much valuable and taxable business property. We do not think the conveniences of public travel, the interests of the city, or any wishes on the part of the citizens require or would justify the carrying out of the proposed measure.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON THE AUDITOR'S ESTIMATES.

To the City Council—The Joint Special Committee of the City Council, to whom were referred the estimates of the Auditor of Accounts for the money requisite to defray the expenses of the city of Boston and county of Suffolk for the financial year commencing May 1, 1873, and terminating April 30, 1874, and pay the State tax for 1873, being City Document No. 34, would respectfully report that they have examined and considered the same, and are of the opinion that the estimates, as submitted by the Auditor of Accounts, should stand as presented by him without change.

They accordingly recommend the passage of the accompanying orders; one making the appropriations required for the financial year 1873-74, and the other levying a tax to meet said appropriations less the revenue to be received during the year, as set forth in the document of the Auditor above referred to.

For the Committee.

And it is further ordered, That no money shall be expended, and no debts be incurred for any object or purpose, for which a specific appropriation is herein made, beyond the amount which is so specifically appropriated; provided, however, that any sums of money which may be subscribed or contributed by individuals to promote the objects of any of the following appropriations, and which form no part of the estimated income of the city, shall be strictly applied, according to the intention of the contributors, and shall be credited to such appropriations accordingly; that is to say—

IN COMMON COUNCIL, Thursday, March 20, 1873.

An order laying a specific tax to defray the expenses of the city of Boston and the county of Suffolk for the financial year 1873-74; also to pay the State Tax.

Ordered, that the sum of $8,638,092 be raised on the polls and estates taxable in this city, according to law, to pay the current expenses of the city of Boston and the county of Suffolk during the financial year, which will commence with the first day of May, 1873, and end with the last day of April, 1874; also the tax assessed by the General Court of Massachusetts for the year 1873.

The orders were read once.

WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 presented majority and minority reports from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, to whom was referred the resolve in relation to the expediency of laying out the triangular parcel of land between Congress, Pearl and Water streets, and widening Water street, between Congress and Devonshire streets. The majority report that inasmuch as the expense of the proposed widening will not, according to the best information they are able to obtain by conference with the Street Commissioners and others, exceed the sum of $400,000, they would recommend the passage of the resolve.

Signed by Alderman Clark for the committee.

The undersigned, members of the Committee on Streets, respectfully dissent from the recommendations of the majority, and beg leave to state, very briefly, their reasons therefor:

1. The public safety and convenience do not require the proposed changes.
2. The expense involved will far exceed any advantages which might be derived from the enlargement of the Post Office.
3. The estimate of expense, as furnished by the majority, is founded merely on the opinion of individuals, and has no basis on estimates in detail.

The undersigned would therefore recommend that the following order be passed, so that the City Council may have information on which to act understandingly.

JAMES J. FLYNN.

CYRUS A. PAGE.

Ordered, That the Street Commissioners be requested to furnish in tabular form a statement of the expense of taking and laying out the parcel of land between Congress street, Milk street and Bath street, and of laying out and widening Water street to sixty feet between Congress street and Devonshire street.

The report of the committee was considered.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 stated that the report of the majority was necessarily brief, the session of the committee being late in the afternoon, up to nearly the hour of the meeting of the Council. There was no reason, however, that it should be long, for the question had been pretty thoroughly considered during the past week. While they wished to give all the information possible, they did not give estimates of any particular estate, the particular damage being to the Post building, because it would give an opportunity to the parties in case of disagreement to go before a jury and claim that the committee admitted that the estate was worth so much, and they did not wish to make it any fuller by stating that certain land was worth so much, and others not so much, to allow the opponents of the report to pick it to pieces.

So far, however, as related to the expense, he would give the Assessors' valuation, that of Beals, Greene & Co., not including the building, being at $35 per foot, and the Simmons estate at $30, and the Lawrence estate a little under $20. The committee believed that as this was a measure which the Street Commissioners regarded as of great importance and of great public interest, it was very desirable to have the expression of the Common Council, representing the wishes of the people. They also wished to have the matter thoroughly considered and a decision made tonight. Without going into an extended statement on the subject, he was ready to answer any questions which might be asked in relation to the subject.

Mr. Page said the minority of the committee had no more time for their report than had the majority, and they did not think it necessary that it should be any fuller. Yet they believed the order should be referred to the proper tribunal to give a detailed estimate of expense. The Street Commissioners, it was true, had given a general idea of the expense, but they had never been down to look at the premises and did not know from personal observation the cost of the land or the damage to the Post building. Before taking any action, the same course should be taken as in other cases, in making estimates of improvements in the burnt district, which would be the proper course to be pursued, and save them from being placed in an unfortunate position, with the city pledged to an improvement which would cost much more than was expected. He moved to substitute the minority report for that of the majority.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 stated that the session of the committee was but brief, and it was but just that the Street Commissioners, who had had a hearing today, should be called upon to give a tabulated statement of the expense, they being supposed to know more about the expense than any other persons.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 moved to recommit to the committee for the purpose of obtaining a fuller report, as he understood from the statement made that but a short time was allowed in making up the report.

Mr. Perkins said the committee did not desire to have further time. On Friday last, at a meeting of the committee, it was agreed to consider the subject as soon as the resolution had passed the Board of Aldermen, and in accordance with that agreement a session of two hours was held this afternoon. The general ground of the committee was that if the city wished to have the Post Office extended they must accede to the terms of the General Government. The Street Commissioners wished to have the opinion of the City Council, and the members of the Council were as able to judge of the expediency of the measure as the Street Commissioners were, and if the question is determined in favor of the proposed widening the Commissioners will proceed to lay out the street as proposed, and give a detailed estimate of the expense.

It was not desirable, unless ordered to do so, to go into a detailed estimate of the expense, for the reasons already given, that it would give the parties an advantage in going before a jury and quoting the Commissioners as to what the land is worth. Should the action of the Council be against the measure, then there will be no necessity for making surveys and estimates. Interested parties might talk about millions of dollars, but they knew that the cost would be somewhere between $300,000 and $400,000. If that amount was too great an expense to secure an extension of the Post Office, then let the Council vote that the order ought not to pass. Otherwise if the improvement is believed to be of great value, then the City Council expresses the opinion that it is desirable if it will not cost more than the amount specified.

Mr. Flynn said it appeared to him that what was sauce for the goose was sauce for the gander. In all the improvements heretofore they had had a detailed estimate of the cost before taking any action, and there was no reason why the rule should not apply in this case.

Mr. Barnes stated that the committee had not given anything to show what would be the cost of the proposed improvement.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said he was surprised that a member of the Council should come here and say that he had no time to make out a report, and object to giving a statement of reasons in favor of the report. He mistakes the feeling of the Council if he supposes they will pass an order without any reasons in favor of it, and throw away $400,000 into this whirlpool which is sweeping away millions. It would be presuming upon the credulity of the Council to expect that the report would be accepted. Why should they not give a report as in other cases? It was objected to a detailed report, because it would be picked to pieces, and why should it not be to ascertain the cost? He was opposed to the report of the majority, and in favor of that of the minority. It was said they must accede to the terms of the General Government, but there was no must about it. He did not believe in the dictation of the General Government, that had not as yet determined to pay for an enlargement of the Post Office.

The city of Boston was competent to do her own business, and should not yield to the General Government as to the manner of widening and straightening her streets. With the great amount of taxation imposed upon the city, it was the duty of the Council to see that they were not overburdened with taxation. That was the reason why he was sent here, although some gentlemen did not think that he belonged here. The Street Commissioners, no doubt, regarded the measure as of great interest, but the Council could not swallow the proposition at one bite, as coming from the committee.

After the statements of the gentlemen he hoped he would be consistent in his acts, for he had stated what the land was valued at, and at the last meeting of the Council had given it as his opinion that there was no necessity for the widening of Water street. It was not consistent with the honor or dignity of the city to expend large amounts of money at the demand of the General Government, when there was no public exigency requiring it, and he hoped the subject would be considered on its merits when an estimate of the cost should be given.

Mr. Perkins, in reply, said the Committee on Streets had not come here with detailed statements, for detailed statements came from the Street Commissioners when they determined to take lands. This was not such a case. When statements were reported by the Street Commissioners, parties were allowed to abandon their estates if they were not satisfied with the price; but in this case only the expediency of making the widening was to be acted upon. He could not see the necessity for making the additional burdens upon the Commissioners to report a detailed estimate, but they will readily make it if this order is passed. There were remonstrances, it was true, but he believed that the citizens generally will be in favor of the measure, and will regret it if not done. The simple question was whether the city wished to have the Post Office extended, and were willing to pay $400,000 to secure it in the only way in which it can be done.

Mr. Flynn said that in the opinion of the majority of the committee the expense would be at least $400,000. Before passing upon it they should have a statement in a tabular form to show whether the cost would be $400,000 or $600,000. All that the minority of the committee ask is that they should have the amount of the cost ascertained and laid before the Council before action, as in other cases.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 said he was one of the majority of the committee who favored the report, and he was opposed to the adoption of the substitute. A great argument in favor of action was that much complaint had been made against delay; and while the Government was ready to make an extension of the Post Office, the question was whether the city wished to have such a building as it was proposed to erect. The requirements of the Government he did not think at all unfair.

Mr. Page stated as the views of the minority that they wanted something tangible upon which they could act as to the expense, and should their order be adopted, the Street Commissioners could report to the Board of Aldermen on Monday next. There were but a few estates to make an estimate upon, and it would not take long to ascertain the estimated cost, causing but little delay from such action. He was opposed to recommitment, for he did not suppose the further consideration would change the views of a single man.

Mr. Barnes further advocated a recommitment as a means of relieving them from their difficulty.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 said that what he desired was light, and what he wished to get at was to know what the proposed widening was going to cost. They were never called upon to vote except upon knowing the estimated cost, and he saw no reason to deviate from the rule marked out in such cases. They should refer it to the Street Commissioners to give in tabular form the expense of the widening.

Mr. Perkins said the gentleman was in an error as to the invariable practice of action upon detailed statements only in the widening of streets. The fact is that when an order is passed by the Street Commissioners for the taking of land, a detailed statement is given with the order for the taking. But in cases like this there was a good reason, as he had stated before, that no estimate should be fixed which would give an advantage to the owners of estates in assuming that such was an admission of its value should they go to a jury. If the gentleman wishes to have an estimate of the cost, let him vote for the majority report, which will not commit the Council fully to it, when the Street Commissioners will give a detailed statement of the cost. It was true that the vote would commit the Council to the policy if it did not exceed $400,000, but if it was to cost too much, they could vote against it. But if they did not like the report of the majority they could vote it squarely down.

Mr. Barnes rose to a point of order, that the question was on recommitment, to which the gentleman was not speaking.

The Chair ruled that the point of order was not well taken, reminding the gentleman that he should adhere to the question as closely as possible.

Mr. Perkins replied that it was unnecessarily offensive to endeavor to prevent a member of a committee from giving an explanation of a report upon which information was asked. The information sought, he repeated, could be had by voting down the report of the minority and voting squarely on that of the majority. There was a misapprehension, he said, in regard to the session of the committee today, which was of two hours' length, and what he said on the subject was that there was so little time after the close of the session that they could not give their reasons more at length in the report. The question in brief was, is it desirable to have the Post Office enlarged, and if so whether they will have it if it does not cost more than $400,000? That is the question, nothing more, nothing less.

The motion to recommit was lost.

Mr. West of Ward 16 believed that the adoption of the majority report would partially commit the Council to the widening, while that of the minority would not, and he would prefer that they should get their figures before voting upon the widening.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 hoped the minority report would be substituted for that of the majority, for he wished more light on the subject. The majority had made a rough estimate, which was not the usual case in a street improvement. At the last meeting the gentleman from Ward 6 said the proposed widening was not a necessity, but simply a luxury. They should count the cost before they commit themselves, and not be so rash as to commit themselves until they know the cost.

The motion to adopt the minority report was carried.

The question being on the passage of the order, Mr. Perkins made some further remarks, in which he said the same result could have been obtained in the adoption of the majority report.

Mr. Barnes expressed himself as satisfied in the adoption of the minority report, by which he could obtain fuller information.

The order was passed.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11, from the Joint Special Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings, made a report on the petition of John Lynch, recommending the passage of an order authorizing the Inspector of Buildings to issue a permit to John Lynch to make an addition to a building on Congress street, in accordance with an application on file in the office of the Inspector of Buildings.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 offered an ordinance in amendment of an ordinance in relation to the organization of the Board of Engineers of the Fire Department, and the election of the Secretary of the Board of Engineers, stating in explanation that as the election of Secretary is required to be within sixty days of the 1st of February, it was not likely to take place in that time the present year, and the change provides for the election within ninety days.

The ordinance was passed.

Mr. Dean offered an order authorizing the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department to make his annual report on or before the 27th March, the ordinance requiring it to be made on the 1st January, and none had yet been made.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 stated that it was understood the Chief-Engineer was hard at work upon his report, and as soon as it was made up they would get it.

Mr. Dean said he would omit the requirement to give in the report a statement of the amount of damages from the fires during the year.

The order was passed.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, an order was passed to exclude from the coat room of the Common Council all persons except members of the City Government or those officially connected with its proceedings.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 called for a report from the Committee on Public Institutions in relation to a Home for the Poor.

Mr. Prescott of Ward 9 stated that the committee had not united on any place for such a Home, and asked for further time in which to make a report, which request was granted.

On motion of Mr. Dacey, an order was passed that the Committee on Public Institutions be requested to report in one month on that part of the inaugural address of the Mayor which was referred to them, relating to a new Home for the Poor.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7, the order authorizing the sale of a certain estate taken from C. M. Wheelwright, at the corner of Water and Broad streets, not required for the improvement of said streets, was taken from the table, amended to require the sale to be public and advertised in this city, and as amended was passed.

On motion of Mr. Brackett of Ward 10, the majority and minority reports on the claim of Charles Burrill were taken from the table and assigned for consideration on Thursday evening next, at 8½ o'clock.

This department has also furnished a vehicle for the conveyance of prisoners, and from which no income is derived, as follows:

Prisoners conveyed from the Court House to steamer Henry Morrison, 5520; from Court House to Jail, and from Jail to Court House, 5143; from Court House to House of Correction, 513. Total number conveyed, 11,076.

Nuisances. There were served upon parties for maintaining nuisances on their premises, during the year 1872, 3228 notices, embracing twelve wards of the city, and 1300 in the Highland and Dorchester districts, said notices requiring an abatement of the nuisances existing, within a given time.

Parties failing to comply with the terms of notice, orders were passed by the Board of Aldermen, directing an abatement by the Superintendent.

During the year 34 orders, representing 292 estates, were passed, and those remaining unabated received immediate attention.

Thirty-seven tenants in the Highland District and nine in Dorchester were notified to quit tenements not deemed fit for human habitation by reason of the unhealthy condition of the premises.

Twenty-five of the Roxbury tenants left their premises without any resort to force on the part of the Health Department. The remaining twelve were allowed to remain, as the landlords in these cases at once complied with the requisitions of the Health Department. The nine Dorchester tenants vacated peaceably.

Eleven complaints have been made for violations of the Health laws, and conviction has been had in every case; subsequently the defendants complied with the laws, and the cases were placed on file upon payment of the costs of prosecution.

Ashes, Street Dirt, &c. There were collected during the year 1872, by city teams, 94,666 loads of ashes, 41,880 loads of street dirt, and 4910 loads of cesspool matter.

The Superintendent of Streets was furnished with ashes required for his department.

Corporations and private parties were also supplied.

In several instances the material collected was placed on territory most convenient for city teams, and without charge.

Cesspool matter, after being left at its place of deposit, was immediately covered with ashes, to prevent any effluvia arising therefrom.

The number of teams employed by this department in the above capacities are as follows: For collecting ashes and house dirt, 45; collecting street dirt, 34; collecting house offal, 28; collecting cesspool matter, 10; sweeping the streets, 1; conveying prisoners, 1; funigating, 2; conveying the sick, 3.

Tenement Houses. One of the greatest grievances of large cities is tenement houses, in which the poor are compelled to reside.

There are two classes of tenement houses which are unfit for habitation. The first consists of houses which were formerly private residences, and not intended for more than one family; consequently they are not susceptible of the changes necessary for light and ventilation, which their sanitary condition requires. The second, those which were first built. These were built without any knowledge of the wants of that class of people who were to occupy them; but the mercantile business is driving the population before it in these localities.

For the past three years there has been a decided improvement in buildings of this description; they are generally provided with sufficient light and ventilation.

I have observed that where the owners live in their houses, care is taken to keep them clean.

During the past year particular attention has been given to tenement buildings by the inspectors thereof, and owners or lessces have been promptly notified to repair them, and place them in a cleanly condition. With a few exceptions, parties have complied at once, and a marked improvement has been the result. In many of the tenement houses which are occupied by intemperate families, it is impossible to keep them in a cleanly condition; they may be thoroughly cleaned today, and tomorrow they will be found in a filthy condition.

Constant visits have been made to tenement houses, and we have made it our duty to impress upon the minds of all the inmates the necessity of cleanliness and proper ventilation.

Orders to vacate twelve tenement buildings, containing seventy-one families, were passed during the year, and with a single exception the orders were complied with. In this single instance the party owning the premises placed them in good repair.

The population of cellars as dwellings, in my estimation, will not exceed three hundred.

A table is given of the classification of tenement buildings in this city. This gives four tenements, containing 754 inhabitants; five, containing 417; six, 431; seven, 176; eight, 133; and the rest of 56 and under. These buildings are from two to six stories in height of brick, and from one and a half to five stories of wood. The total number of houses is 2165—1020 brick and 1145 wood—containing 39,353 rooms, 13,257 families, 33,688 adults, 20,762 children, and a total of 54,450.

Street Cleaning. The importance of cleanly streets can only be promoted by more than ordinary care of porters having charge of stores on main thoroughfares. If the habit of sweeping store dirt into the streets, without regard to placing the same in vessels for this purpose (the same to be removed by city teams), is persisted in, the fault does not lie with this department, but with those having control over employes; they should give directions in conformity with requirements of Ordinances relating to Health, section 55.

During the past year, the main streets have been swept every day, the others twice a week; but they have not been kept in as cleanly a condition, because storekeepers and porters remove the debris into the street instead of putting the same in vessels for the ash men to remove. If this custom could be stopped, our streets could be kept much cleaner, at less cost. However perfectly the streets may be cleaned during the day, the sweepings from buildings render them dirty and disagreeable.

Unaccepted Streets. The twenty-foot streets of South Boston are in a condition which requires immediate attention. Many of the structures on these streets are tenement buildings, with defective drains and cesspools, and at low grades; their condition would be greatly improved if the city would accept the streets, place them at a proper grade, with good sewerage, and cause the same to be paved; thereby insuring cleanliness, which is now sadly deficient for want of proper care from abutters.

The attention of the Government is also called to the importance of proper drainage and grading of what is known as the Fellows-street District, lying between Albany street and Harrison avenue. Also the territory on the westerly side of Tremont street, from Davenport street to Milford place.

A schedule of property shows 147 horses, with their harnesses, valued at $300 each, $44,100; 114 carts for ashes, etc., $17,200; 48 one-horse wagons, for offal, $9600; 14 one-horse wagons, for cesspools, $1200; five water carts, $1750; with various items of stock and material of the value of $112,300. Of the horses, there have been purchased 32 during the year, 3 have been killed, 9 have died, 6 have been exchanged, and 7 have been sold.

EXTENSION OF QUINCY PLACE.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners, for the extension of Quincy place, at an expense of $12,784.

A schedule of the expense gives the following items: Unknown owners, Quincy place, 3725 feet, at no expense. Timothy McCarthy, 12 Pearl place, 223 feet, $8 per foot; damages, $200—total, $1984. Trustees of the Permanent Peace Fund, 13 Pearl place, 1142 feet, $8; damages, $314—$9450. Heirs of James Carbrej, 14 Pearl place, 146 feet, $8; damages, $182—$1350. Total, 5236 feet, $12,088; damages, $696—$12,784.

Referred to Joint Committee on Streets.

HEARINGS ON ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The hearings on orders of notice on the proposed construction of a sewer in Saratoga street, between Bremen and Swift streets, and on petition of the Howard Watch Company, for leave to locate a steam engine and boiler on Eustis street, at the corner of Prescott street, were severally taken up. No person appearing in either case, the reports were recommended.

The hearing on petition of N. C. Munson, for leave to cross a portion of Yarmouth street with a rail track, was also taken up. A remonstrance was presented against the same from Matthias Rich and others, who asked for a hearing on the subject.

Sidney A. Stetson appeared for remonstrants, and stated that a similar petition was presented at the close of the last year by the Boston & Providence Railroad Company, which, being objected to, was withdrawn. This application they believed to be more objectionable than the other, the object being to make a depot for the sale of sand, gravel and other materials. There is a street in the rear of Yarmouth street, which has not been accepted, but which is proposed to be used, and it is objected to the running of cars all night with the noise of such trains and of carts. Many of the residents made their residence there hoping to get away from the noise, and it would be injurious to that property and to the land yet to be built upon.

Mr. Stetson suggested that if there must be a place for the deposit of gravel in that vicinity, it should be on the heater piece some fifty or sixty rods from that point, which has been given up to such uses, and will equally answer the purposes designed by such a tract. In answer to Alderman Power, he said he should object to such a track if only for temporary purposes, and it would be more objectionable during the summer than in the winter, the residents not being of the class who leave the city in the summer, and they would be much annoyed by the travel and the dust.

W. A. Heyer stated that he had fifteen lots of land on Dartmouth street, which he should consider would be injured by the location of a railroad track in the vicinity.

Hiram Ames owned a house which was but a hundred feet from the projected line of railroad track, and he would be injured by the track. No objection would be made to a track if it was simply for the purpose of filling land for the removal of a nuisance, but this was not of that character.

N. C. Bonnell, owner of two houses, believed they would be injured by the location of the track in the vicinity, and should not expect to be able to sell his houses.

U. H. Coffin also objected to the proposed track as an injury to all the property in the neighborhood.

The report was recommitted.

The order to pay Benjamin B. Converse $269, for land damages on Cottage street, was read a second time and passed.

Underwood and others for a clock upon the new schoolhouse in Ward 12, made a report, that after a careful consideration of the subject, they are of the unanimous opinion that the prayer of the petitioners ought to be granted, and recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Fire Alarms, under the direction of the committee on that department, shall be authorized to place a clock in the tower of the new schoolhouse at City Point, at an expense not exceeding $1000; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Alarms, Bells and Clocks.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Severally accepted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on petition of Michael Keenan for a license as a victualler. Accepted.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Water Department, to whom was referred the report of the Cochituate Water Board (City Document No. 29) in relation to the necessity for an additional supply of pure water from Sudbury River, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $500,000, to be expended under the direction of the Cochituate Water Board in furnishing an additional supply of pure water from Sudbury River.

The order was read once.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Water Department, to whom was referred the order requesting the Mayor to petition the Legislature for authority to take land for a reservoir on Parker Hill, Ward 15, made a report that the proposed reservoir is required to regulate the high-service supply for Beacon Hill, Boston Highlands and a portion of Dorchester. The passage of the order is respectfully recommended. The order was as follows:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court now in session for the passage of an act authorizing the city of Boston to purchase, or otherwise take, lands on Parker Hill, so-called, in Ward 15, for the purpose of establishing a reservoir thereon to supply the citizens of Boston with pure water, and also authorizing the purchase or taking of such other lands as may be necessary to convey water to and from said reservoir.

The question being upon giving the order a second reading—

Alderman Clark said he did not understand how the matter stood, and expressed a fear that the measure was but an entering wedge of the expenditure of $15,000,000 or $20,000,000. If the expenditure was to be in that direction, he should oppose it with all the strength in his power, and he hoped the Mayor would make no such insane request of the Legislature. It would be a virtual abandonment of the system of standpipes, which he had supposed were all that is necessary in the supply of water.

Alderman Brown inquired what would be the proposed expense, for it appeared to be entirely unnecessary to go to an expenditure of from ten to twenty millions of dollars, and uncalled for at the present time, when the standpipes supplied all the water that was necessary.

Alderman Stebbins stated that this order had no connection with the other which had been reported, and as the City Engineer was present, he would like to call upon him to explain the object of the proposed reservoir.

The City Engineer was requested to explain the necessity for the reservoir.

Mr. Davis, City Engineer, to a question of Alderman Clark, replied that the reservoir was not necessary for the supply of the city with water, and in reply to various questions, stated the advantages and necessities of the measure, as follows: The advantage of the reservoir was for the supply of the high-service portions of the city in cases of fire—the Highlands, Beacon Hill, Telegraph Hill, and portions of Dorchester. The reservoir was recommended looking to its future use in those portions of the city.

Parker's Hill was from 200 to 210 feet above tide water, and would supply water at a rate which cannot be relied upon by the standpipes. The engines connected with the standpipes are now required, between 10 and 12 o'clock every day, to make revolutions half as fast additional to the usual speed, and one day in a month twice as fast. The same engines would pump water into the reservoir, and the reservoir would be a source to draw from in cases of fire. In reply to Alderman Stebbins, he said that the Beacon-Hill Reservoir would not on certain days be able to supply engines in cases of fire.

To Alderman Gibson he said both of the engines could not be kept in operation all the time, and one of them must be relied upon for use in case of repairs of the other. The expense of an additional engine would be $150,000, and the expense of the reservoir $200,000. The reservoir would require four acres of ground, and its capacity would be 6,000,000 gallons. The cost of the standpipe at the Highlands, he supposed, was $35,000 to 40,000. The water, of its own level, would come to within about a hundred feet of the top the hill.

The population to be supplied under the high service was, he supposed, more than double what it was two years ago. Beacon Hill and South Boston could be supplied under the low service, but the standpipes were of no service whatever for a supply for fires. To Alderman Brown he said there had been no dearth of water since the great fire. To Alderman Gibson he replied that the standpipes could supply 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 gallons in 24 hours, and with a new main 4,000,000 gallons. The capacity of Beacon-Hill Reservoir he supposed was some 3,000,000 gallons.

Alderman Clark said it was evident they did not sufficiently understand the matter to act upon it at this time, and information could better be obtained in a more familiar manner by conversation with the City Engineer. Under such circumstances he thought it would be better to let it lie over. It would appear that the expense would be less than $600,000, and not $5,000,000 or $6,000,000, as intimated by the chairman of the committee last week.

Alderman Gibson believed they had covered almost all the parts of the question, and by further inquiries might be able to cover the others. It would appear that Telegraph Hill would be ample for the supply of South Boston, and the standpipes for the Highlands.

Alderman Brown inquired if the Beacon-Hill Reservoir was not sufficient for the supply of water to West Boston.

Mr. Davis replied that it was a poor means, but could be used. To Alderman Brown he replied that there was no lack of water when the reservoir was full enough for use.

Alderman Brown stated that he had been often troubled for water in the vicinity of the reservoir, and was informed that it was for lack of attachments, which would be provided in the spring.

Mr. Davis said the reservoir was now three-fourths full.

Alderman Gibson made some statements about a pump which he saw on the Connecticut River last fall, which ran itself without expense for fuel, and had been run four years without getting out of order.

Alderman Power hoped the motion to lie over would prevail. He had a plan which he would like to mature and he wished further time in which to consider this matter. The remarks of the Aldermen showed clearly that they were not competent at this time to act upon the subject.

The motion for the order to take its second reading at this time was lost, and the order was laid over.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Public Instruction, to whom was referred the request of the School Committee that the City Council would make certain alterations in the Harris Schoolhouse, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to furnish a master's office on the second floor of the Harris Schoolhouse, and make such changes in the location of the privies connected with said house as they deem expedient; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Alderman Gaffield, from the same committee, to whom was referred the request of the School Committee that the City Council would furnish tablets bearing the name of the Starr King Schoolhouse, and insert them in the walls of the building, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to procure suitable tablets bearing the name of the "Starr King Schoolhouse," and insert the same in the walls of said house; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

FIRST-ASSISTANT-ASSESSORS.

Alderman Brown, from the committee of the Board of Aldermen appointed to confer with a committee of the Common Council on the matter of difference between the two branches concerning the election of a First-Assistant-Assessor, made a report that the two committees, having conferred together, are unable to agree upon a candidate for the office.

The report was accepted, when the Board proceeded to a ballot, resulting as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	12
Necessary to a choice.....	7
James Dennie.....	10
Theophilus Burr.....	2

Mr. Dennie was declared to be again elected, in non-currence.

TRUSTEES OF MOUNT HOPE CEMETERY.

Alderman Emery, from the joint special committee appointed to nominate suitable candidates for Trustees of Mount Hope Cemetery, for two years, from the citizens at large, made a report, recommending the election of Joseph P. Paine and Samuel B. Hopkins. The report was accepted, when the Board proceeded to a ballot, resulting in the unanimous election of Messrs. Paine and Hopkins.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SALARIES.

The Joint Standing Committee on Salaries, to whom were recommended the orders establishing the salaries of the several city officers for the year beginning on the first day of April next, having carefully considered the subject, would respectfully recommend the passage of the orders in a new draft. The changes proposed in the salaries as first reported are as follows:

A reduction of two hundred dollars in the salary of the City Surveyor, so as to make the increase on the present salary three hundred dollars instead of five hundred.

An increase of three hundred dollars each per annum in the salaries of the Superintendent of Sewers, the Superintendent of Printing, the Superintendent of the Public Library, the Clerk of the Board of Street Commissioners and the Clerk of Committees.

An increase of thirteen hundred dollars per annum in the allowance for the care and superintendence of Federal-street Bridge, on account of the additional draw in the new bridge.

An increase in the pay of the Dorchester firemen to an amount equal to that paid in other sections of the city. It appears from the records of the Fire Department that the members of companies in Ward 16 are called upon for duty more frequently than those in Roxbury or East Boston.

The total increase over the amounts at present paid for salaries and clerk hire is $15,560, namely: For heads of departments and assistants, $6050; clerk hire, $4,860; Dorchester firemen, $4650.

The committee believe that the proposed increase is fully justified by the additional duties which the several departments will be called upon to perform during the ensuing year on account of the great fire, and also on account of the natural growth of the city.

Respectfully submitted.

Signed by Aldermen Stebbins and Gaffield, and Messrs. Wilbur, Loring and Risteen of the Council.

The Salary bill was considered, and the several sections were adopted until section one of the second order was reached, when Alderman Gibson inquired why so large an increase was made to the salary of the City Engineer.

It was replied that the salary was the same which was paid last year.

Alderman Power said the office of City Engineer was about as important as any in the city, and it had been shown to be very important. Mistakes might be made which would cost the city many thousands of dollars, and a neglect to devote the whole time and attention to the city would prove to be very injurious to the city's interests. It happened that he knew something about this matter, for last year, when Mr. Davis, the Engineer, was a candidate for the office, his competitor was Mr. Wilson, and they were both well qualified for the office. The salary was none too much, should it be filled by a man who was worthy and fully competent to fill the office.

Alderman Gibson inquired if it was necessary that the City Engineer should have the use of a horse and vehicle which could cost not less than $600 a year for the care of them?

Alderman Clark replied that others had the use of a horse and vehicle who had no more use for them, and the services of the engineer were well worth all that was paid for them. The city allowed the most competent engineer to leave here, and he was now having a salary of $10,000 a year. In the case of the present engineer, he did not seek the office, but the office sought him.

The salary of the City Surveyor [being under consideration, Alderman Gibson said as this was the first proposed increase, he should oppose any change from the salaries of last year, for if one was to be increased all others must be increased in the same proportion. The people do not expect it, and he was prepared to oppose any increase, for should there be increase in one of the heads of departments there must be in the others, and all the way down to the lowest-paid person in the employment of the city.

Alderman Clark replied that the salary of the City Surveyor was not increased, an allowance having been made for his services in past years for work on the Fort-Hill District. Now he is required to act as Secretary of the Committee on Streets, without any additional compensation. Mr. Davis was a very competent man, and the salary was not more than he was entitled to, and he believed he could get much better pay elsewhere.

Alderman Sayward objected to any cutting down of salaries, and if the gentleman believed that any heads of departments with which he was connected did not receive salary enough, he should move an amendment. He believed that officers should be paid enough to be able to lay up something, and not be turned out when they become old.

Alderman Gibson replied that it appeared that there was an increase of the salary, for there was an outside arrangement for the payment for extra services. If there was to be an increase of salaries, he could not see how they could stop short of increasing the pay of all persons connected with the City Government, for the laborer was entitled to pay enough to enable him to live as well as others.

Alderman Clark further stated that no compensation was to be made for extra services by the City Surveyor, so that his salary would amount to just what it did last year.

Alderman Gibson replied that although it was said they were done paying him for services on Fort Hill, he did not see why they might not pay him for services on the Suffolk-street District or somewhere else. We are now sending over to England to borrow money, and we are poor and not rich, for we have lost $18,000,000 worth of property, and are not flush. We should not increase salaries, but consult the interests of the taxpayers; for we have taken a contract to carry on the Government economically.

Alderman Gaffield stated that the officer was at the head of a department with which he was connected, and he believed he could get a much larger salary by leaving the City Hall, where he had been for twenty years. Instead of having but six men, as had been stated, the Surveyor had forty men under him. In looking over the proposed increase on the whole bill, it appeared to be but an increase of one-seventh of one per cent. That was but a small increase in the proportion of the increase of valuation of the city. He would propose that the Salary bill should be passed as a whole.

Alderman Brown moved as a compromise to make the salary $3500, believing that there should not be an increase of salaries to any extent, when the rate of taxation goes up from $11 50 to $14.

Alderman Clark denied that the city was poor, for although the city wished to borrow $5,000,000, it would be gladly taken up. He believed the future of the city would be such as it never was, and in five years we should rejoice that we had had a fire. The Alderman from Ward 1 had hardly been touched by the fire, and it might be a Godsend to him in the increased value of some materials. The city was not ruined and would not go to destruction, for the disaster was not half so bad as was that of 1837 or of 1857. The rate of taxation was not a great increase from $11 50 to 14, and he believed it would be less than $14 for 1000.

Alderman Power said he could see no reason in the objection that it would be an injustice if some salaries were raised and not others. Several gentlemen had been in office many years, and the city could not afford to lose their services. Allusion had been made to pay of sea captains. A plenty of captains could be found at $50 per month, but some captains would be worth $200 while others, equally as good seamen, would not be worth more than $50, because they could not make money. Some of the heads of departments had been here many years, at moderate salaries, and there were plenty of merchants who are paying $8000 to $10,000 in salaries to persons in their employment because it pays well to keep them.

There was a great difference between a captain and a common sailor, and good servants often made but poor masters. It should be the policy to encourage and keep those who are competent to fill offices. No doubt thousands of men could be found who would be willing to take the offices at lower salaries, but the affairs of the city have been conducted by honest men and not thieves, and they should have as much as they can command in other positions. Why they do not leave is well known, because those who were brought up here don't wish to start off and break up old associations, not knowing where they may go, even if they can do better.

It was not for the interest of the city to let faithful officers go. He did not believe either in the poverty of the city, and had no fear of taxation. The labor of the City Surveyor would now be greater than ever before, and a mistake by an incompetent person might easily be made which would cost $50,000 to $100,000. He did not feel ashamed to defend raising the salaries of some of the heads of departments, and would be willing to go before the people on the subject.

Alderman Gibson remarked upon the labors of the Chairman of the Board, and of other Aldermen, and of the responsibility which they incur, without compensation. Whereas if the heads of departments make mistakes, the taxpayers have to pay the bills, and they were here to help take the responsibility. The Board were required to act upon their best judgment just as the heads of departments do. He had seen a great many mistakes, mistakes made in paying, which cost the city thousands of dollars.

Alderman Power remarked that much greater mistakes would be made by fools in not knowing their business.

Alderman Gibson responded that all persons were liable to make mistakes.

Alderman Sayward said the Aldermen seemed to think they knew as much as the heads of departments do, yet they were very much dependent on their good judgment. When they had such experienced men they ought not to lose them.

Alderman Gaffield explained as the policy of the committee to add $300 to each of several heads of departments for the purpose of equalizing salaries.

Alderman Brown wished to know if it was first supposed the City Surveyor was worth $3800, why reduce his salary by this bill?

Alderman Gaffield replied that the committee at first asked for an increase of $500, but they did not wish to lose its passage and made a reduction. The changes proposed equalize the whole thing, making the whole happily equalized and compromised.

Alderman Brown said the committee should have stood to their guns if they believed a larger increase was demanded.

Alderman Gaffield remarked that it was better sometimes to stoop lower in order to jump higher the next time.

Alderman Power did not understand that any salaries were to be raised except those of officers well tried. He did not believe with the Alderman that the old ship was going to be a wreck, but if so he and the Alderman, who had had some experience in such matters, would be there to secure her.

Alderman Gibson did not believe they were in a condition to raise all salaries, for if so they would not get through before the 1st May.

Alderman Hulbert said he came into the Board as a new member, and he never was so agreeably disappointed as in finding the heads of departments men of such good habits and capacity. Their system, regularity, and laboring habits were remarkable, and it seemed to him that the increase of salaries as a whole was judicious. The committee considered the matter fully, and the total increase of salaries of heads of departments amounted to but the small sum of $6000, besides which there was $4800 for additional clerk hire, and $1600 increase on pay of firemen.

It was perfectly right and proper that they should discriminate between brain and muscle, for it would be a misfortune to lose some of the heads of departments. He was surprised that they could retain the services of some of these officers, many of whom had sums of from half a million to a million of dollars largely under their supervision, with a moderate compensation. As near as he could understand, not a breath of suspicion was entertained in relation to their capacity, experience and fitness, their integrity and good habits. It was not unreasonable that such men should be well paid, when those who are paid by the day should not have an increase, for of that class there are multitudes of applicants fully as competent as those now employed by the city. To keep such responsible men in their places, he believed it to be the best thing.

Alderman Gibson said the remarks might be very well, and no doubt the increase might be equitable and just, but as a general principle if an increase was to be made, the Chief of Police was as good an officer as any of them, and should also have an increase of his salary. So also should the Superintendent of Fire Alarms and Inspector of Buildings and the Superintendent of Ferries, whose duties were arduous and long continued. They could not expect to increase all the salaries pro rata. He did not doubt that should a vacancy occur in these offices of heads of departments, a hundred applicants would be made in a day, and one thousand in a week, and they would soon become familiar with the duties.

The motion of Alderman Brown was lost.

Alderman Gaffield moved the adoption of the Salary bill as a whole.

Alderman Brown inquired if the question was not on the adoption of the section relating to the salary of the City Surveyor.

The question was taken on the adoption of that question, which was carried by a vote of 8 to 4, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Hulbert, Power, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Brown, Cutter, Emery, Gibson.

Alderman Gaffield renewed his motion for the adoption of the bill as a whole.

Alderman Brown suggested that the Superintendent of Lamps should have an addition of $300 to his salary.

Alderman Clark inquired if it was necessary that the Dorchester firemen should be paid as high as other firemen in the city, for it might induce hard or ill feeling, and be a cause of complaint, if others get no more than they do.

Alderman Gaffield stated that it appeared the Dorchester firemen were called out oftener than were the firemen in East Boston or Roxbury, and the committee believed that it would be better as a whole that they should receive the same pay.

Alderman Sayward said it was hardly to be expected that objection would be made to this increase, and there could be no ill-feeling among firemen in relation to the matter.

Alderman Quincy said he had but to repeat the remarks he made on a former occasion, that it was necessary that there should be a uniform system of payment to secure efficiency, and while some might not have so hard a duty as others, as in the case of police officers, there was but little difference in the labor required of the different firemen, and they should be paid the same.

Alderman Gibson moved to add $300 to the salary of the Chief of Police.

Alderman Gaffield stated that the changes proposed in heads of departments were to increase those of $3300 to $3600; the increase to the Chief-of-Police would be above that sum. He believed they should pass it as it is, that it may pass the Council. He would suggest as an amendment to make it $3600.

The question was taken on increasing the salary to $3800, which was lost—2 to 10—as follows:

Yeas—Brown, Gibson.

Nays—Bigelow, Clark, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Hulbert, Power, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

Alderman Hulbert moved to fix the salary at $3600, the same as others which were raised. The motion was carried by a vote of 8 to 4, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Gaffield, Hulbert, Power, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Cutter, Emery, Gibson, Quincy.

Alderman Brown moved to amend section two, page eighteen, to make the pay of First Assistant-Assessors $8 a day, stating that their services were very important, and of more consequence than the salaries of many others which were raised.

Alderman Clark believed they paid the Assessors all they ought to, and it would be an unnecessary expenditure when there were so many applicants for the places. If it was the salaries of the Permanent Assessors, it might be another thing.

The amendment was lost—1 to 11—Alderman Brown alone voting for it.

Alderman Clark moved to increase the salary of the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department from $3300 to $3600, stating that no city had a more faithful man at the head of its Fire Department, and they would always have, and such responsible labors should be well paid.

Alderman Gaffield regretted the opening of the doors to a further increase of salaries, which would lead to others. The Committee on Salaries considered this very question, and they concluded that it was not important that it should be raised, and the Chief Engineer did not request it. No one did more to elect Mr. Damrell to his present office than he; and while there was an honest difference of opinion in the community in relation to his position, it would not be well in the face of that opinion to raise the salary.

Alderman Brown said the question in relation to the Chief-Engineer was not to ask for an increase of salary, but with him it was whether he should be retained in office or not. He should oppose any increase of salary, but did not object to its standing where it did. He should be surprised at the Chief's asking for an increase of salary.

Alderman Gibson said the increase had been commenced, and it was a question where it should stop. The salary of the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department should be larger than others, for it was an office of great responsibility, and he saved property that it might be taxed to pay other expenses. A man who goes into the service in that position would grow old in fifteen years. The office was worth $10,000 a year.

Alderman Sayward said he agreed that the Chief-Engineer should have an increase of salary, but it would be better at this time not to have the salary raised. If not able to lay up money in the office, he should be allowed an annuity to give him enough to live on the rest of his life.

Alderman Gibson further remarked upon the importance of an increase in this salary, for if other salaries were raised, it would be a stigma on those not raised, as to their competency. They should raise them all and serve them all alike.

Alderman Brown moved an adjournment, that they might confer with their constituents in relation to the increase of salaries.

Alderman Clark opposed adjournment, for there was much business to put in.

Alderman Brown moved to lay the Salary bill on the table.

Alderman Stebbins objected, because it was necessary to finish the Salary bill, which takes effect 1st of April.

The motion was lost—1 to 7.

Alderman Clark said he would not press this matter of the salary of the Chief-Engineer, and this was not the time for the discussion of the merits of that officer. The office when well filled should command a salary of $5000. In his opinion the duties of the office were most arduous, and for its responsibilities the services were not well paid. It was not the question who should be the officer, but what should be paid for the services. If not the best officer, when the subject comes up as to the capabilities of the present Chief-Engineer, he should be ready to show his hand.

Alderman Brown wished to know whether the fixing of the salary was not for the present incumbent of the office.

Alderman Clark replied that he had no right to ask the question. The present incumbent had been vilely slandered and traduced, and it was his opinion that he should have a salary of $5000 and be furnished with a club for use upon his traducers.

Alderman Gaffield said this was his fourth year in the City Government, and he had always voted for Mr. Damrell, yet if he was called upon to vote for an increase of salary he should say no, for Mr. Damrell had not asked for it.

Alderman Clark believed this office was as important as that of the Chief-of-Police, and should be as well paid.

Alderman Gibson believed it would be doing great injustice not to increase this salary when others were increased. It would seem as if the Government believed in the statements of his traducers. Without fear of contradiction, he contended that the office was as important as that of the Mayor or any other, and it was worth $10,000 to take charge of such a fire as that of November last. He supposed he might make mistakes, but he was active and energetic in the discharge of his duties.

Alderman Quincy said it might be construed as a vote of confidence to increase the salary. This was not the moment to increase the salary, and it appeared that it was not the wish of the Chief to have it increased. It was not the time under the circumstances to increase the salary.

Alderman Emery believed the duties of the office were worth as much as the city pays to others, and he could not see why they should not pay him as much.

The question was taken on Alderman Clark's motion, which was lost, by a vote of 2 to 10, Alderman Clark and Gibson alone voting for the amendment.

Alderman Clark moved to make the salary $3500. This he said was but due to that officer, taking into consideration the fact that the city never had any better and never would have. There had been a great outside pressure to put him down in the estimation of the public, and a certain person who seemed to have no other office than at the City Hall, and possessed but a small amount of brains, had been engaged in circulating a petition derogatory to the character and efficiency of the Chief Engineer.

Statements had been made to certain members of this Board by this person, who had heretofore made a good deal of trouble, and was now vilely slandering and traducing the Chief Engineer. He had given as a reason why he was in favor of him that he might get the votes of the Fire Department. He was in favor of the Chief Engineer, but did not favor the increase of the pay of the firemen a penny. So that the position where he stood was that he might get the vote of the engineer, and lose that of 400 or 500 firemen.

No city in the world had a better Chief Engineer than this city had, and no clearer record could be found than that of this officer in the city of Boston. No city was better protected from fires, and the department had always been managed with the best skill and judgment. It was because of the villifications of irresponsible persons that he believed the salary should be increased. As the city increases in size there must every year be an increase in engines, men and other means of putting out fires, but there never can be any better Chief Engineer of the department.

Alderman Gaffield repeated that he had always been a firm friend of Mr. Damrell, but he feared he might ask to be saved from his friends if much more was said by the Alderman. In this case he might remind the Alderman of what he said the other day, that ten Aldermen would not be likely to change their votes, and he believed they had better vote for the bill as a whole.

Alderman Power hoped the motion would not be pressed, because if refused it might be taken as an indication of wrong. There was no indication of feeling as to the fitness or competency of the present Chief Engineer, but in the public mind there was a great deal of feeling in regard to the late fire, and until that was settled it would be better to let the salary stand as it is. There were some who would oppose an increase on principle, but this may be taken as against him. It had better be left as it is. Any gentleman who is fit for the office should have a larger salary than the paltry sum which $200 additional would give.

Alderman Gibson believed the salary should be levelled up, and it will be an injury to the feelings of the Chief-Engineer not to have the salary increased. The opening of the question by increasing of salaries, as he told them, would require an increase clear down to the street sweeper, who earned his money honestly.

Alderman Power said this would not alter his opinion or feeling. He proposed to vote for Mr. Damrell if he could not find a better man, but he had not seen that man. The occasion which had caused this controversy would probably never occur again, but he should vote against the increase of the salary.

Alderman Clark said it was the salary of the Chief Engineer and not Mr. Damrell which was before them, for he might not be a candidate for the office. The remarks he made were with reference to the petition which was circulated against him. The salary, he understood, must be fixed for this year, and could not be altered.

Alderman Brown said he was committed to no man, and supposed from the remarks made that the salary was fixed for the present Chief-Engineer.

The question was taken on Alderman Clark's motion to make the salary $3500, which was lost, 2 to 10, Alderman Clark and Gibson voting yea, as before.

The question then recurred again upon the motion of Alderman Gaffield, to vote upon the bill as a whole.

Alderman Clark believed they should act upon each section separately and carefully.

Alderman Gibson moved to increase the salary of the Superintendent of Dover-street bridge to $1600, and gave as reason that he was obliged to employ extra help.

The motion was lost, 2 to 10, Aldermen Gibson and Hulbert voting yea.

Alderman Gaffield urged the taking of the question.

Alderman Power said there were one or two things he could not vote for in the bill, and what they do should be done in a proper manner.

Alderman Brown expressed sorrow to see the matter pressed, for each section should be considered.

Alderman Gaffield did not consider the matter to be unprecedented. The report was in the nature of a compromise, and such propositions were not unjust when other means fail in carrying out a measure.

Alderman Clark believed it would be unjust to pass the bill now unless they reconsidered the changes which had been made. Otherwise, it would be a reflection upon the Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department. He would move a reconsideration of the vote increasing the salary of the Chief of Police.

The motion was carried, when the question recurred upon the motion of Mr. Gaffield, to pass the order as a whole.

Alderman Brown moved to take up the bill and act upon it section by section. Lost.

The motion of Alderman Gaffield was carried, by a vote of 7 yeas to 5 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Hulbert, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Brown, Cutter, Emery, Gibson, Power.

PARKER HILL RESERVOIR.

The following communication was received from the Water Board:

CITY OF BOSTON, CITY HALL,
COCHITUATE WATER BOARD OFFICE.
March 26, 1873.

To the City Council—In view of the consumption of water in that section of the city known as the High-Service District, this board has been led to consider the ability and capacity of our present facilities to answer the present and probable future requirements.

The High-Service District includes Beacon Hill, Telegraph Hill (South Boston), and the more elevated lands in the Highlands and Ward 16.

There is a growing demand for water in all these localities, but more especially in Wards 14, 15 and 16; and the records at the pumping works show an increase of about fifty per cent. within the last twelve months.

The question of capacity and the consideration of the present and probable future wants have been submitted to the City Engineer, with a request that the subject receive his careful attention.

With this communication we submit the engineer's report, covering the whole subject, and to which we ask your consideration.

From the facts therein stated, it is evident that our facilities must be increased without delay, and to accomplish this, two plans are submitted—first, to add more engines and boilers; second, to establish a reservoir on Parker's Hill, Highland District.

After considering these plans, this board is of the opinion that the latter-named plan is the most desirable, and we recommend the building of a reservoir with a capacity of at least six million gallons.

The figures relating to the estimated cost of the undertaking (about $234,000) may be found in the engineer's report.

Legislative action will be necessary to enable the city to take the land required, and we suggest that immediate application be made to the Legislature now in session for such authority. The precautionary measures suggested in the engineer's report (see page eight) have been adopted by this board.

Respectfully submitted,

CHARLES H. ALLEN,

President of Cochituate Water Board.

The communication of the City Engineer says—

The districts included within the limits marked on the map for the high-service distributing system constitute more than one-third of the present area of the city.

They are, Beacon Hill in Boston proper, Telegraph Hill in South Boston, Parker's Hill, Fort Hill, Tommy's Rock and the Scaver-Hill territory in Roxbury, and the range of high lands which forms the greater portion of Dorchester; making in all an area of about thirty-five hundred acres.

A part of this area is not now supplied with water, and future annexations will greatly increase this area and it is said it is therefore evident that the high-service works will in a few years form one of the most important divisions of the entire system of water supply, and it is particularly desirable that their general character and outline shall be determined upon at as early a day as the necessary data for this purpose can be obtained, that whatever extensions are made in the existing system may, if possible, be so made that they will form parts of, or be available for, the system of the future. * * *

The water must be raised by machinery to an elevation that will give the requisite head upon the distributing pipes, and it is of great importance that at the point where this machinery is located there shall be a large store of water, that no interruption may occur to the supply in case the aqueduct or pipe which furnishes the water to the pumps is temporarily thrown out of use for examination, or repairs, or by accident to it.

This condition requires the eventual abandonment of the location of the engines which now supply the high service, for a new one either at the Chestnut Hill or the Brookline reservoir, or at some new reservoir that may be built, specially for the purpose, at a more favorable point. * * *

The existing high-service works were designed to supply a limited area only, and were not constructed upon a scale to meet the requirements of the large territory even now depending upon them, much less to provide for further extensions, due to annexation.

The pumping machinery consists of two engines, each of a capacity to pump 3,400,000 gallons in twenty-four hours, when making thirty-five revolutions per minute. These engines are supplied from a single line of pipes, sixteen inches in diameter, under a head which gives about thirty-three pounds of pressure upon the pump piston; and to enable the latter to work at the guaranteed speed, it was found necessary to connect the supply line with a large air chamber. The pump force mains, immediately after leaving the engine building, are united by a Y branch into a single line of pipes, sixteen inches in diameter, which leads to the stand-tower on Fort Hill, and is about 2500 feet long. On account of the connection of the engines, through the supply and force pipes, they are found to react one upon the other when working together, and it is not considered safe to thus use them at a speed which will give a much greater discharge of water than will one engine alone run at its safe maximum velocity.

The capacity of one of the engines is less than that of four steam fire engines, and larger ones for the diameter that has been proposed for the new pumps, to replace the old ones, is sixteen inches, which gives a capacity of sixty-two gallons per revolution, or 130,000 gallons per hour, when the engine is running at its guaranteed speed of thirty-five revolutions per minute.

The average maximum hourly consumption of each day, during the coming season, will not fall short of half of this amount, or say 65,000 gallons, and will much exceed it in the following years. If, in addition to this consumption, there be required a supply for six steam fire engines (which number the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department says should be provided for), each throwing 450 gallons per minute (the average amount), the delivery must be at the rate of 227,000 gallons per hour.

If the engine be erected, it should have a capacity to pump about five million gallons per day, that when in use it alone may furnish all the water required, both for extinguishing fires and for domestic supply. Owing to the comparatively small draught at night, such an engine would be larger than can now be conveniently used for keeping up the daily supply; but for the present it can be kept in readiness for service in emergencies, and, as the consumption increases, can be gradually brought into more constant use.

There are now two boilers in service, each rated at one hundred horse power, or of sufficient capacity to drive the new engine; nevertheless, a third boiler of somewhat greater power should be provided.

The arrangement proposed is, then, two small engines (the existing ones), each of a maximum capacity of about two and a half million gallons per day, and a new engine and boiler having a capacity of about five million gallons, and supply and force mains twenty-four inches in diameter.

The two small engines, when run together, or the large engine alone, will furnish any supply that is likely to be required from them within the next few years.

The chief objection to this plan is, that a large expenditure will be necessary for machinery, buildings, mains, etc., which probably will be thrown out of use at the end of a few years.

A reservoir can be built on Parker's Hill, at an elevation that will give sufficient head on the high service pipes, or with a water surface about two hundred feet above tide marsh level.

If this reservoir be connected with the stand tower on Fort Hill, it will be put in good communication with the high service distributing system, and will instantly respond to any demand for a sudden increase of supply.

The ratio between the average and maximum quantities of water pumped in an hour, during each month, has varied in the past year from 100-143 to 100-255, as shown in an accompanying table.

In the remarks made, it is said it follows that the building of a reservoir, besides insuring an ample supply of water for the extinguishment of fires, would, by virtually doubling the pumping capacity, be equivalent to the addition of a new engine having twice the power of each of the existing ones.

The office of such works in future will be to regulate the supply to Beacon Hill, Roxbury Highlands, and a portion of Dorchester.

Estimates are hereinafter given, first, for a new engine with its buildings and supply and force mains; second, for a new reservoir, designed to serve a temporary purpose, and having a capacity of 4,500,000 gallons; third, for a new reservoir, designed to form a part of the future high-service system, and having a capacity of about 6,000,000 gallons.

It will be noticed that the land damages are the most important items of the last two estimates, but it should be borne in mind that the value of this land is increasing from year to year, and that if not now taken for the purpose proposed it probably will be eventually.

In conclusion I would recommend that a new reservoir, having a capacity of at least six millions of gallons, be built on Parker's Hill, and connected with the stand tower by a twenty-four inch line of pipes, and would suggest that, until this work is completed, the following precautionary measures be taken:

First, to make such connections at the Beacon Hill and South Boston reservoirs as will permit of quickly putting them in communication with the high-service pipe mains.

Second, to keep these reservoirs well filled with water.

Third, to employ men familiar with the location of the gates and street mains, whose duty it shall be to attend every alarm of fire in the high-service districts, and who shall be given proper instructions, in reference to opening communication with the reservoirs, and to shutting off portions of the high-service area when the exigency of the case requires.

Referred to Committee on Water.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the report of committee and order for the Mayor to petition the Legislature for authority to purchase or otherwise take land for a reservoir on Parker's Hill, and authorizing the purchase or taking of such other lands as may be necessary to convey water to and from said reservoir, was taken up.

On motion of Alderman Clark, F. O. Prince, attorney for the owners of estates on Parker Hill, was permitted to make a statement in relation to the matter.

Mr. Prince made some remarks in which he stated that the heir presumptive had but a recent notice of this proposed taking of land, and requested him to appear in relation to it, but having little knowledge of it he wished the indulgence of the Board, by postponing its consideration.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the subject was referred to Monday next, at 4½ o'clock.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses, as follows: Winthrop Miller, to give dramatic exhibitions at Lyceum Hall, Ward 16, April 1. Accepted.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and hereby is authorized to transfer from the appropriation for Atlantic Avenue the sum of $50,000 to the appropriation for the Extension of South Market Street.

Orders to quit were passed, requiring Nancy Shove, George Crowninshield, Catharine H. Fancee and other persons to remove all obstructions over the line of Washington street, as widened by order of the Board of Street Commissioners, June 10, 1872, on or before 1st May next; requiring also the Metropolitan Railroad Company to remove all obstructions over the line of widening of Pyncheon street, on or before 1st May next.

Alderman Gaffield offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be and they are hereby requested to present to this Board for its action resolves and orders for the laying out as a public street, or way, the lot of land on the northerly side of Milk street, belonging to James Lawrence and others; also for the widening of Water street to sixty feet, between Congress and Devonshire streets, by taking land on the northerly side.

Alderman Gaffield moved that the order take its second reading, and urged as a reason that the question should be brought at once before the Common Council, so that the widening on this as well as on other large estates in the burnt district should be disposed of.

Alderman Clark said he was not prepared to act upon the subject now, for an estimate of the Street Commissioners had just been referred to the Committee on Streets. The matter had not been discussed, and it was not yet known whether the members of the Board were in favor of the measure or not. If he were a member of the Council he should vote against it without further consideration, and he hoped the question would not be pressed.

Alderman Gaffield said he had no disposition to press this question, yet it had been quite fully considered in the Committee on Streets, who stood in the matter six to two. When the subject was under consideration in the Council they were not willing to vote for the proposed widening of Water street, under the proposed estimate of cost, and the estimate of the Street Commissioners was now much less, being but $300,000. The only object he had in view was to help the matter a little. When it was first proposed it was hoped the Government would allow the streets to remain as now, for it was desirable, if possible, to save $300,000 or $400,000, and hoped also that the taking of the triangle of land on Congress and Milk streets would be sufficient.

It was the design of the Government to alter and finish the Post Office to make it the finest building in this country, and it was asked that the streets around it should be widened to sixty feet. The Mayor urged before the committee of Congress that Water street should remain as it is, but the committee reported against us. The question was had the Government asked too much? The Government had seen its property destroyed by fire in Portland and Chicago, and the flames were seen to lap over from the Simmons estate to the Post Office, causing considerable damage to it.

The question then was whether, with the prospect of the expenditure of $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 for the finest building in the country, the city is willing to widen Water street from forty to sixty feet. This he thought was not asking too much, for it is estimated that it will cost $100,000 to repair the injuries on the Post Office. In the measures to be adopted they should provide against any future calamity of a similar character.

It has been objected to that this measure has been dictated by Congress, and if so it may be a question whether the city shall dictate to Congress, or yield to it as the greater body. If not acted upon now it must be laid over to December when Congress comes together again, and the question may be settled as in a similar case in another city, where the conditions were not fulfilled, and the Government is putting up a brick building. If we do not wish to be dictated to, neither should we dictate, and it would be better for us to yield, since it will not cost more than $300,000.

The proposed improvement, it was urged, was no more than the citizens would authorize, in the future, if not at the present time. As it is, the Post Office building is but half a building, and it was designed at some future time to make an enlargement. It is necessary that it should be done that it may be an ornament to the city, and that the Post Office may be contained on one floor instead of two. He would not, however, press the question now, for the purpose of forcing it upon the Council, for he had too much respect for that branch to do so.

Alderman Brown inquired if it was understood that in the contemplated widening of Water street, the Post estate could be considered as in the burnt district, and could be taken without the passage of the order by a two-thirds vote.

Alderman Gaffield replied that the whole of the proposed widening was covered by the loan, as in connection with the burnt district, including widening, paving, etc. If the Simmons estate alone should be taken, it would involve payment of greater damages for that estate than the increased damages by the taking of the adjoining estate.

Alderman Power said if it was proposed to withdraw the motion for a second reading he had nothing to say at present, but if it was to be considered now he should oppose it.

Alderman Gaffield said he designed to withdraw the motion, and did so, when the order was laid over.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on County Accounts, to whom was referred the petition of A. F. Anderson for increase of salary of officers of the Municipal Court for the Southern District of Boston, made a report, recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the salaries of the officers designated to attend the sittings of the Justices of the Municipal Court for the Southern District to serve such processes, precepts and orders as may be committed to them, be fixed at the rate of $1500 per annum, said salaries to be charged to the appropriation for County Accounts.

Some discussion ensued as to whether the order had been in the hands of the Committee on Salaries, whether it was to go to the Council, and as to the present pay of the officers, etc.

Alderman Quincy stated that the labors of the officers was as great as those in the principal Municipal Court, and it was further stated that this Board had entire jurisdiction in the matter, chargeable to county accounts.

The order was passed.
Adjourned.

FIRST-ASSISTANT-ASSESSOR.

The certificate of the election of James Dennie as First-Assistant-Assessor, in place of A. R. Holden, was read.

Mr. Hall of Ward 10, from the Committee of the Common Council, appointed to confer with a committee of the Board of Aldermen, on the matter of difference between the two branches concerning the election of a First-Assistant-Assessor, made a report that they were unable to agree upon a candidate for the office. Accepted.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 stated that inasmuch as there was no probability of making any choice in this case, instead of passing the matter to and from the several boards, he would move to lay the election on the table.

The motion was carried.

The amendment to the order authorizing the sale by auction of a certain estate taken from C. M. Wheelwright, at the corner of Water and Broad streets, by adding to said order the words, "at not less than a minimum price therefor, to be previously fixed by Committee on Streets," was concurred in.

SALARY BILL.

The second report and orders on salaries of city officers for the year beginning April 1, 1873, (Printed City Doc. No. 48, 1873), were considered, and the several orders were read once.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 moved that the rules be suspended, for the passage of the several orders.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 stated that there appeared to be several changes in salaries, and unless good reasons were given he hoped the matter would lie over to give time for the examination of the Salary bill.

The motion for suspension of the rules was lost, and the orders were laid over.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following order was read a second time and passed:

Order authorizing the Committee on the Suffolk-street District to exercise the powers in reference to the settlement of the estates taken by the city, under the 308th chapter of the laws of 1867, that were conferred on the Committee on the Church-street District.

The following order was considered:

Order for the purchase, as a site for a primary schoolhouse, three lots of land on Marlborough street, containing 8064 square feet, and two lots adjoining the same, containing 5376 square feet, more or less, at not exceeding thirty-six thousand dollars; also an order for a loan of that sum, to be applied to the purchase of said site.

A remonstrance was presented from S. G. Palmer and others against the location of the schoolhouse as proposed, and for the reason that when a lot is selected it shall be for a grammar schoolhouse as well as for a primary schoolhouse.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 stated, as the views of the remonstrants, that the lot selected was not only not eligible, but was objectionable as being between a block but 112 feet in depth, and if set back twenty feet, would be too shallow; and would be lighted only from the front and back. Very near this location a corner lot can be had at nearly the same price, with light and air on three sides and with a passageway on the fourth. So much opposition was made to this lot that it was desirable that the order should be recommitted with instructions to make further investigation that a more available lot may be secured.

Mr. West of Ward 16 hoped the report would not be recommitted, for the Committee on Public Instruction gave a patient and careful attention to the subject, and were almost unanimous in their report that this lot was the most available one which could be had. The opposition apparently was not so much as to the necessity, which was admitted, as from other reasons. It was not that it was not available. The committee were aware of the other lot which was referred to, but they found this to be better for the purpose.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he knew nothing of the matter but what was told him. He had been informed by the Alderman living in that ward, this morning, that it was desirable to have the report recommitted. He shared in the views of his colleague, that if the lot did not suit the people in that vicinity it had better not be adopted, and if offensive to the neighborhood it would be better to wait until they want a schoolhouse.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6, of the committee, said he knew of no location more available. Last year the Committee on Public Instruction selected this lot for a schoolhouse, and nothing was done in relation to it. He had been over every foot of land in that section and was satisfied this was the most available lot. The other lot on the corner would be better, but could not be had to advantage without paying a much higher price for it. The people object to the location of a schoolhouse near them because it will cut off the light from their back yards, but if as urged in opposition, that a lot should be selected for a grammar schoolhouse, there would be much mere objection.

The schoolhouse is wanted for small children, and the objection is much of it from misapprehension that a large house is to be erected on the lot. It will be less obstruction to the light of their houses than is apprehended, designed to be but 60 by 80 feet. The corner lot is worth from $4 to $5 a foot, while the lot selected is but $2 62½, and if the offer is not taken up it will be lost. There will be nothing lost by making the purchase, even should it not be used for the purpose, for it may be sold at a profit of from $1000 to $2000.

It would be more expensive and uncertain to buy the corner lot than it would this one. At first, objection was made to having a schoolhouse by those in the immediate vicinity, who wished it somewhere else, but wherever it may be located, the same objection would be made. They all want a schoolhouse, but not too near them. In the purchase of the corner lot, which belongs to the State, there may be bidding against the city, for it must be sold by auction, and there is no certainty of getting the second lot. As to the objection that there is but a depth of one hundred and twelve feet, that applies to all the lots on the Back Bay. Those are the reasons against the purchase of the corner lot. The lot selected may not be the best, but they cannot get any better, except at an advanced price.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 wished to know if the schoolhouse was needed, and whether there was any crying necessity for it, for if not, as a member of the Committee on Finance, he knew they had no money to expend except from absolute necessity.

Mr. West replied, as to the necessity, that there were thirty-six children in one street, and accommodations were wanted for sixty in that vicinity. Some of the children were obliged to go two miles to school, and he should think there was an urgent necessity for a school.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said there was such a diversity of opinion in relation to the location among the members from Ward 6, that if he was compelled to vote now, he should vote against the order. He hoped, therefore, that the order would be recommitted.

Mr. Pickering said he wished to say as to the doubt about the corner lot being had, should it be sold auction it can be purchased, but he had no objection to the order being laid over, if desired.

Mr. Holmes did not doubt the lot on the corner could be bought, but in the purchase of two lots, if either should be purchased by any one else, it would kill the project. The Commissioner of Public Lands states that he cannot sell it in any other way than as two lots. If so, the corner lot may go at a great price, probably not less than $4, for a lot on the other side had been sold at nearly $5 a foot.

Mr. West stated that inasmuch as the refusal expires tonight, the purchase should be made, and there could be no loss. They should not lose the chance to purchase, for it would readily sell for $3 a foot.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 did not believe it would make a great deal of difference whether they purchased this lot or not, for land enough could be purchased at any time. His experience was that there should be as much light and air as there can be, and he hoped the report would be recommitted.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, as a member of the committee, urged immediate action, the refusal of the lot expiring today. Yesterday some of the remonstrants were heard, and it would be folly to recommit and lose the refusal of the purchase. If lost, it was problematical whether they could obtain it except at an advance of thirty to forty per cent.

The gentleman from Ward 6 on the committee ought to know which was the most available lot, for he had spent much time in investigating the subject. A large number of scholars are obliged to go from one to two miles to school, and the committee were unanimously of the opinion that it was the best to secure this lot. There would be much risk in buying the corner lot, for it may be run up to $6 or $8. As it was, the committee had done well to get the refusal of the selected lot at so low a price. Two or three meetings of the committee were held, and after they had passed upon it so unanimously it would be boys' play and foolish to send it back again. All the people in that vicinity want a schoolhouse, but somewhere else than near them, and wherever it may be located some one will object. It was the duty of the Council, under the circumstances, to act at once, and hold on to the proposition, for the lot may be sold at a profit tomorrow.

Mr. Perkins said he had been informed by a member of the Committee on Schoolhouses that they were opposed to this purchase, and wished to get a lot large enough for a grammar schoolhouse. If the Commissioner on Public Lands is unwilling to sell a lot large enough for a schoolhouse, he did not doubt that a bill could be got through the Legislature for such a sale; and if he makes any unnecessary difficulties, the Legislature would override him. He did not think the Legislature would be so foolish as to refuse such a request.

Mr. Pickering said he had no personal interest in the matter, the lot not being near him, and he had no children going to school. As to land, they have been making it all the time, and speculation was not so active but what the city could make a purchase, and should keep out of speculation. A lot should be selected further towards Tremont street.

Mr. Holmes said there was no doubt there was land enough, but it was not in the right place. Near the railroad, where plans were matured for filling, they were asking $3 per foot. If the gentleman would guaranty a bill to go through the Legislature, well and good, but the City Solicitor was of opinion that since the city held lands once for a schoolhouse on the Back Bay and sold them, no favor could be expected from the Legislature. So also the Berkeley-street difficulty would be in the way. The city was not a speculator, but, should this lot be purchased and not wanted, it would of necessity get back the price with interest, for Mr. Jewell had been offered $3 a foot. That would make a difference of $2000. There were no other lands so cheap in the neighborhood.

Mr. West further urged the passage of the order; for if not availed of now the offer could not be renewed short of a great advance.

Mr. Pickering stated that one of the remonstrants was one of the most urgent citizens in favor of a schoolhouse in that section.

Mr. Holmes believed this to be the best that could be done under the circumstances. There were sixty children to be provided for, and there was not a room to be had in the whole Back Bay for a school. Some of the children travel as far as Somerset street, and they cannot go but once a day.

The motion to recommit was carried.

THE BURRILL CLAIM.

The majority and minority reports on the Burrill Claim (printed City Doc. No. 46, 1873) came up by special assignment.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 moved to substitute the minority report for that of the majority.

In support of the motion he said he supposed that although the subject had been so thoroughly discussed, there were some who did not understand it, as it was the case with himself before he examined it. He then proceeded to state the circumstances attending the contract with Mr. Burrill for the purpose of filling the quota of the city of Boston, and in this he did it by obtaining naval credits, laboring and paying the expenses in securing the names of those who claimed to belong to Boston. He then went to Washington with a letter to the Provost-Marshal-General, but it was necessary to have an act passed to allow the credits. The dispute about the two lists were referred to, resulting in the allowance of the list of Mr. Burrill. As to the objection on account of public policy, the objection was not a good one, and if these men, as were said, belonged to Boston, it was necessary to prove that they did belong to this city, and if Mr. Burrill had not secured the proof a draft would have ensued. In the matter of alleged failure to secure the claim by courts, the suit was withdrawn voluntarily before the final decision, and this did not invalidate the claim. He believed there was an implied agreement should the suit be withdrawn, that a fair payment for services should be made.

But whether there was an agreement or not, the city should not refuse the payment of a just claim. The town of Brookline paid Mr. Burrill for credits secured to that town, in a similar manner, and there was no reason why this city should not be as just. As to the method of determining the question what should be paid to Mr. Burrill, the minority believed that its decision by a reference would be the most satisfactory one, because there had been no agreement arrived at through the Committee on Claims in the past, and there was no probability of doing so in future. Should, however, a report be accepted through the committee, Mr. Burrill would not be obliged to accept the award.

It may be, in the future, that a City Council will be willing to pay a very large sum, but under a reference

Mr. Burrill will be required to accept their decision, even though the decision should be not to give him anything. There can be no difficulty in trusting to the selections of three well-known citizens of respectability and standing, any more than in trusting a committee to make an award. If it should be said we cannot now afford to pay this claim, it is an answer that the city cannot afford to be other than just in paying all honorable claims. It is a stain upon the character of the city that this claim had been so long neglected, and this should no longer be suffered to remain upon us as a stigma.

Referring to the recent declination of money from abroad, in taking care of those who were sufferers by the fire, he believed it was equally incumbent upon us to pay this honest claim. This he believed to be a fair and just way of settling this claim, and, with that object in view, he hoped the report of the minority of the committee would be substituted for that of the majority.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said he agreed with the gentleman that there was a just and equitable claim, yet in view of the many reports on the subject he objected to going over the same ground again. As a result of the several reports, it had been simmered down to a sum of $40,000, as being a just amount to be paid.

Mr. Train of Ward 13 said he was a signer of the minority report, and although he did not wish to go over the ground which had been so fully discussed, there were some points which should be considered. The list of men was taken to Washington, brought back again, and in consequence of its being accepted the draft was stopped. Up to this time Mr. Burrill had been considered an honest man. To neglect longer to pay this claim, he deemed a dishonor to the city. As to the manner of arriving at the sum of $40,000, it was a mere matter of chance, and it would be a fairer and more just way to submit the matters to referees. He could not see how $40,000 had been arrived at, and he was not sure that so large an amount would be awarded as justly due for his services.

Mr. Boardman of Ward 14 said the question was simply between the acceptance of the majority and minority reports, and it was for the Council to decide which it should be. As it stands now, the Council is the Supreme Court, and the question is whether the Council should refer to others what they should themselves decide. There was no way in which an intelligible amount could be arrived at, but as he believed it to be a just claim, he did not think they should refer to others what they should decide themselves. He therefore opposed the substitution of the report of the minority for that of the majority.

Mr. Blackmar, speaking for the majority of the committee, said the case was submitted to them for decision, not whether they should report in favor of paying Mr. Burrill something, but whether they should accede to his petition to have the matter referred to arbitration. It was a serious question whether they had a right to delegate their authority in sending this to arbitration. As to the matter of services, it was a question whether it was in order to refer to them, here, the question being of a different character, whether they should refer to arbitration, or sit as a Committee of Claims in the settlement of it.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 asked if it was considered whether there would be any limitation in the sum if submitted to arbitration.

Mr. Blackmar replied that the question was considered fully and one of the committee stated that he would have signed the minority report provided the sum to be awarded was limited to $40,000.

Mr. Train said the claim of Mr. Burrill was thrown overboard in the consideration of the question, it being simply one which would best secure the object in making a settlement. He did not believe that the referees would consider the previous awards as having any weight with them, and he was not sure that so large a sum would be awarded by them.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 said he indressed much of what was said in relation to Mr. Burrill's having a good claim for payment for services, yet he could not agree to the taking of a new step for its settlement, without making some limit. He would move as an amendment, to add at the end of the report, a proviso that the sum awarded shall not exceed the amount of $40,000.

Mr. Brackett raised a question of order, whether the amendment could be entertained.

The Chair ruled the amendment to be in order.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 believed the amendment to be an improper one and a subterfuge, defeating the whole object of the report of the minority; for if a sum was to be fixed as a limit, he could not see any reason for submitting the question to arbitrators.

Mr. Dacey denied that there was any subterfuge, his object being to limit the amount to $40,000, yet if it should be found that nothing was due Mr. Burrill, the report would not require any payment.

Mr. Perkins raised the question whether they were not to determine the award in accordance with the act of the Legislature and the decision of the court.

Mr. Brackett replied that a reference would not confine the arbitrators to any specific amount. Should they believe that there was not a just claim for more than 10,000, then that amount would be awarded, but should it be $60,000, then there was no reason why that sum should not be paid. To fix a sum in the report, would make it certain that such a sum should be awarded. He believed arbitration to be the only fair way of settling the question.

Mr. Blackmar said Mr. Burrill did not ask this City Government to pay him anything, but to have his claim referred, and so long as he did not make a request for payment there was nothing to act upon except to vote to accede or deny his request. The City Council sit as arbitrators on claims, and they could not delegate that authority.

Mr. West stated that the City Council had determined heretofore that Mr. Burrill was entitled to $40,000. He hoped that the minority report would not be adopted.

The amendment was rejected, when the question was taken on the substitution of the report of the minority for that of the majority, which was lost.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved to lay the report on the table, which was refused.

The question recurring upon the acceptance of the report leave to withdraw—

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 said it was generally conceded that Mr. Burrill had a just claim, and he would propose as an amendment the adoption of an order to pay to Henry W. Paine, assignee of Charles Burrill, the sum of $40,000 in settlement of the claim.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 suggested as an amendment that the amount to be paid be taken from the Reserved Fund.

Mr. Flynn inquired whether there was anything left of the Reserved Fund.

Mr. West of Ward 16 replied that there was no money left of the Reserved Fund.

To a similar inquiry, it was replied that there was nothing left of the appropriation for Incidental Expenses.

Mr. Flynn said the statements made were reasons enough why the subject should be postponed to another week.

Mr. Blackmar remarked that the matter should be carefully considered, under instructions of the City Solicitor, to investigate the provisions of every name and nature, and he moved that the report be referred again to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. Harrington said he had no objection to the course proposed. The order offered by him was worded something after the order of last year which he found in the journal of the Council, and he hoped it would be referred.

Mr. Brackett did not object to the motion, and the report was recommitted.

The report of the Committee on Streets requesting an additional loan of $2,000,000 for street improvements in the burned district (City Doc. No. 52) was considered.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 made an inquiry as to the character of the report, it being signed merely by members of the Committee on Streets of the Board of Aldermen. He had never before seen anything so regardless entirely of the views of the committee on the part of this branch, and he would like to understand why it came here in this form.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 stated that the question of the rights of the committee on the part of this branch had been submitted to the City Solicitor for his opinion. The subject had, however, been before the Joint Committee, and he believed it should pass. The course of the committee had been in accordance with usage, but it had not been settled whether it was right.

Mr. West of Ward 16 stated that the report had been considered by the Committee on Finance, who believed it would be for the interest of the city to have it pass, and that the whole loan should be made at once.

Mr. Shaw said he did not object to the loan, or to making it. It had appeared, however, that he had struck an important matter, which had been considered as affecting the rights of the committee on the part of this branch. Such a report should receive the consideration of members of this branch as well as of the other. In old times, when there was no joint committee on streets, then the report from the Board of Aldermen was well enough. His attention was called to it as a singular production.

The report and order were passed.

The report of the Joint Special Committee on the Auditor's Estimates (printed City Doc. No. 45, 1873), was considered. The several items of appropriation were passed upon, and adopted, without amendment, and the orders appended to the report were passed, as follows:

An Order Relating to the Specific Appropriations for the Financial Year 1873-74.

It is hereby ordered by the City Council, That, to defray the expenditures of the city of Boston and the county of Suffolk, for the financial year which will commence with the first day of May, 1873, and ending with the last day of April, 1874, and pay the State tax of 1873, the following sums of money be, and the same are, hereby respectively appropriated for the objects and purposes as explained in the Auditor of Accounts' estimates (City Document No. 34, 1873), and in the applications of the various committees and boards contained and printed in said document.

And it is further ordered, That no money shall be expended, and no debts be incurred for any object or purpose, for which a specific appropriation is herein made, beyond the amount which is so specifically appropriated; provided, however, that any sums of money which may be subscribed or contributed by individuals to promote the objects of any of the following appropriations, and which form no part of the estimated income of the city, shall be strictly applied, according to the intention of the contributors, and shall be credited to such appropriations accordingly.

[The several items of appropriation are omitted, having been already published.]

An order laying a specific tax to defray the expenses of the city of Boston and the county of Suffolk for the financial year 1873-74; also to pay the State tax.

Ordered, That the sum of eight million six hundred and thirty-eight thousand and ninety-two dollars be raised on the polls and estates taxable in this city, according to law, to pay the current expenses of the city of Boston and the county of Suffolk during the financial year, which will commence with the first day of May, 1873, and end with the last day of April, 1874; also the tax assessed by the General Court of Massachusetts for the year 1873.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE MAYOR.

The following communication was laid before the Council:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL, ()
Boston, March 27, 1873.

To the Honorable the City Council: Gentlemen—I desire to call your attention to the necessity of furnishing additional assistance for the transaction of business in the Law Department of the Government, and the propriety of increasing the compensation of those now employed there.

At the present time there are three hundred and sixty cases before the courts to which the city is a party, and their number is likely to be considerably increased during the ensuing year. The questions submitted to the Solicitor by the two branches of the City Council, the various committees, the individual members and the heads of departments, average a considerable number daily; and many of them require an investigation of the facts as well as the law. A great deal of time is required in attendance upon committees and in consultation with city officers and parties having claims against the city.

The number of deeds, contracts and other documents drawn in the office is about one thousand yearly. The titles to all lands purchased by the city, and of all lands taken for laying out and widening streets, or which are affected by changes of grade, have to be examined.

During the session of the Legislature the whole time of one person connected with this department is required in preparing and explaining bills for which the city is a petitioner and in opposing adverse legislation.

Without entering more fully into the details of the work which devolves upon this department, it is evident that the present force is entirely inadequate to meet the demands made upon it, and I respectfully suggest that measures be taken as early as practicable to enlarge the force, and also to provide a more liberal compensation for the very valuable services rendered by the present head of the department and his assistants.

HENRY L. PIERCE,
Mayor.

Referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

John S. Dunlap, for extension of time on which to build on land on East Dedham street.

Ivory Bean, for extension of time on which to build on East Dedham street.

Severally referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Frank B. Brown of Hose Company No. 2 and others, members of the Fire Department, for an increase of pay. Ordered to be sent up.

A communication was presented by Mr. Mahan of Ward 5, from the Postmaster of this city, with reference to the widening of streets in the vicinity of the Post Office.

Mr. Mahan, in presenting the communication, moved that its reading be dispensed with, and that it be referred to the Committee on Streets, with authority to print.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5, wished to know the nature of the communication.

Mr. Mahan replied that the nature of it was an answer to the statements made in the public prints as to the expediency of purchasing the triangular piece of land on Congress and Milk streets, and the widening of Water street. It was not proper now to discuss the merits of the question, but as the Committee on Streets had the subject before them, it was proper that this communication of the postmaster should be referred to them, as every member of the committee had heard the other side.

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 moved that it be laid on the table and be printed.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 called for a reading of the communication, and a portion of it was read, when on motion of the same gentleman, the reading was suspended, and it was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of N. C. A. Preble and others, that compensation be allowed to Daniel W. Bugbee for injuries to his property from an alleged defect in Dorchester avenue, made a report recommending that the petitioners have leave to withdraw.

Mr. Blackmar stated that a report on a petition for a similar purpose had once been made and accepted, and there was no reason for a change in the matter.

The report was accepted.

The Chair presented a report of the Committee on Public Instruction, to whom was referred the request of the School Committee that the City Council would furnish the unoccupied room in the primary schoolhouse on Appleton street, for the use of the Normal School, recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to furnish the unoccupied room in the primary schoolhouse on Appleton street for the use of the Normal School; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

The order was read once.

ORDER PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Pickering of Ward 6, an order was passed to pay bills of certain persons connected directly or indirectly with the City Government for services rendered.

Adjourned to Friday, April 4, at 7½ o'clock.

CITY OF BOSTON.

The nomination of Edward M. Grant as driver, coming up—

Alderman Power moved that it be referred back, the nomination being an act of injustice, the person being a new member not in the department more than ten days, while the driver in charge since the old driver died was as good a man as there was in the department. The nomination was the greatest proof of the bad system of appointments, made by the Engineer of the Fire Department, and he hoped it would be referred back.

The Chair stated that the motion was not in order, the question being on confirmation.

On motion of Alderman Power, the nomination was laid over one week.

The motion was carried.

Alderman Gaffield moved that the Board non-concur and that the majority report of the committee be accepted, giving leave to the petitioner to withdraw.

In support of the motion, he said, the only question before the committee was that of referring the claim of Mr. Burrill to arbitration, with no reference whatever as to the amount to which he was entitled, and that was the only question properly to be acted upon.

The recommitment was non-concurred in, and the report of the majority was accepted.

The special assignment was taken up, the report of committee and order for the Mayor to petition the Legislature for authority to purchase or otherwise take land for a reservoir on Parker's Hill, and authorizing the purchase or taking of such other lands as may be necessary to convey water to and from said reservoir.

WIDENING OF CONGRESS STREET.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, to whom were referred the resolve and order passed by the Board of Street Commissioners, March 27, 1873, for the widening of Congress street on the easterly side, between Water street and State street, made a report that the City Council ought not to concur.

The question being upon the passage of the order, the Board unanimously non-concurred with the Street Commissioners.

WIDENING OF DEVONSHIRE STREET.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, to whom were referred the resolve and order of the Board of Street Commissioners for the widening of Devonshire street on the easterly side, between Franklin street and Milk street, at an estimated expense of $15,180, made a report recommending the passage of the resolve and order.

The report was accepted and the resolve and order were passed, in concurrence with the Board of Street Commissioners.

WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, to whom were referred the estimates of the Board of Street Commissioners in relation to the expense for laying out the parcel of land between Congress street, Milk street and Pearl street extended, and widening Water street, between Congress street and Devonshire street, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be and they are hereby requested to present to the City Council for its action resolves and orders for the laying out, as a public street or way, the lot of land on the northerly side of Milk street, between Congress street and Pearl street extended, also for the widening of Water street to sixty feet, between Congress and Devonshire street, by taking land on the northerly side.

JOHN T. CLARK,

For a majority of the committee.

The undersigned, members of the Committee on Streets, respectfully dissent from the foregoing recommendation of the majority.

In taking lands for laying out and widening streets, it must be made to appear that the public safety and convenience require the proposed alterations. In this case the Board of Street Commissioners have twice decided that the public safety and convenience did not require the widening of Water street, or the removal of the triangular parcel of land between Congress street and Pearl street extended.

The present Committee of the City Council on Streets were unanimous in the opinion that Congress street, east of the Post Office, should not be widened more than seventy feet. The action of the United States Government has not changed the responsibility of the City Council in any degree. If the public safety and convenience did not require the alterations before Congress acted in the matter, it certainly cannot be claimed that they are required now, and the City Government would only be stultifying itself by adopting the recommendation of the majority.

In the estimates of the expense for making these alterations, as submitted by the Board of Street Commissioners, March 27, the parcel of land between Bath street and Pearl street extended was entirely omitted, although covered by the order of the City Council calling for the estimates. This land should be included in order to show the whole expense of the proposed alterations.

The estimates for all damages to the Boston Post estate are placed at $118,000, but if the widening is made the proprietors will surrender the whole estate, involving an expense to the city of $400,000.

The land taken from the Simmons estate is estimated at $35 per square foot, but the trustees value the portion taken at $60 per square foot. The land taken from the Lawrence estate is valued at $21 per square foot by the commissioners, but the owners value it at $40, and the land taken from James Leeds on a valuation of $33 per square foot, is valued by the owners at $66 per square foot.

Taking these figures as a basis, we have a total expense of $765,991, for the alteration, exclusive of the cost of removing the parcel of land between Bath street and Pearl street.

For these reasons and others which the undersigned have not time to enumerate, they are of opinion that the order submitted by the majority ought not to pass.

For the minority.

JAMES J. FLYNN.
CYRUS A. PAGE.

The question being on suspending the rules for the second reading of the order—

Alderman Power expressed the hope that the rules would not be suspended, and that the order ought not to pass at all. As stated in the report of the minority of the committee, the public convenience and necessity did not require the widening of Water street, and as to the question of expense, if passed, the truth of the matter would make the expense nearly $1,000,000. Everybody must be aware that the owners of the property to be taken will not accept any such sum as is given in the report of the Street Commissioners. The design of the widening is simply to show off the Post Office building, and he could not see how any one could vote for such an order when they had opposed the extension of Washington street.

They had no more right to vote money to lay out a square to show off the Post Office building than they had to vote to lay out the ground around any other magnificent building which has been or might be put up to show off such building. If the United States Government considered the building to be of so much importance in preserving it from fire, he did not know of any other way than for it to go to the expense itself of protecting it. If so much money was to be expended for the protection of buildings, they should first protect our own buildings from fire. Let them spend the money for the removal of the Niles Block to protect the City Hall. Such an expenditure would be much more acceptable to the taxpayers of Boston than to spend so much money for the benefit of a Government building. Gentlemen had advocated economy in the refusal to widen streets to the extent of the burnt district, and he could not understand why this expenditure should be made, which the public necessity did not call for.

It must be apparent that the estimates of the Commissioners would not half cover the expense, and it would occasion the necessity of widening Devonshire street on the westerly side, between Water and Milk streets. Further, if the United States are sincere in wishing for more room for the Post Office, let them do it themselves, as they should do if they wish to show off the building. The city had no more right to spend money to show off this building than it had to show off other buildings. He hoped, then, that the rules would not be suspended.

Alderman Clark said the estimates made by the Street Commissioners for this matter were about $325,000; that was the estimate made by men whose duty it was to understand the value of property and make up their minds as to what property was worth, while the estimates which had been made by the minority of the committee were wholly fictitious. He then addressed the board as follows:

Mr. Chairman—The subject which claims our attention at the present time, and upon which we are called to express our approval or disapproval is one of no ordinary importance. It has been the source of more anxiety and has received more carefully the attention of the committee whose duty it has been to consider it, than everything else which has come before them in connection with the new order of streets in the burnt district. The committee have endeavored to do, and I believe have done, what they believed to be their duty, unbiased and without prejudice, looking only to the best interests of the city, present and future; for whatever may have answered for the Boston of the past, or even of the present, will not answer for the Boston of the future. The committee do not expect that their action will meet with the entire approval of the community—most likely not with the entire approval of the City Council.

It cannot be expected that in a project of such magnitude, where there exists such a diversity of interests—where private property must be taken, and a large expenditure incurred by the city—that all will be of the same opinion. But I do believe that the great majority of the community will approve and sustain the action of the committee and will be sadly disappointed if the City Council does not give the opportunity of securing this great improvement. I for one, sir, should have been most happy could we have seen our way clear to have recommended the saving of this additional expenditure to the city and left untouched the property of those citizens who so earnestly desire it, and for whom I entertain sentiments of the highest respect; for, sir, I am well aware that it is a matter of no small consequence to one of the parties, at least, one who must be disturbed if the order is adopted. Having but recently completed their building, built expressly for their business at great cost—centrally located, perfect in all its parts for the printing and distribution of one of the best business newspapers of the city, and the best Democratic political newspaper of the country, it is not surprising that they should take strong grounds in opposition to a measure which will so seriously interfere with them, and for which they honestly believe there is no immediate necessity. If we, however, differ with them, and believe that they should yield to a great public improvement, we should deal with them liberally for the damages which we force upon them.

I have had serious doubt in regard to this matter. I have been disposed to believe that the same end would be attained whether we were to widen Water street or not; that if the United States required the room they would carry the Post Office to Congress street, if we refused to accede to their requirements. But, sir, I am informed upon good authority that there is no possible chance of any change in the conditions of the appropriations, and that if we wish to improve the opportunity of having built for us the most magnificent post office in the country, one that will be an ornament to the city and commensurate with the growth and increase of its business, we must be ready to make that small contribution as our part of the expenditure. I presume, sir, that if we were to erect a new city hall or a new court house we should not be willing to erect it upon streets not more than forty feet wide. It would not be good policy for reasons too numerous to mention. We should not entertain the idea for a moment, and we cannot expect the United States Government to do what we as a municipal government would consider bad policy.

I am, therefore, fully convinced that it is our duty to comply with the requirements of the Government, and in so doing make sure of having built for us the finest post office of any city in the Union; large enough for the present, but which I hope we shall all live long enough to see wholly inadequate to the business of Boston; for, sir, the business of Boston is so rapidly increasing that I expect to see it double within the next five years. Our commerce is increasing more rapidly than the most sanguine could anticipate. I have predicted that if the railroads would give us sufficient elevator facilities that we would have a steamer a day leave for Europe within ten years, but it seems now that we may expect this to take place possibly within the present year. Should the British Provinces be annexed, and as I most earnestly desire, we will see within twenty years from this date Boston with a population of a million inhabitants and the most flourishing city in America, for Boston above all other cities in the Union is the one which will reap the greatest benefit from annexation.

Let us, then, as we legislate for the present, not be unmindful of the requirements of the future, and so govern our actions in the administration of the affairs of the city that we shall take pride in remembering that we had the privilege of helping forward this improvement which will be an honor not only to Boston, but to all New England. It is one of the most important measures which has come before us this year. It is one which the whole city is interested in today, and which the whole city for years to come will take a deep and abiding interest in. It is the only condition upon which we can make sure to procure this magnificent building to the city. I think the showing that has been made by the postmaster is a fair one. It is unanswerable. There is no doubt that his statements are correct or else they would be denied. Now, if the business of the Post Office has increased as represented by him, the Post Office at the time it is completed will be too small, even now for the present requirements. And if, as I said before, we desire to have this great improvement carried out, this is the only way in which we can obtain it.

It may be possible that the Commissioners have made their estimate too low, it may be that it may cost $50,000 or perhaps $75,000 above the estimate. But suppose it cost half a million; it is nothing to be compared with what New York has contributed for their Post Office built for the city of New York. They have got land there worth two millions, and have given up part of one of the principal parks of the city. St. Louis has done the same; so has Chicago. We cannot expect the United States Government to do what we ourselves would refuse to do. If we were to build a new city hall we would not build it upon streets forty feet wide. The Alderman says it is our duty to remove the buildings from close proximity to City Hall. I agree with him. It is our duty and it is under contemplation to remove those buildings below and widen School street, and in that way perhaps save this building from a serious conflagration. I trust the order will pass, and receive our sanction this afternoon, and that we shall show to the citizens that this government are bound to do everything in their power to promote the present and future growth of the city.

Alderman Power said he had hoped to hear some fair reason for this large expenditure, but the argument of the Alderman had very little argument about it. He did not know anything about the probability of the annexation of the British provinces or of Ireland or any other country in connection with this matter, but if the United States Government wishes for more room for its business, they should do as the city does for its business or any other party does. If the business of the Government is large, it should furnish proper facilities to do it. They could well afford to give Boston a fine building, for very little of its money had been spent here. As to a comparison between Boston and New York, it is fortunate that New York had some funds to put to a good use, for very little of it had been disposed of in that way.

But that had nothing to do with the question which they were discussing, which was as to the public necessity or convenience. It was not either as to cutting off of the Boston Post building, or whether that was a good Democratic paper or not. He did not care whether the Boston Post was a good or poor paper, for it was the public interest we were to consider. As to any necessity he failed to see it, and there were plenty of wants for the money which the widening would cost. The widening of Washington street was much more desirable than this measure, and there was no reason in the world why they should expend money for embellishing or beautifying the Government buildings or for laying out parks for embellishment of any one's property than their own. If we have anything to spare, we should use it for our own first.

Alderman Gaffield said the reasons in favor of the report had been so well given by the chairman of the committee that there was no need of his saying much. The gentleman who had just spoken speaks of the estimates of the minority of the committee, which, as stated by the chairman, were entirely fictitious. They had three competent men as Street Commissioners, who know how to make estimates, and he believed the cost would not exceed their estimates by a great amount. He would ask, if they were supposed to take estimates of experienced men, like the Commissioners, or those of the owners of estates. As an instance in point, he would cite a case where parties estimated their land, which was taken, to be worth $40,000, but instead of getting that sum, they left it to a jury, and got but $18,000. If they applied the same rule in this case, and the owners asked too much, the sum might be reduced to less than the estimate of the Commissioners.

It was a matter of regret that they were obliged to interfere with the property of private individuals. He had great respect for the parties interested in this case, especially for the senior editor of the Post, whom he had known from his boyhood. Yet public improvements must be made, and the property of individuals interfered with, but when they did take such property a liberal price was always paid for land taken for street widenings. That he could test from his own experience. Owners of land always ask a high price for land taken, for that was the nation of Yankees, to ask more than they expect to get. If they do not get enough, they can have their grievances heard and, as a last resort, get more in another place. The widening of this street was not to show off the Post Office, as had been stated, but had been put in an unanswerable way by the Postmaster. If asked why not have had this done years ago, he had asked the same question, and the answer was that we had not had the experience which the great fires in Portland, Chicago and Boston had since given them, that streets of forty feet were not wide enough.

If we have made a mistake heretofore, shall we make it again? The street should be sixty feet in width for protection against fire, and after the Mayor had been before the committee of Congress to get the best terms, they voted unanimously in favor of the conditions for the widening of all the streets to sixty feet in the vicinity of the Post office. The question then was whether the Government should yield to us or we should yield to the Government, and it would be to their shame and everlasting sorrow if they did not vote to carry out the request of the General Government. It was not a matter of showing off the building, but one of safety. If asked why we did not widen on Devonshire street, it was our answer that it was a mistake that it was not widened when it could have been, and some time the Government may remedy it, and the building on that side may be moved back.

It was urged also that the Government should pay the expense of this widening, and he had no doubt they would do so. When School street shall be widened, as it must before many years, we have the assurance that the Government will pay for the removal of the buildings between Water street and Spring lane. The United States will stand a high betterment, and the Government will do liberal things for us if we do liberal things for them. He hoped, therefore, that the order would pass by a large vote, if not unanimously.

Alderman Power said it was all very well to say what the Government might or should do, but there could be no doubt what they will do if the city stands firm. It was objected that the owners of property have poor judgments as to the value of what is their own, but who should know the value of property better than the owners? If a piece of property rented for $10,000, it ought to be worth $100,000. The Post proprietors had a claim against the city when the building was put up which could have been settled for $1500, but it was not, and it was left out, and an award was recently made at $10,000 or $11,000. The judgment of that committee, at least, was not very correct. The estimates of the owners are to be taken, for at the estimates of the Commissioners of $20 or $30 a foot, a lot of 5000 or 6000 feet of land alone cannot be bought. The estimates of the members of the committee are therefore much nearer correct than those of the Commissioners. The cost would be nearly a million of dollars, and he could not see how any gentleman could advocate it.

Alderman Clark said the estimates of the minority of the committee contemplated the abandonment of the entire Post estate, at a cost of $400,000. If there should be such an abandonment, the city would take what they wanted and would have the rest to sell, which would much reduce the estimated cost. In regard to the question whether the United States Government would carry out the work of extending the Post Office as it should be, whether the city widened Water street, or removed the triangular piece of land between Congress and Milk streets, it was very doubtful whether it would be done. Unless this order was passed, who would buy this land for the extension or take care of it? It would be utterly impossible to get the extension in any other way. In looking at the Post Office as it is injured by the fire, it is not right to complete it with streets but forty feet wide. It would be a great mistake not to widen the street. The City Council had passed the resolve and order to widen Milk street to sixty feet, voluntarily, and to widen Congress street opposite the Post Office to seventy feet, thus recognizing the fact that there should be wide streets around the Post Office. It was not contemplated widening Water street, because in a few years the triangular piece of land between Water street and Spring lane would be removed. Congress had thought differently, and he was not satisfied that it was not for the best. When it was removed, they have the assurance that something would be paid towards it—how much he did not know, but if not the whole the Government would pay liberally toward it.

Alderman Gaffield referred to the estimates of the Commissioners, not $20 or $30 as stated, but $35 or $40, which it was assessed for, and remarked upon these prices as liberal, for whenever the city takes land, they are always told that the price estimated is twenty-five or fifty per cent. more than it is taxed for.

Alderman Gibson said he had never supposed he should have anything to say upon the subject, for he had been looking over the amount of money which had been expended for street improvements and thought it was enough. He had, however, been down several times to look this matter over, and had been importuned on both sides, but he could come to no other conclusion than that Water street should be widened, and that in no other way would they ever get a better value for the money expended than in this way. No one regretted more than he did the expenditure of so much money, but an expenditure of $4,000,000 would be of great advantage to the city, a help to mechanics and to everybody. Congress street was to be a great line of travel, and this place about the Post Office would virtually be the exchange for New England, if the increase should be in future but half as fast as in the past.

As the great loading place for merchants and mechanics its wide streets would be sought after. Court street was now so crowded with mechanics that it is almost impossible to get through it, but in two years the entire Exchange would be near the Post Office, for Water street would be kept clear of teams. Nine out of ten business men would come to the same conclusion that this widening should take place. We are suffering for the acts of our ancestors to the amount of millions of dollars for their defects, and we should learn from this, that the same hereafter shall not be said of us. Forty feet for the width of the street was in many respects a disadvantage, the snow remaining on the ground until carted off, on account of the high buildings which prevent the sun from melting it. He should be happy to vote for the order, but did not believe at first that he should.

Alderman Power said the Alderman who had just spoken was the last man he should have supposed would dare favor this measure. If those for whom he was providing, fifty years hence, were to pay the taxes for this expenditure, there might be some justice in his argument, but if they were to build up the city for fifty years to come and pay the taxes, the great increase of debt and taxes would drive many more to Nahant. When the widening of Washington street was up, a few days since, it was urged by that alderman that it would not be done in twenty years, and he could not see how he could now go for this piece of extravagance. He could not see why Congress should expect us to build a Post Office, for it is the interest of the Government to get a suitable place for a Post Office and see that it is protected from fire. He believed the Government would do so if we stand by our rights. If Congress would but take example from Boston, it would be better for the country, and if we stand up for our rights we shall get them.

Alderman Gibson said he would like to have the matter of widening Water street run for three years, or until such time as may be required, to complete the Post Office building; so that it would not be necessary to cut of the Boston Post building short of that time.

Alderman Power said he did not know or care about the Post or anybody connected with it. He did not care and had little regard for what was said about the paper. The question was as to the public interest or necessity for the widening, and not whether the Post or any other paper was affected by the widening. The widening was not so much demanded as in some other localities, and there was nobody particularly interested in it as a public necessity.

Alderman Gibson repeated that he would not require the widening if it could be kept until the Post Office was finished.

Alderman Gaffield stated that they were obliged to take in two years all lands laid out for widening streets. He had no doubt the Commissioners would allow all the leniency possible in this case.

The motion for the suspension of the rules was carried, and the second reading was ordered.

The order was passed by a vote of 9 to 3, as follows:

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

APRIL 4, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at 7½ o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

A call of the roll showed a quorum of members present, as follows:

Abbott, Adams, Blackmar, Bleiler, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Dacey, Darrow, Davis, Dean, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Flynn, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Jones, Lamb, McCue, McKenney, Page, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Shaw, Thacher, Train, Upham, Warren, West, Weston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The petition of Ann E. Chessman, Sidney Fisher, Lieutenant J. P. Haney, James O. Young, Edward G. Morse and others, Thomas Keyes, Conrad Decher, Owen Nawn, and the remonstrance of Andrew T. Hall and others, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The communication from the Water Board in regard to high-service district (City Document No. 38, 1873) was ordered to be placed on file.

The communication from Street Commissioners substituting for that part of the estimate which relates to cost of laying out as a street the triangular piece of land bounded by the proposed widening of Congress street, and extension of Pearl street and Milk street, an estimate of the probable expense of all the property surrendered by Bath, Congress and Milk streets, as the lines now exist, coming up—

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 moved that it be placed on file.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved that it be referred to the Committee on Streets.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he never understood that it was proposed to take this piece of land, and the Committee on Streets had by their action concluded that it was not necessary or desirable to take the land.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said he was not to blame that the Street Commissioners had not considered the matter, but he wanted it thoroughly understood why this lot was proposed to be taken, and why no estimates had been made.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said that the reason why the Street Commissioners did not send in an estimate was that it was a part of the extension of Pearl street. If this is for the purpose of delaying the action in the matter he was opposed to it.

Mr. Flynn stated that the committee did not know when this estimate was made that this small piece of land was omitted from that estimate. The order was passed by both branches and the Street Commissioners, and the majority of the Committee on Streets failed to see the purport of the order offered by the minority.

Mr. Perkins was not opposed to the reference to the committee, but he wished to have it made clear whether or not it was actually required for street widening.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 thought it a matter of some importance as a principle, at least, and could not see why any gentleman should oppose its reference.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16, speaking as a member of the committee, stated that they did not consider it a matter of very great importance at the time they had it under consideration.

After some further debate the matter was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The following orders were severally read once:

Order authorizing such repairs and supplies of furniture as may be needed for the Court House and Probate Building; and the fitting and furnishing of the new addition to said building, at a cost not exceeding $10,000.

Report from Committee on Streets, recommending the passage of the resolve and order for widening Devonshire street, between Franklin and Milk streets, at an estimated cost of $15,180.

Report and order authorizing a loan of $500,000, to be expended in furnishing a supply of pure water from Sudbury River.

Order to pay Azel Bowditch $150, for additional land damages on Blue-Hill avenue.

Order to pay Josiah and Edmund Quincy, executors, etc., $55,200, for land damages caused by the extension of South Market street.

Order to pay Josiah and Edmund Quincy, executors, etc., $3549, for Atlantic-avenue land damages.

Order to pay Joseph G. Russell $39,500, for Congress-street damages.

DIRECTORS OF EAST BOSTON FERRIES.

The report nominating Daniel D. Kelly and Charles Stanwood as Directors at Large of the East Boston Ferries was accepted, and the certificate of election of Charles Stanwood and William F. Brooks as directors was read.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 moved a suspension of the rules, for an election at this time.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 opposed the motion, stating that it was desirable to have men of experience and ability on that board, and it was believed that the services of Mr. Kelly could not be dispensed with, he being one of the best they had ever had. By postponement they will have further time for reconsideration, with a better result.

Mr. Wilbur withdrew the motion, which was renewed by Mr. Flynn of Ward 7. In doing so he said he did not desire to go into a discussion of the merits of the candidates, which he could do if necessary.

Mr. Pease said he had no wish to go into the merits of the candidates, but desired to state that it was the unanimous opinion of the committee that Messrs. Kelly and Stanwood should be elected.

The Chair stated that they were liable to establish a wrong precedent in the action proposed.

Mr. Flynn withdrew his motion, stating that the people of South Boston could as rightly claim the election of Directors of Public Institutions as could the people of East Boston all the Directors of the Ferries.

The following reports were accepted and orders were passed, in concurrence:

Report in favor of passage of the order authorizing a transfer of $50,000 from the appropriation for Atlantic Avenue to the appropriation for Extension of South Market Street, and passage of said order.

Report recommending the passage of the order requesting the Mayor to petition for authority for the city to purchase or take lands on Parker Hill for a water reservoir, and such other lands as may be necessary to convey water to and from the same, and passage of said order.

The non-concurrence in the recommitment of the majority report on the Burrill Claim (City Doc. No. 46), with instructions to report an order for payment of said claim coming up—

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 moved that the Council recede from its action and concur with the Board of Aldermen in the acceptance of the report, when Mr. Burrill could present a petition for a payment of his claim, which would properly come up for action.

The Council receded and concurred with the Board of Aldermen, in giving to the petitioner leave to withdraw.

WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

Report and order requesting Street Commissioners to present resolves and order for laying out as a street the lot of land on the northerly side of Milk street, between Congress street and Pearl street extended; also for widening Water street to sixty feet between Congress and Devonshire streets, and a minority report dissenting therefrom, and expressing the opinion that said order ought not to pass, came up for consideration.

Pending the passage of the order, Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 remarked that the majority of the committee stood just where they did at the time of the last meeting, and thought this measure should be adopted. They believed that the public interest demanded that the Post Office should be extended, and for that purpose they were willing to recommend the passage of an order for widening the streets opposite the Post Office, and it was their opinion that it would not cost more than the commissioners had estimated. The reasons for the recommendations were the same that had been urged before, and the whole subject had been so thoroughly gone over in the communication of the Postmaster that he did not think it necessary to take up time in discussing it. There was one or two points in the report of the minority on which he wished to say a few words. The minority said that "in taking lands for laying out and widening streets it must be made to appear that the public safety and convenience required the proposed alterations. In this case the Board of Street Commissioners have twice decided that the public safety and convenience did not require the widening of Water street or the removal of the triangular parcel of land between Congress street and Pearl street extended." He was authorized by the chairman of the Board of Street Commissioners to say that this statement of the minority was not in accordance with the facts of the case. They had never decided any such thing. What they had done was to say to the Inspector of Buildings that, so far as they were concerned, they should not suggest any improvements, and that he might give parties their lines to build upon. With respect to the action of the City Council, he said that during the existence of the last City Government no action was taken on the widening of Water street. He had looked over the record of the Committee on Streets, and could not find that the committee had ever passed upon the matter. He had seen an article in the newspapers that the Street Commissioners had given notice to the Inspector of Buildings that the lines might be given, but an order was introduced into the Council, which was passed, directing him not to give any lines on Water street until authorized by the City Council or by the Joint Standing Committee on Streets.

At that time, in January, no action had been taken by the United States Government in reference to the extension of the Post Office, so that the matter had not been considered. As far as these bugbears of the adjudication by the Street Commissioners or of the City Council or the Committee on Streets were concerned there was nothing which interfered with what they wanted to do. In point of fact he did not know but that they might adjudicate fifty times that the public safety and convenience did not require it, and then change their minds. Adjudication was nothing but an opinion put in legal form, and for one he was ready, if it were necessary, to adjudicate at the present time that the safety and convenience of the inhabitants did require that Water street should be widened between Devonshire and Congress streets opposite the Post Office. He thought, moreover, that they made a little mistake in not considering that the United States Government here in Boston, which own so much property and do so much business, that what is the public convenience was not the convenience of the United States Government.

He thought it would be very injudicious in Boston to cast out of consideration the convenience of that powerful part of the public which is now ready to lavish its millions on its building between Congress and Devonshire streets. For one, he was willing to say that the convenience of the United States was a part of the public convenience; and in such case they had the full right to adjudicate for such an important interest. The next statement of the minority of the committee is that the estimates of the Street Commissioners are wrong. Well, they supposed that they would say so, for it was necessary to make out their case.

They say, "The estimates for all damages to the Boston Post estate are placed at $118,000, but if the widening is made the proprietors will surrender the whole estate, involving an expense to the city of $400,000." In other words, that the Post proprietors think their whole property of seventy feet on Devonshire street is worth $400,000, and if they surrender their estate, as they undoubtedly have the right to do, and as they have already notified the City Government they intend to do if the widening is carried out, then the Government would have to sell the remainder after the widening, and not get anything for it. He thought a great many people would be willing to say that the Post estate on this wide street close to the Post Office, as it would be extended over the whole space, would be nearly as valuable as before. So out of the $765,991 which the minority put down as the cost of the improvement, there might be a very liberal deduction made.

Those were the only points that he wished to notice in that report. He did not know where they could get better estimates than from the Street Commissioners. He would rather have the estimates from them than from the interested parties who owned the property. He thought that when it was all over they would find that the Commissioners were about right in their estimates. It had been said that this was wholly the dictation of Mr. Burt. He had no doubt that Mr. Burt originally suggested the idea, but he thought it was a very good idea. He thought, with Alderman Clark, that they should not be willing to build any building of their own with such a narrow street; and even if it were dictation, they had it from the communication that it was no more than had been practised against many other cities in the Union.

He did not think it was safe, under the circumstances, for the United States Government to go ahead without having it in the agreement. They had seen the effect of such action in the case of Devonshire street in 1869, when one of the owners of the property was a member of the Committee on Streets, and all agreements failed. In the light of past experience it was only common sense for them to insist upon this agreement before they went any further. He thought the city of Boston had been in the past very much to blame, and would like for one to set her right again.

A remonstrance from the trustees of the Simmons estate, protesting against the project, was presented. The communication, after a vindication of the motives of the remonstrants, went on to state that the proposed widening would be an infringement of private rights, and characterizing the project as an act tending to destroy confidence in the security of private property, and claiming that it was the duty of the United States Government, instead of requiring the city of Boston to assume the expense of this improvement to take the whole cost from the National Treasury, closing as follows:

"It is in view of these facts, and not of the mistatements and perversions by the Postmaster, that his attack upon the memory of John Simmons and upon his trustees is to be judged. It is the clear duty of the trustees to defend, if possible, this fine estate on Water street from being mutilated. Every foot of it is devoted for all time to aid thousands of Boston girls struggling to gain an independent livelihood. It is devoted to a purpose quite as important to the public as the showing off of an imaginary Post-Office building. We are bound to protect this property to the last point possible, and we shall not be deterred by any aspersions or personal abuse."

The reading of the communication was commenced by the Chair, when Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 rose to a point of order, that the communication ought not to be read, inasmuch as it did not come before them at the proper time, but the President decided that the reading was in order, and it was continued.

Subsequently Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved that the further reading of the communication be dispensed with, and the subject specially assigned for next Thursday evening at 8:30.

Mr. Powers moved that the communication be printed.

Discussion ensued, a division of the original question was called for by Mr. Shaw, and after the passage of the motion dispensing with the further reading of the communication, Mr. Flynn withdrew the motion to specially assign.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 then spoke as follows: I don't propose to occupy the attention of the Council for a great length of time, but will rather call to notice what the real question before this body is. I think that after the very able, and, in my judgment, interesting letter from the Postmaster, General Burt. It is well for us to look at the question, the narrow question that is presented to us for our action. There are in that communication a great many matters that have no special significance, however interesting they may be. They have no relation to the action of the members of this board. Of course the fact that large post offices are found necessary in the large cities of the Union requires the United States Government to build post offices sufficient to enable the Government to carry on its business, and the carrying on of its business is the duty of the Government.

It is not the duty of any city to contribute of its money to enable the Federal Government to carry on its business. That is the duty of the Federal Government, and it is a matter with which we have nothing to do. Of course in the approaches to any great Government building, so far as the public convenience and necessity of the people are concerned, so far as that convenience and facility are made necessary to the people, it remains for the city to lay out its streets in such a manner as to promote the interests of the people of the city. But when you go beyond that, that very moment you go beyond your duty—that is, beyond any municipal duty of the city of Boston. Therefore the size of the various post offices elsewhere, although they would tend to show that the Government has done comparatively little here, so far as the size of its buildings is concerned, to what it has done elsewhere, because in other cities where they have very much less business according to the communication of the postmaster, the post offices are in some instances four and in other instances three times as large. But the great question is, what is the city of Boston to do?

Now in the city of Boston today the revenue of the Post Office amounts to a million more than its expenses; therefore it is a source of great income to the Government, and therefore the Government can well afford—and whether it could afford it or not from its revenue it is its duty to provide the requisite means for carrying on its own business. Now, then, there is another consideration, and that is that it seems to have been admitted from the beginning—admitted by the Committee on Streets and the Street Commissioners, that the public convenience and necessity do not require that we should widen Water street. It has been stated by the Chairman of the Committee on Streets in this Board, on the 13th of March—I will read from the report. Mr.

Perkins said these words in reference to this matter: "It is the unanimous opinion of the Committee on Streets that there is no necessity for the widening of Water street so far as public convenience and travel are concerned."

It was not presented as a street improvement, and the Committee on Streets had nothing to do with it." So that it seems to have been decided, so far as the Committee on Streets are concerned, and so far as the Street Commissioners were concerned, that public convenience and the requirements of the public for the use of this place as a street is concerned—so far as anything is concerned which will justify the laying out of this land as a street, and so far as we have the power and authority to take private property—I say it seems to have been admitted, not only by the Commissioners but by the Committee on Streets, that it was entirely unnecessary that this street should be widened.

Now, there is one other consideration—as this matter will undoubtedly go over to another meeting of the Council—to which I desire to call the attention of the Council. Because specimens as is the letter of the Postmaster, he does state one fact with great distinctness, and that is that it was originally the purpose of the Government to take this entire square for the Post Office. That is, the Federal Government determined that the necessities of the Post-Office Department required it, and they had their plans made for the purpose, and sent them here with the photographs of the various elevations, showing that it was the intention of the Government to take the whole of this square for the Post Office.

Now, then, what was the position of the square that the Government proposed to take to itself? It was a square surrounded by narrow streets. Every street about it was narrow, without the slightest expectation—save that there may have been some idea with regard to this matter of Devonshire street—certainly with no other expectation that has been presented to us here—it was the intention of the Government to take that square and build the Post Office between these narrow streets. So that so far as the Government was concerned it had determined that that was a suitable place, and that those streets were suitable streets. So far as they were concerned, the streets were wide enough for the erection of a Post Office, and for the purposes to which they proposed to devote the building. Now, then, that was determined. It turned out, Mr. President, that there was a great fire.

Then our narrow streets could be widened at a much less expense than before, and it does seem to me, and I think it will come home to every member of this board, that the city of Boston nobly responded to the wishes of the Federal Government, and to every possible requirement of common convenience and necessity. Why, Mr. President, millions of money have been expended in widening these approaches to this Post-Office building, and in widening its surroundings. As much, and I suppose more than the entire cost of this Post-Office building, has been spent in widening the approaches to this building and the streets about it.

Now, there is only one question presented here, because so far as I am concerned, certainly I trust so far as the majority of the board is concerned, there will be no question but that the public necessity and convenience will be subserved by taking all this property excepting that necessary for the widening of Water street. But Water street presents itself to us in a very different phase from the rest, because you cannot widen any part of Water street without taking down a valuable building, which was occupied at the time the Post Office was built, and stood in exactly the same place in which it stands now.

Not only was this the case, but when this subject has been before the Committee on Streets, they have been unanimously of the opinion that so far as the public convenience and necessity of the people were concerned, it was not necessary that this should be widened. Then what have we? Why, we have the Post-Office building on one side belonging to one corporation—the United States Government—and the Post Building, belonging to citizens, on the other side, and when they are in that position their rights are just exactly the rights of any two citizens, or of two corporations. The United States Government is permitted to take property for its building in just the same way that a railroad corporation is permitted to take property for its purposes.

But when it is obtained, when that authority has been exercised and has been completed, then so far as the city of Boston is concerned, they as a municipal corporation have no right to take the property of the citizen merely for the benefit of another citizen or any other corporation, however great that corporation may be. It is admitted by the Committee on Streets that there was no pretence that the public convenience or necessity required it, but that it is simply a question of whether we shall get the extension of the Post Office.

Mr. Perkins—The report does not say that I said so.

Mr. Dean—I don't think the gentleman will dispute that the report says that "the committee are unanimously of the opinion that there is no necessity for the widening of Water street," and a unanimous opinion, of course, includes each member of the committee. Of course there is no adjudication that can prevent you from changing your mind and adjudicate the other way. But when you come to contest the question whether this is a public necessity and convenience which comes within our legitimate function, or whether, not being an improvement of convenience and necessity, we propose today to take away the property of one citizen because another corporation insists upon it, I say, then, it becomes a pertinent question to decide how we shall act.

When a gentleman says that he will vote that public necessity requires it because the Post Office requires it, he simply disregards the oath he has taken before this Council. The only authority we have is a law which allows us to act when the public necessity and convenience require it. We have no right to do for the benefit of the Post Office or the Federal Government any thing that does not come under that law. That as a municipal corporation we have no right to do. If it were for the public necessity and convenience we might do this thing, and it might turn out to be a benefit to the Government. Now they say that the city of Boston must do a certain thing. It turns out that we cannot take this property under the law of safety and convenience, and until that time the property of a private citizen is sacred, and we have no right to take it.

Now, then, shall we lose the Post Office? Why how strange it is for any one to say that the Post Office will not be extended in the face and eyes of the admission of the representatives of the Government, that with these streets extremely narrow they bought this piece of property and erected the part of the Post Office on it with the intention of completing it over the whole of this area, and when the city of Boston has improved the streets to the existing width around it wherever the opportunity has presented itself, without doing injustice to private individuals whose property stands today just where it does now in its proximity to the Post Office while the Federal Government decided to build, it is impossible that any such result should follow. I know that we are all desirous of doing everything to subserve the interests of the Federal Government if it is consistent with our duty.

There are other considerations which might be alluded to, but as this matter will go over, I don't propose to say any more, my intention being rather to present the views I have taken of this question in such a shape that if the Council do not see fit, after reflection and discussion, to widen Water street, the reason why the street is not widened by the City Government shall appear upon the face of the action of the Government itself, and when presented at Washington, it will so appear; because I believe, Mr. President, that if we do pass an order stating the exact truth as it exists in the minds of the Committee on Streets, it would be within the power of the Supreme Court to enjoin us. Say, for instance, that the Committee on Streets should pass an order in exact accord with the remarks of the chairman of that Committee, and say that "whereas, the safety and convenience of the inhabitants do not require that Water street—yet because requested, or required so to do by the Federal Government, they have concluded to do it," and that was the only reason, the city could be enjoined from widening the street. In view of these facts, I wish to present the following substitute:

Whereas, The United States has made an appropriation for the extension of the new Post Office, conditioned, in addition to other things, upon the widening of Water street, upon which the Post Office was erected, without previously requesting that the street be widened, and without setting the building back from the line thereof, thus determining that the width of the street is sufficient for the use of said building for the purpose for which it is intended; and whereas the city of Boston is expending millions of dollars for widening other streets leading to and about said Government building, to facilitate the public in the approaches to the same, thereby complying in all other respects with the wishes of the United States, and this without any liability of the United States to contribute of its own land, or by the payments of betterments or otherwise, thus making the expense thereof unequal and unjust to our own citizens; and, whereas the United States, in the matter of laying out and widening our streets, stands in the same position of other corporations and private citizens; and the wishes and requests of neither furnishing a legal and sufficient reason for the taking of the property of other corporations or of citizens, the city having no right or authority to take private property for streets without adjudicating that "common convenience and necessity" require it; and, whereas "the common convenience and necessity" do not require the widening of Water street, and whereas it was so held by the Street Commissioners prior to said appropriation: therefore

Resolved, That though the city of Boston is desirous of doing all in its power to meet the wishes of the United States, it is, for the reasons above expressed, inexpedient for the Commissioners on Streets and the City Council to take further action in the premises.

The substitute was read by the president of the Council.

Mr. Perkins said that while the gentleman was speaking he was reminded of the old saying, 'O that mine enemy had written a book.' He might as well admit, he supposed, that he had changed his mind on the matter of this street widening. He certainly thought that sixty feet was none too wide for the requirements of the business of the new Post Office, and as a citizen he should say the same thing. He thought, with a certain Alderman, that the streets about this Post Office were to be the great 'Change of Boston, and virtually of New England. They wanted wide streets for people to stand on the sidewalks without blocking up the streets. They had done precisely the same thing asked for here, on Milk street, on the recommendation of the Committee on Streets that Milk street should be sixty feet opposite the Post Office and only forty feet elsewhere. He certainly believed that Water street should be of the same width opposite the same building, and forty or fifty feet from Congress to Broad.

He could not see how the gentleman who spoke last could make up his mind to pay for the triangular piece in Congress street, and still oppose this widening of Water street. To him it was more difficult for him to see the reason for that than for the improvement of Water street. They had already in the Common Council an order on the table for the putting of Arch street through Morton place, as a sort of extension of Harrison avenue, and then that would be continued into Sewall place, and eventually put through to Spring lane, and the next thing would be the removal of the island between Spring lane and Water street, making that part of Water street as wide as it was proposed to make it opposite the Post Office.

Then School street would undoubtedly be widened on the northerly side, and Water will be a continuation of School street, and there would be a wide street tapering down to forty feet opposite the Post Office. He was glad that the gentleman from Ward 12 was willing to take the triangular piece, for that was half the battle. But suppose they did n't widen Water street, then he didn't know that the Post Office would go there. It was very certain that these lots of land on Congress street could not be bought by any existing act of Congress, and the whole thing would have to be put over till next winter, and meanwhile what were the owners of those estates going to do? Possibly the Merchants' Exchange Company, which was on the verge of bankruptcy, might wait; but it was their bounden duty to give the owners of that property their lines tomorrow, provided there was any recommendation. He would like to know who had the power to keep these people waiting. The Commissioners appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury had no power to do it. He had heard dark hints about this power behind the throne, and about this Cape-Ann granite ring, and about Ben Butler. He did n't believe Ben Butler was behind everywhere, pulling every wire. He had made up his mind that the world runs itself without Ben Butler to any great extent. He did n't believe this land was going to be taken by Ben Butler, or by any other man of the sort; but he did n't believe that the Government would cover that space, at least for a long time to come, unless this improvement were made.

Believing that the building would be a very valuable one, and that it will be an ornament that they would like to look at, he certainly wanted to do all in his power to bring it about; and if by voting practically three or four hundred thousand dollars for the purpose he could bring it about, it seemed to him entirely idle to say that public convenience would not require it. To be sure if the Post Office was not to be there they would not need it, and he would much prefer to see the estates on Congress street covered with buildings than laid out into a trotting park.

But if the improvements were to be made they should go together. He thought the gentleman from Ward 12 as a designer of street improvements, was not much improvement upon the Committee on Streets.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 moved that in order that the substitute of Mr. Dean and its connection with the whole subject might be fully considered, the further consideration of the matter be especially assigned to half-past eight on Thursday next. The motion was carried by a vote of 39 to 1.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Finance made a report that, having negotiated with the Messrs. Baring Brothers of London for the purchase of the Burnt District Loans, they ask for the passage of the accompanying order, consolidating said loans into a sterling loan of $1,000,000:

Ordered, That the loans authorized by the City Council for the improvement of the streets of the Burnt District, of December 28, 1872, for $1,000,000; of February 7, 1873, for $2,000,000, and of March 29, 1873, for $2,000,000—in the total $5,000,000—be and the same hereby are consolidated into a sterling loan of £1,000,000, to be denominated the Burnt District Loan.

The report was accepted and the order was passed.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred the application of the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company for leave to inspect the boilers in the public buildings belonging to the city, reported inexpedient.

The report was accepted.

The following communication was received from the Water Board, read and ordered to be sent up:

BOSTON, April 2, 1873.

To the City Council—The petition of N. Berry in relation to supplying East Boston with water from Flax Pond in Lynn has been duly considered, and a hearing granted to the petitioner. In the opinion of this Board it is inexpedient to supply any portion of the city with water from the source named.

Respectfully yours,

CHARLES H. ALLEN,
President of Cochituate Water Board.

ORDERS PASSED.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16 offered the following order, which was read twice and passed:

Ordered, That the sum of $820 50 be and hereby is appropriated to pay for six hundred feet of hose for the city of Chelsea, to replace that which was lost by the Chelsea Department at the fire of Nov. 9, 1872; the same to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 offered the following order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the General Court, now in session, for the passage of an act authorizing the City of Boston to require the owners of lands in the territory lying between Northampton, Eustis, Albany and Washington streets, the surface of which is below the grade of fourteen feet above mean low water, to raise the grade of said lands, and of all private streets, courts and ways thereon, with reference to the complete drainage thereof; and in case the owners fail to do so within a reasonable time, the city shall be authorized to enter upon and raise said lands to a suitable grade, the expense incurred thereby to constitute a lien upon said land.

Mr. Perkins explained that the meaning of the order was to place the territory on the same footing as the Church-street territory had been.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said that as the matter had not been acted upon here he would like to have it printed, so that he could examine it at his leisure and understand it more fully. It seemed to him that it might be an invasion of private rights. If it is passed in both branches it goes to the Legislature as the voice of the City Council. In a matter of that kind he wanted more time to consider it and wanted to see it in print.

Mr. Perkins made further explanation, and Mr. Shaw again objected. The order was read a second time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, the following order was read twice and passed:

Ordered, That the allowance of six hundred dollars per annum for rent of armory occupied by Company A, First Battalion of Infantry, M. V. M., on the corner of Washington and Union park streets, be discontinued on the first day of April, 1873, and that said sum be allowed and paid to said company on and after said date, until otherwise ordered, for rent of armory in Minot Hall, at the corner of Washington and Springfield streets.

On motion of Mr. Burt of Ward 16—

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to William Gilchrist one thousand dollars for Engine No. 12, furnished as per order of the Committee on Fire Department of 1872; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for said Department.

TAKEN FROM THE TABLE.

The report and order on increasing the efficiency of the Fire Department and the message of the Mayor transmitting the report of the Commissioners on the Fire Loan, was taken from the table. The first-named was referred to the Committee on Ordinances, and the latter to the Committee on Claims.

[The details of expenses incurred are given, for meats, vegetables, fish and other materials and for labor, making an aggregate cost of $4708 20.]

A very large portion of the soup has been delivered to families living in the several districts, who sent for it daily to the station houses, each family being registered in a book kept for the purpose, and the circumstances of each being ascertained by the officers on the several routes, thus making sure that the soup was issued only to that class of needy persons whom the City Government designed to aid. In a very few cases it was found that the applicants kept boarders, but such did not call a second time.

After supplying all needy families who applied each day, if any soup was left, it was given to persons who applied at the station houses for lodging, who if less worthy, were equally grateful for a cup of soup and a shelter for the night.

Respectfully submitted,

E. H. SAVAGE,

Chief of Police.

ANNUAL REPORT OF INSPECTOR OF MILK.

The annual report of the Inspector of Milk gives the following statistics in regard to the milk trade, wholesale dealers being classed as those who distribute to families, stores, etc., from carriages, and those who keep more than one cow, in the city proper, in the Sixteenth Ward (Dorchester), Boston Highlands, South and East Boston:

Retail dealers are those who sell in small quantities from market places, stores, shops and cellars.

Number of cows kept within the limits of the city of Boston, 1319; viz., number in the city proper, 30; number in the Sixteenth Ward, Dorchester, 608; number at the Boston Highlands, 423; number at South Boston, 100; number at East Boston, 158; number of persons who keep but one cow, 307. There have been recorded the names and places of business of wholesale dealers in milk, since last report, 46; whole number of wholesale dealers registered, 1327; whole number of wholesale dealers now in the business, 527; whole number of wholesale dealers now selling from carriages, 276; whole number of small wholesale dealers who keep more than one cow and sell to the neighborhood, 251; number of retailers of milk recorded since last report, 75; whole number of retail dealers in milk recorded to date, 3122; number of samples of milk inspected since last report, 1975; number not adulterated, 1463; number more or less adulterated, 512; number of cases analyzed by chemist, 23; average amount of adulteration in the cases analyzed, 25.76; largest amount of adulteration (water intentionally added in 100 parts) in the cases analyzed, 42.18; least amount of adulteration (added water) in the cases analyzed, 10.14; number of samples analyzed, including above, and not adulterated, 00.00; whole number of samples of milk analyzed to date, 305; number of cases pending in the courts at the date of last report, 1; settled during the year, 0; number of complaints in the Municipal Court, 10; number convicted in the Municipal Court, 10; number of complaints by the Grand Jury, 8; number of bills of indictment by the Grand Jury, 8; number convicted in the Superior Court, 8; whole number of complaints in court to date, 240; whole number convicted to date, 172; whole number not convicted, 67; number of cases now pending in the courts, 1; number of gallons of daily supply of milk for the city of Boston, 25,282; daily cost to consumers, $8,090 24; number of gallons for supply one year, 9,227,930; cost to consumers one year, $2,952,937 60.

The expenses of this office have been as follows, viz.: For the analyses of milk, $200; stationery, record books, advertising, printing, etc., $170 39; Inspector's small bills for assistance, lactometers, and other milk instruments, $23 52—$393 91. For violations of the Milk law there have been paid in the Municipal and Superior courts, fines and costs amounting to $827 39; one half of the fines have been paid to the complainant, viz., $340.

The Inspector states that during the year fifteen hundred stores and shops have been visited and the milk examined. Some of these places have required frequent attention. Nearly one hundred private families have requested the services of the Inspector in regard to their milk. To prevent the distribution of adulterated milk in the city, the railroad milk stations have often been visited, and also the stables of milkmen in Charlestown, Cambridge and Somerville, besides those within the limits of this city; and not a little is received at this office for inspection from the neighboring cities and towns, the same as from our own citizens.

It has become more generally known than formerly, that no fees or presents, of any name or nature, are now or ever were received for any services rendered by this office, the grand object being to keep in check the adulteration of milk.

In some of the country towns, as well as in this city, during the fall of 1871 and the winter of 1872, frequent meetings were held by different associations interested in the milk trade; the object of which was to consider the price of milk, its transportation to market, and the existing evil of adulteration.

Reference is made to the several statutes to prevent the adulteration of milk and to the difficulty of reaching those who commit the offences of adulteration; and the information usually given in regard to the size of milk cans is repeated. A record is also given of the weather of the several months, with its effect upon the supply of milk. Notices of the Milkmen's Association, the Contractors' Association, Milk Producers' Association and others are also given.

In regard to the operations of the Milk Consumers' Protective Association, the Inspector says—

"Notwithstanding the many discouraging difficulties they had to encounter, the Inspector can only say that his services were but seldom required, and but few samples of their milk were brought to his office for inspection; and, furthermore, the milk furnished by them in stores and shops, with few exceptions, was found to be good. It was said, however, that during the season, many families ceased taking their milk, and that frequent complaints were made at the office of the association in regard to its quality.

The establishment of milk depots in the different wards of the city, for the sale of milk, to be carried away, and also sold over the counter by the glass, was quite a new feature in the milk trade of Boston. This milk was obtained from the Consumers' Protective Association, so called, but though under their name, it was not carried on by persons in their employ; rather by men on their own account, who were peculiarly interested to obtain of them, and to sell, a good article of milk. It was said that, during the hot season, some of these milk depots sold from one to two hundred gallons of milk per day."

Ordered to be sent down.

salary of the Superintendent of Printing from $2800 to $2500—was considered.

Alderman Gibson inquired as to what the self-action of the engine consisted.

Alderman Clark replied that it was not in its motion in the streets, but in its working at fires, and as it had been in operation in this city at most of the fires since the fire in November, it had paid for itself half a dozen times. It was left here by the maker to be taken and paid for if it proved to be satisfactory.

NORMAL SCHOOL ACCOMMODATIONS.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield, the report and order authorizing the unoccupied rooms in the Appleton-street Primary Schoolhouse to be furnished for the use of the Normal School, were taken from the table.

In making the motion, he said he wished to hear the reasons why the report and order were laid on the table, and the objections to the proposed use of the rooms in question.

Alderman Sayward, in reply, said there was no necessity for the change proposed. There was all the room in the Girls' High and Normal Schoolhouse that was necessary, and if the rooms were taken as proposed, they cannot be occupied probably more than a year, when they will be wanted for primary school uses. Besides, there would be an expense of $700 to $1000, which was unnecessary.

Alderman Gaffield said he would give a statement of the necessity of the measure as coming from the School Committee. When the school was established, it was chiefly as a normal school, for the purpose of educating those who were to become teachers. In course of time it was shown that many pupils attended the school who did not design to become teachers, and it had become mainly a high school, when the two were separated. At the request of the several committees interested in the schools, the petition was made for the use of the two unoccupied rooms in the Appleton-street Primary Schoolhouse. As at present located, pupils who wish to get practice in teaching must go to some other school, away from the schoolhouse, as in former years they went out two or three days towards the close of their term to get such practice in teaching.

The advantages of occupying the proposed rooms are in being opposite a large grammar schoolhouse, and in connection with a primary schoolhouse where these pupils will be on the spot to go into the necessary practice as teachers. That is the object which is desired. The gentleman objected that not all the parties interested were heard on the subject. At another hearing, at which he was not present, all parties were heard, and it was agreed that by the facilities which this would give, facilities for teaching which would make the school the best of the kind in the Commonwealth, the only real normal school, having all the means of learning to teach under one roof.

The object was set forth with great eloquence before the committee, and if carried out it was believed it would enable us to have able teachers. Even should the rooms be occupied by this school but one year, it would accomplish much good. The only expense would be the furnishing or providing forty or fifty chairs, desks being already in the room. With so little expense and so much good, there should be no opposition to the passage of the order.

Alderman Sayward replied that he was absent at the last hearing on the subject. Last year, however, there was a clashing in relation to the separation of the high and normal schools. Why not continue to take lessons in teaching in the basement of the schoolhouse as heretofore? As to the desks in the Appleton-street Schoolhouse, those belong to the drawing school, the committee of which wish to have them remain untouched. He could not see why they should go to the expense of $1000 when there was plenty of room in the present schoolhouse.

Alderman Gaffield could not believe it to be possible that the expense would be $1000, when the desks were already in the room. In the high schoolhouse they could not get the practice which was needed, where there were young ladies to be taught, and not children, and as to the clashing of committees, they were all harmonized in relation to this matter.

Alderman Sayward wished to know if there was not a primary school in the basement of the schoolhouse in former years for the practice of teaching by the pupils of the normal school?

Alderman Gaffield replied that the pupils were only educated in their practical duties in teaching, by being sent round to schools for a few days, in which they were often received quite coolly. What they needed was instruction day by day on the premises, instead of being sent to South Boston or East Boston for two or three days. Here were two rooms, with desks, and in the occupation of them they could go out at any hour of the day into some school, which they could not now do by reason of the plan of the schools as now carried on.

Alderman Sayward wished to know if there were not now some classes of small children in the basement of the high schoolhouse?

Alderman Gaffield replied that he was not aware of it.

Alderman Sayward said it was so.

Alderman Gaffield, in reply to an inquiry, said that when the rooms in question were wanted they would be given up.

Alderman Gibson believed that if they once get there the city may be obliged to build another schoolhouse. They become real estate, and can never be got out. He believed they had better retain the rooms, as they are now safe.

Alderman Gaffield said that he would guarantee that the school should become movable property.

Alderman Sayward wished to know what object there could be in occupying rooms six months or a year if they were to be given up? Besides, the rooms were already occupied as a drawing school.

Alderman Clark inquired whether the high schoolhouse was not sufficiently large last year? The house was enormously large, and was built for the purpose of a normal schoolhouse and nothing else.

He hoped there would be no change, for when parties get possession they can never be got out.

Alderman Gaffield was quite positive that when needed the rooms would be given up. A change was made in the separation of the schools to give an opportunity to teach in primary schools, and gentlemen could see the necessity of having for practice a whole school rather than two classes. It was believed to be a good educational plan.

Alderman Sayward, with reference to an allusion of abolishing schools, stated that there were several buildings which would be brought here on the question of their abolition as schoolhouses, for which they were not needed.

Alderman Gaffield, in answer to a question of Alderman Gibson, repeated what he had before said as to the advantages which the proposed location in the vicinity of many schools would have over one class in the basement of the high schoolhouse. He was told, besides, by a teacher, that the house was filling up with high school pupils, and soon every inch of room in it would be needed by the girls there. Ten or twenty classes which might be subjects for teaching would be much better than two classes. But he would assure them that occupation of these rooms would be given up when necessary.

Alderman Clark inquired how many pupils there were in the normal school.

Alderman Gaffield replied that there were forty or fifty who designed to become teachers. There were many of the present teachers who were attending instruction in branches of drawing, by going every Wednesday and Saturday to learn. If these young ladies now in the normal school obtain that kind of instruction it will not be necessary in another generation to have special teachers in drawing.

Alderman Sayward said it looked to him as though the teachers in the high schoolhouse did not wish to have classes of small children in that house.

Alderman Gibson said it was the general complaint in his ward that all the teachers came from country places. He failed to see why teachers should at once enter into full pay without experience.

Alderman Gaffield replied that such was not the case, there being several grades of pay dependent on years of service.

After some further remarks by Aldermen Gibson and Gaffield, the question was taken on the order, which was passed, in concurrence, by a vote of 7 to 5, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Clark, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy, Stebbins.

Nays—Brown, Cutter, Emery, Power, Sayward.

Alderman Power moved to take from the table the nomination of Edward M. Grant as a driver in the Fire Department, which was carried.

Alderman Power said his object in laying the nomination on the table was that the system which admitted of such appointments was all wrong, and he still thought so. A system which could promote a man but ten days in the department over old members was all wrong. Nevertheless, as he understood all the members of the engine company No. 15, were unanimous in favor of the nominee, and should he be rejected, they would again favor the appointment and as he was the choice of the engineers of that district, under the circumstances he would withdraw his objections, but thought the sooner the system was changed the better. The nomination was confirmed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the order for Chief Engineer of the Fire Department to present his annual report on March 27 was taken from the table.

Alderman Stebbins stated that the report of the Chief-Engineer had gone to the printer and would be made in print in a few days.

The order was passed, in concurrence.

The petitions of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company and Charles E. Thayer were severally referred, in concurrence.

McNutt, to erect a certain wooden building on Warcham street; of John Lloyd, to be paid for injuries from alleged insecure condition of Federal-street Bridge.

The order authorizing the purchase of a self-acting fire engine, at not exceeding $2000, was read once.

The following reports and orders were passed, in concurrence:

Order authorizing the Mayor to execute a deed of release to Samuel Weld and others for a right of drainage between Moreland and Winthrop streets.

Order taking from the files and referring to the Committee on the Harbor, the papers relating to the Commonwealth's assessment for compensation for tide water displaced by the construction of Atlantic avenue, etc.

Report and order for an extension of time to May 1, 1874, for Ivory Beam to build on four certain lots of land on East Dedham street, on the conditions set forth in said order.

Report and order for an extension of time to May 1, 1874, for John S. Duulap to build on four certain lots of land on East Dedham street, on the conditions in said order set forth.

Report and order for an extension of time to May 1, 1874, for Stephen H. Tarbell to erect a dwelling house on certain land on Fourth street, on the conditions named in said order.

The order directing the Inspector of Buildings not to grant permits, and to revoke those already granted to build on the westerly side of Kingston street, between Bedford and Summer streets, being under consideration—

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 wished for information on the subject.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 stated, in reply, that the order was offered by Alderman Clark in consequence of the abutters on the westerly side having begun to build on the old lines. The Committee on Streets of the last City Council, as an expression of their opinion, passed an order on the 24th of December, which was referred to the Street Commissioners, that Kingston street should be fifty feet wide, but this was never acted upon by the Street Commissioners. The Street Commissioners did not wish to initiate the widening, and no action had been taken by the Committee on Streets the present year.

There are two swell-front houses about to be cut off, and if built upon the old lines, it will leave the street but forty feet wide, while the portion in the burnt district is fifty feet, and the portion below Bedford street is also fifty feet, and Otis street is widened to forty-five feet. That buildings may not be put up before the question of widening the street is determined upon, the order was introduced.

Mr. Shaw said he was glad to hear the explanation, since this territory was within his district. He had not before heard of this matter, and wished for information on the subject. But the order not only provides that permits shall not be granted, but reaches those already granted. He was not ready to revoke permits given to parties in good faith, and while he did not wish to criticise, he believed such an order ought not to be passed, affecting individual rights, without allowing the parties a hearing.

Mr. Perkins replied that it was understood the Inspector was not to give permits until the subject had been acted upon. An order was passed, as he believed, prohibiting the Inspector from granting permits in the whole burnt district, until permission was given by the City Council to do so. A plan was proposed, but no action had yet been taken in relation to Kingston street. As to revoking permits, it was not an unusual thing, as in the case of Lincoln street, after the work of rebuilding had commenced, when it was concluded to widen on both sides. The cases were precisely the same. The passage of this order would, however, cause no delay, for the Committee on Streets were to have a meeting tomorrow, and if they come to a conclusion that the widening is not desirable, they can make a report at once or notify the Inspector.

Mr. Shaw regarded the permits as having been given and received in good faith, and if so, should not be revoked without giving the parties a hearing. It involved individual rights, as the parties acted in good faith under the permits, as they had a right to do. It was true, the City Council were competent to do anything, but he hardly knew what motion to make, and hoped the order would be laid over.

Mr. Perkins said the City Council had never authorized the granting of permits, and no steps had yet been taken toward rebuilding except to tear down the front walls. Yet if no action was taken they will go on to rebuild.

Mr. Shaw said he regretted to be obliged to say anything further, but he wished to know if the Inspector has authority to grant permits without authority. If so, it was time that the City Council should know it. His idea was that the order should lie on the table, and he moved that it be laid on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was lost, when the order was passed.

A communication from the City Messenger reappointing Foster M. Spurr as Assistant City Messenger was received, and the appointment was approved.

The report nominating John S. Damrell as Chief-Engineer of the Fire Department, and the following-named persons as Assistant-Engineers, viz., Joseph Dunbar, Zeas E. Smith, William A. Green, George Brown, John W. Regan, John S. Jacobs, Phineas D. Allen, Rufus B. Farrar, James Mouroe, John Colligan, Joseph Barnes, Sylvester H. Hebard, Levi W. Shaw, and George W. Clark, was accepted, in concurrence, and the certificate of the election of the persons named was read.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 moved that the rules be suspended, and the election be concurred in this evening.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12, thought the matter of too great importance to be hurried through with such unseemly haste as would be manifested by a suspension of the rules. The ordinance provides that the Chief-Engineer shall make his report annually in the month of January, and we are now in the month of April, and there is no report. When we have ordinances they ought to be regarded somewhat. He supposed that the ordinance was especially meant to provide that this report should be made and sent in before the election. The rule is a wise one that provides that the election shall lay over for one week, and only in cases of great emergency should that rule be suspended.

Mr. Jones said that he presumed the minds of members had already been made up for some time. In regard to the report of the Chief-Engineer, it was required that the report be made up to September, and for the last three or four years it has always been ready at about this time. It is now in the hands of the printer, and it will be some three or four weeks before it is ready.

Mr. Dean thought that if the minds of members were already made up, the matter might lie over for one week without any injury to anybody, and if it has been the practice to disregard the ordinance it is time such practice was stopped.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 stated that the gentleman from Ward 12 labored under a mistake, as the report was not due until the 1st of May.

Mr. Dean then read from section eight of the ordinances in relation to the government of the Fire Department. Now it seems that an ordinance solemnly enacted for the government of the Fire Department has been habitually disregarded. He had no doubt that this report which was in the hands of the printer could be finished up in the course of a week if necessary; and it will be time enough to have this election take place at any time during the present month.

The motion to suspend the rules was lost—28 in favor, 21 against—not one-third.

The non-concurrence of the Board of Aldermen in amendment to Salary bill respecting the salary of the Superintendent of Printing, coming up,

Mr. West of Ward 16 moved that the Council adhere to its amendment, which was carried.

REPORT ON THE ARCHED ENTRANCES TO THE LOWELL RAILROAD DEPOT.

OFFICE OF CITY ENGINEER, }
BOSTON, April 9, 1873. }

To the Honorable City Council—In compliance with your orders, approved March 4, instructing the City Engineer "to inspect the arched entrances for the towers of the new depot of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and report whether, in his opinion, they are properly constructed with regard to the public safety," I have examined the plans from which the towers have been built, and have inspected the structures themselves from time to time, and now respectfully report—

The load carried by the arches referred to is the weight of the masonry above them in one story only. The front and rear walls of the other stories are carried on iron girders at the level of the second floor, supported at their ends in a manner that leaves a space beneath them of a great length, somewhat greater than the span of the arches.

The drawings show a system of iron ties, built and concealed within the masonry, intended for the purpose of resisting the tendency of the arch to spread and settle. These ties having sufficient dimensions to prevent the overturning of the abutments, there appears but two ways in which the arch can be destroyed—first, by the giving way of the foundations; and, second, by the crushing of the material.

A careful examination of the base courses of the towers showed no indications of any settlement or motion of the foundations; and from such information as I have obtained, of the number of piles used and the resistance they offered to driving, I am of opinion that the foundations are safe.

The ties, being of iron, stretch when a strain is applied to them. Although any elongation in them due to the thrust of the arch must be exceedingly slight, yet it may be sufficient to permit a movement of the masonry that would cause an unequal distribution of the load upon the abutments. As the inside face of one of the abutments shows signs of being overloaded, it is probable such a movement has taken place.

The masonry at this point is cracked, but not to an extent that renders it liable to be destroyed by crushing. I am informed that it is the intention of the officers in charge of the construction of the building to relieve the arches and abutments by iron girders and columns as soon as the weather and condition of the ground will permit.

I can see no way in which the arches or the abutments with the load now upon them and secured as they now are, can yield to an extent that would render the towers unsafe, and am therefore of the opinion that the public safety is not endangered by their construction.

JOSEPH P. DAVIS,
City Engineer.

Ordered to be sent up.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE POOR.

A communication was received from the Overseers of the Poor, in which they request that an additional sum for the current year of $5000 be appropriated from the City Treasury for disbursements made and to be made in their department of the public service.

The cause for the requirement of this additional sum is the increased amount paid for burial of foreign poor, principally owing to the prevalence of the smallpox, and also for the support of the poor belonging to other cities and towns residing in Boston. This sum will be refunded by the Commonwealth and cities and towns, and returned on settlement to the City Treasury, amounting to about $4000. The further sum of $1000 will be required for our own poor residing in other cities and towns, the expenses of whose support is greater than originally estimated; thus making the total amount for the balance of the present financial year $5000.

In behalf of the Board of Overseers of the Poor,
F. W. LINCOLN, Chairman.

Referred to Committee on Finance.

An invitation was received from J. S. Macdonald, in behalf of the Executive Committee of the Carney Hospital, requesting the City Council to attend the fair in aid of said hospital to be held at the Music Hall.

Ordered to be sent up.

WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 called for the special assignment, the report and order requesting Street Commissioners to present resolves and order for laying out as a street the lot of land on the northerly side of Milk street, between Congress street and Pearl street extended; also for widening Water street to sixty feet between Congress and Devonshire streets,—a minority report dissenting therefrom, and expressing the opinion that said order ought not to pass; and an amendment proposed to said order by Mr. Dean.

The Chair read the original order and the substitute offered by Mr. Dean, the question being upon adopting the substitute as an amendment.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 asked the gentleman from Ward 12 whether the substitute was intended to be incorporated in the order, or to be substituted for the whole.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 replied that it was intended as a substitute for that part of the order which relates to the widening of Water street. He was clearly of the opinion that the triangular piece of land should be taken.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 hoped the substitute would not prevail. It seemed to him that the order for which the substitute was proposed was the right thing for the action of the City Council. The question is simply this—is it for the safety and convenience of the citizens of Boston that Water street should be widened as proposed in the order? There can be no question as to the convenience, as it is perfectly plain to every one that it will be more convenient to have wide streets, especially in this section of the city, after the Post Office is occupied.

It does seem as though that part of the subject was simplified down to the question of safety. It can hardly fail to appear to any one a matter of safety. We have just had a terrible experience in the fire of last November which we have been obliged to allude to so often in this discussion. Our contracted avenues and narrow streets, occupied by high buildings, prevented our firemen from doing the valiant service they were able and willing to do, and cost the loss of many lives and $50,000,000 worth of property to the city of Boston. It seems, then, that this proposed improvement is a necessity, as well as a convenience, and must sometime be adopted. The effort to delay this work is grounded upon the statement that we are doing it for the General Government.

Now, how do we benefit the General Government? The United States can do its business in the Post Office if it is somewhat contracted, and however narrow the streets surrounding it may be; but our citizens cannot transact their business as well, and their property will not be as safe in narrow streets as in wide ones; and it is apparent, it seems, that the measure will be for the convenience of our citizens more than of the United States. It was said here at the last meeting that the Committee on Streets were unanimous against the widening, at one time, and it is argued that that should be binding upon us—certainly this was the gist of the argument of one gentleman, and is given as a reason why we should not vote for the improvement—because at one stage of the proceedings the committee did not deem the work advisable, but afterwards recommended the passage of the order when other reasons were brought to bear upon them. It is not for us to go into the committee room to investigate their deliberations. It is to the credit of the committee that after giving the matter a thorough consideration, under the altered circumstances of the case which the offer of the Federal Government brought about, it is to their credit that they did change their minds. But if they had reported back to the Council against the widening, still that action does not bind the Council. It is our experience every evening to refer back to the committees reports which have been handed in by them. It is the members of the Council who are the judges of matters which are brought up for their consideration.

The committee have never reported against it, and even if they did it would not bind us. The only report we have had is in favor of the widening; but it is proposed to send the argument that the committee were opposed to the matter, to Washington, false as it is, to lay before the Government in answer to its generous offer to improve and beautify this section of our city.

It seems that the chief fault the opposition have found with the measure is that in the communication which the postmaster sent in to the Council it is admitted that the General Government at one time contemplated taking the whole square, surrounded as it was by these narrow streets, and plans were drawn and photographs of the elevations sent on to this city.

But that in no way injures the general character of that letter, for this reason: Those plans were drawn before the fire; before the experience which cost us so dearly, and which the General Government proposes to profit by if we do not. They did intend to take the whole square, and would had they not seen in the fire a practical warning of the danger of placing so costly a building in such a position. Now they say, we will not put up this building unless the streets are wide enough to render it safe to do so.

Another argument against the improvement is that it is made a condition of the General Government before they will extend the Post Office. This should not deter us. If we have been slow to recognize the lessons of the fire we ought not to disregard the lessons of the General Government, because they were acute enough and wise enough to detect the danger, and tried to prevent us from building a monument to our own folly by continuing these narrow streets and avenues.

Then there is the old bugbear of the injunction from the Supreme Court, which was darkly hinted at here at the last meeting. It was the first time it had been brought in here this year. The last time before this that the bugbear was brought in was when the question of opening the Public Library on Sunday was under discussion. We were then threatened with injunctions from the Supreme Court, but in the face of it we passed the order and we have not yet seen the injunction and never shall. And in this case no injunction will ever be granted if we pass the order. If we say it is a work of necessity the Supreme Court will never interfere with us. It is a matter of broad and liberal policy, and there can be no doubt of its validity and no danger of its being called in question, for if we pass the order we are the judges of its necessity.

It is sad to interfere as we must with the vested rights of individuals. It is sad to be obliged to take from the Simmons estate, a property which is held in trust for the benefit of a certain class of our citizens who stand greatly in need of those benefits. It is sad to take from the Boston Post, one of the best of our leading newspapers, the quarters which have been so conveniently fitted up for its different departments. But it is so in every street widening. We must overlook everything for the public good, and we are not to serve private interests to the detriment of the general welfare. But we allow a fair price for every foot of land we take. And the law gives to all dissatisfied with our awards the right of trial by jury, with double or treble the amount of damages, if it can be made to appear that justice demands it. The argument that we are doing a private wrong to obtain a public good does not hold. It is our duty to secure the public good at all proper expense. It can hardly fail that in all great public improvements like this, private interests must be subservient to the public welfare.

The proposed substitute, it seems, would place us in a very peculiar light in Washington, inasmuch as it contains several false statements. The language of the substitute is as follows:

"Whereas, The United States has made an appropriation for the extension of the new Post Office, conditioned, in addition to other things, upon the widening of Water street, upon which the Post Office was erected, without requesting that the street be widened and without setting the building back from the line thereof, thus determining that the width of the street is sufficient for the use of said building for the purpose for which it was intended."

Now does that show that the United States Government agrees that the street is wide enough? It does show that they did not think much about the widening originally. It shows by their action and by the conditional appropriation, that since the fire they do not consider it wide enough for safety. And further, it says, "And whereas the city of Boston is expending millions of dollars for the widening of other streets leading to and about said Government building to facilitate the public approaches to the same."

Now it seems as though this was something new. Are we spending millions of dollars in widening the approaches to the Post Office? It is not and cannot truthfully be said that we are spending those millions in widening the approaches to the Post Office. The streets would have been widened just the same if the Post Office had been at the South End or on the Back Bay.

We have never had any report from the committee that they opposed the project, and the statement that it was opposed in the committee room is nothing to us. What they recommended in their report may be binding to them, but is not binding on us.

In regard to the question whether we shall have the Post Office in case we refuse to comply with the conditions made by the United States Government, the Government have made this an alternative, and it is fair to presume that they will keep their word. It has been asserted, upon the authority of persons who have been on to Washington in relation to this very matter,—the Mayor of Boston and other gentlemen—that unless the conditions are complied with, the extension will not be made; and now for us to still claim that we can get it without does not seem reasonable. No different appropriation could pass Congress until September, and we could not give the lines for rebuilding, and thus our citizens would suffer in both ways from delay. Now is the time for us to improve on the blunders of the past. We have not built large enough in the past. We need not go out of the present hall we now occupy for a proof of this. When this building was erected many objected to the size, and now we are seeking through the city for apartments for the use of the city officers. When the Beacon-Hill Reservoir was built there was also the same objection made that it was too large, and now its capacity is but as a thimbleful in comparison with the increased wants of the city.

We build too small. We must provide for an immense municipal increase, and when we have such an opportunity forced upon us as the fire gave us, we ought to lay out our streets on a more liberal scale and straighten them. It does seem that the necessity of adopting such a progressive and liberal policy must be plain to us all. Of the convenience which would result from the adoption of this improvement there can be no doubt, and we can see from our experience of the great fire that it is necessary for safety. It is to be hoped that this order will pass, and there can be no better monument to the City Government than the carrying out of this great improvement.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12, in reply, stated that he entirely agreed with the gentleman in his statements in regard to the law. If the City Council passes this order he did not see how the Supreme Court could issue an injunction, and the gentleman from Ward 11 must have misunderstood his remarks the other evening in regard to this matter, but the point on which he claimed that an injunction could be issued was that the true intent of the widening did not appear in the order. If it should appear that Water street was widened for the convenience of the General Government an injunction could be obtained against the city, as no such improvement could be made by law unless the public convenience and necessity required it.

Referring again to the record that the Committee on Streets had once concluded that the widening of Water street was unnecessary, and also to the action of the Street Commissioners, Mr. Dean said that the matter was undoubtedly a matter of opinion, and he thought that they were called upon to decide whether it was necessary, in the light of what had been done, and what needed to be completed. He should think the Committee on Appropriations, if they opposed this order, had read Artemus Ward, his book, wherein he describes his visit to Boston, when every one asked him if he had seen the great organ. He did not know but that they had some of that sort of vanity left and wanted a great post office. He would like to see the Post Office, and would be glad to do anything that would aid the project that it was in his power to do. But this land could not be given to the General Government any better than they could give it to the Adams Express Company.

While they did want wide thoroughfares, it was absolutely necessary to cut their garment according to the cloth, and also remember that the private parties who had remonstrated against this matter were gentlemen who were liable to pay part of the taxes, and it was their right to caution them in their action, and their advice should be respectfully received. They had already a string of widenings for other streets to be paid for, and he did not think he would be the first to urge extreme parsimony on the part of the city, but he did not want to blot out the city of Boston entirely. As to the extension or completion of the Post Office, he submitted that no sane man believed that it would not be done whether Water street was widened or not. On a portion of Water street it was all built, and on Devonshire the whole front was already up.

Besides that, General Burt had said that he must have more room than was now to be had in the new building, inasmuch as it was not as large as the area of the Old South property which he now occupies. There could be no valid reason given why the city should impose this additional tax of $20,000 annually on the people who would soon have an interest account of three millions. To those gentlemen who could not see why he should be in favor of taking the triangular piece of land in Congress street, he thought it was very plain that it was for the public good that it should be done. If it were not taken they would have another Seollay's Building plan, for which he would never vote.

As for the dark insinuations against Ben Butler, Cape Ann Granite rings, and so forth, he knew nothing about it. He thought, for one, that the city of Boston was very largely indebted to that person known as Ben Butler, for certain proceedings in relation to insurance companies. General Burt's ambition for the good of the public was not a thing that should be despised, and the Cape Ann Granite ring probably managed its affairs well. It was no prejudice from this quarter that affected his mind. It was simply a matter of public necessity and convenience, and nothing else, and he did not think it should be passed in the face of the decision of the Supreme Court, that the city has no right to give aid to private parties, even though well secured, and on that point he would not sell his birthright. In the whole thing there was the voice of Jacob and the hand of Esau. As a branch of the City Government, they should discharge their duty like men, and utterly disregard whatever did not refer to the public convenience and necessity. He hoped the substitute would be accepted.

Mr. Train of Ward 13 proposed to come back to the subject of the widening of Water street, after going all round the country. There is no doubt that this improvement is of great importance, and as is usual there is much opposition. There are many arguments against it, but in his opinion there were more in favor of it, and that we should avail ourselves of this opportunity. When the Post Office was finished and occupied Water street would become a great business centre, and the outlet to the streets converging towards this centre, and it would be absolutely necessary to have wide streets in this locality.

Mr. Boardman of Ward 14 said it might seem almost superfluous to add anything to what has already been said upon this subject. It has been claimed that our jurisdiction does not allow us to do this work. He thought that this was a mistake. The proposed action was based on the fact that the public convenience and safety require it. The fact that the Boston Post will be damaged—while we may personally regret it—should not interfere with our consideration of the public welfare. The matter is strictly one of private interest which we are not to consider here. The public convenience and necessity is the prime law and rises above all private interests. Every man who owns property in a municipality holds it under the condition that his rights are subject to the municipal law, provided that law is exercised within the proper scope of its authority. While many are made rich under the workings of the law in regard to street improvements, scarcely any fail to receive a proper remuneration.

And in case the property holder is dissatisfied he has his remedy in the courts, where private individuals generally have an advantage over corporations. Although having no extravagant admiration for General Burt, who was not his ideal of a hero in war or in peace, it must be admitted that he has shown a persistent energy in this matter of providing us with proper postal facilities, which demands our respectful consideration on this question of meeting the demands of the General Government. His statement of the case has never been successfully answered.

It is to be regretted that anything of a personal nature has been brought into this discussion. The matter should be decided solely on its merits. The objection has been made and urged with a great deal of ingenuity by the gentleman from Ward 12, that there has already been an adjudication by the Street Committee on this question. But here is the report, which speaks for itself; and if we allow outside considerations to influence us in our decision, we are not acting in accordance with our oaths to regard only the public good.

There is nothing more common than for individuals to change their minds, and it is fair to presume that a change of opinion made from experience gained is the best. In law the latest decision is always considered the best. There is a story told of a judge who was told that his ruling was different from what it was two hours before. His answer was that two hours ago he was wrong, but that now he knew he was right.

Assuming that there had been a former adjudication on the part of the committee, the report they give now is entitled to all the more weight, and for this reason. There would have been in their minds a judicial bias in favor of the position they had before taken, and it requires very forcible reasons to overcome that strong prejudice and bias which it is natural for every person to entertain in behalf of his old opinion.

The General Government has been appealed to by our Postmaster to give additional postal facilities for the city of Boston. They in answer to our request do not dictate to us what to do, do not command us to widen Water street for the benefit of the Post Office, but simply say that this appropriation shall not be paid until the widening is made. Now there is no dictation about that; there is no command about it; it does not ignore the question that this improvement may be for the convenience of our citizens, and there was no ground for the assertion that Water street was to be widened simply for the benefit of the Post Office. Under the circumstances this is greatly advantageous to the city for two reasons. It has not been shown here tonight that on the merits of the question Water street should not be widened. Other streets have been widened at an expense with which the cost of this improvement in comparison would be a mere bagatelle. The sole condition made by the General Government is that we shall expend the amount in that way, but they do not demand it.

The second reason why this measure should pass is that there is no question at all but that the erection of a spacious Post Office would be greatly to the convenience of this community. If the sine qua non is the widening of Water street, then by that widening we not only secure a good thing in itself, which it is admitted is desirable, but we secure another great benefit in an enlarged and spacious Post-Office building.

In regard to the condition, having been attached at the suggestion of General Burt or General Butler, or some one who it is claimed is interested in furnishing the granite for the building; now, assuming that such is the case that is nothing we have anything to do with, but if it should weigh at all in the minds of any one it seems that the answer to it would be, that in case these gentlemen who were trying to push the matter through were interested in furnishing the material, they would not have had any condition attached to the appropriation, because the only way in which they would make their money is in the erection of the building. This theory is an improbable one. They would be working contrary to their own interest. It is admitted that if we widen Water street we should secure a post office costing $4,000,000. If the improvement should not be carried out, then the General Government could carry on its business in more contracted quarters, and the revenue would probably be about the same to the United States, and we should be the greatest sufferers from the inconvenience.

This is where the matter stands. The General Government is apparently not at all anxious to build this Post Office. We apply to the Government for better postal arrangements, and they reply by making this proposition. If we do not do it, no man here can say that we are going to have the Post Office. The conditions imposed are nearly the same as those imposed upon every large city in the country, the only difference, perhaps, being that in the case of other cities the conditions have been more severe.

Those who believe the Post Office will be built if we refuse to meet the wishes of the General Government are referred to the case of New York, where the old Post Office stood for years, until that city was glad to accept a new one on almost any terms. The matter has received the sanction of the Committee on Streets and the Board of Aldermen, and the gentleman hoped it would also receive the sanction of the Common Council.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 agreed that the only question was as to the paramount necessity of the widening of Water street, though a large portion of the arguments had been devoted to doubts as to the extension of the Post Office unless the widening was made. Mr. Pickering then read from General Burt's letter, as follows:

"But it is objected that the Government did not originally intend to have the Post Office larger than the ground the present building covers. Why is this plan now changed? This is entirely a mistake. It has been the intention from the beginning to secure the whole square, and the Government would not have purchased what they did except with this view. Designs and plans for the building were prepared in 1868, and I send photographic copies of the new fronts for both Water and Milk streets, made at that time. They cover the entire block bounded by Devonshire, Milk, Congress and Water streets. The opportunity, it was expected, would come for purchasing the rest of the site, as the buildings should be taken down to rebuild, and this has only been hastened, but not prematurely, by the destruction of the remainder of the block by fire. The best evidence of the original intention of the Government is found in the construction of the building itself. Why are the two huge porches or pavilions built upon the extreme lower portion of the building? They are the central entrances, as shown upon the original designs for Water and Milk streets, and in any other view are an architectural monstrosity. This all can see and appreciate."

This, he claimed, was strong proof enough of what the original intention of the Government was, and fully answered many of the objections which had been made to the passage of the order.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he was unwilling to have this question go to a vote without referring to one remark of the gentleman from Ward 12, and that was in regard to what the Street Committee said about it some weeks ago. He thought if the Post Office was to be extended, it was absolutely necessary for the public necessity that Water street should be widened, and he was free to say that if it was not to be enlarged he would not vote to widen Water street. He believed if we did not comply with the request of the Government that the Post Office would not be enlarged, and therefore he would not agree to take the flat-iron piece of land referred to, and he would therefore vote against the substitute offered by the gentleman from Ward 12.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 remarked that the minority of the committee, who so earnestly opposed the project, would be obliged to vote against the resolve offered by Mr. Dean because they would be stultifying themselves, having once reported that the public safety and convenience do not require either the widening of Water street or the taking of the triangular parcel of land on Congress street, did they vote for one and against the other.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 regretted that the gentleman from Ward 12 did not introduce his resolve so that it should apply as a substitute for the order of the majority of the committee; if he had done so I should be willing to vote for it, but as I have twice reported that I did not consider it necessary to take the triangular piece for a street, and his substitute favors it, I shall be obliged to vote against it.

It is argued that the triangle will make another Scollay's building, which I do not think will be the case as it will be surrounded by streets fifty and seventy feet wide, which will make it a very valuable piece of property, from which the city will be able to collect a large amount in taxes.

The motion to adopt the substitute was lost.

The question then recurred upon the second reading of the order, which was ordered, and the order was passed, in concurrence, by a vote of 31 yeas to 25 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Adams, Blackmar, Bleiler, Boardman, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Collins, Cudworth, Darrow, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Lamb, Madden, Mahan, McCue, Morse, Pease, Perkins, Prescott, Risteen, Tower, Train, Upham, Whiston, Woodward.

Nays—Abbott, Anderson, Bicknell, Bowles, Brackett, Caton, Dacey, Dean, Flatley, Flynn, Hughes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Loring, Marston, Martin, McKenney, Page, Shaw, Shepard, Thacher, Warren, Wells, Woods.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 moved a reconsideration of the vote passing the order, for the purpose of settling this question at once.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved an assignment of the reconsideration to the next meeting of the Council, at 8 o'clock, which was lost, by a vote of 23 to 27.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said he had not intended to speak on this subject tonight, and would not have done so but for the disposition to force the question when there were many members absent. The wholesale widening of streets unnecessarily, reminded him of a Goffstown muster, years ago, when some old people who lodged in a burial ground on their way to muster, starting up early, were told to go back, as it was not a general resurrection but a Goffstown muster. So there was no call for a general reconstruction of streets, and when the location of the Post Office was determined upon, the Postmaster did not ask for the widening of Water street. The Postmaster then supposed that School street would some time be widened, and that the Carter Block, between Water street and Spring lane, would be removed to give a good view of the Post Office; and so far as related to the extension of the Post Office, he had heard him say before a legislative committee that it would be extended in any event, whether the streets were widened or not. The gentleman from Ward 6 charged a member of a former Board of Aldermen with preventing the widening of Devonshire street; but, without using personalities, there were other sons-in-law who opposed street widenings which affected the property of fathers-in-law. For these reasons he opposed the taking the vote on the question tonight.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 raised a question of order, whether under the rules, the passage of this order did not require a two-thirds vote.

Mr. Dean proceeded to explain his point of order, by reading the order as of anomalous character, it being an order requesting the Street Commissioners to present resolves and orders.

Mr. Perkins rose to a question of order, that the gentleman was not stating his point of order, but making a harangue in relation to a vote already passed.

Mr. Dean replied that he was making the explanation for the purpose of stating the point of order, and giving reasons why he believed the order had not passed.

The Chair being called upon to rule, decided that the gentleman appeared to be making a statement of his point of order, and hoped he would be as brief as possible.

Mr. Dean, in further explanation, stated that under the law in relation to street widenings a two-thirds vote was required.

The Chair ruled that the order was not in the nature of a street widening, but only an expression of opinion, which the Street Commissioners might obey or not; they may or may not report upon it, and neither the Commissioners nor the Council would be bound by it.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 rose for information, as to whether there was any appropriation for the laying out of the street, for if not it must pass by a two-thirds vote. There had been no loan made as yet for the purpose.

Mr. Perkins stated that this was but a request, and no money was called for, and accordingly the question raised was premature.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 moved the previous question.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved an adjournment, which was lost—22 to 26.

On motion of Mr. Flynn, the yeas and nays were ordered on the main question, and the previous question was ordered, by a vote of 30 to 22, as follows:

Nays—Abbott, Anderson, Bicknell, Brackett, Caton, Dacey, Dean, Flatley, Flynn, Hughes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Loring, Marston, Martin, McKenney, Page, Shaw, Warren, Wells, Woods.

On the question of reconsideration, on motion of Mr. Page, the yeas and nays were ordered, and the reconsideration was lost, by a vote of 25 yeas to 28 nays, as follows:

Nays—Adams, Blackmar, Bleiler, Boardman, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Collins, Cudworth, Darrow, N. Doherty, Edwards, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Lamb, Madden, Mahan, McCue, Pease, Perkins, Prescott, Tower, Train, Upham, Whiston, Woodward.

WIDENING OF LINCOLN STREET.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Lincoln street, on its westerly side, near Summer street, by taking land belonging to Henry Lee, amounting to 114 square feet, more or less, at an expense of $1300.

Read twice and passed, in concurrence.

WIDENING OF PEARL, CONGRESS AND MILK STREETS.

A communication was received from the Street Commissioners, with a resolve and order for the taking of a parcel of land situated between the proposed extension of Pearl street, Congress street and Milk street, at an estimated expense of $112,010.

The resolve and order were read once, and were subsequently passed, and a motion to reconsider rejected.

The several items of expense are as follows: James Leeds, No. 74 Milk street, 734 square feet of land, $33, $24,222; damages, $500—$24,722. James Lawrence, Nos. 82 to 76 Milk street, 3901 feet, $21, $81,921; damages, $1660—$83,581. Ellen Stearns, No. 84 do., 154 feet, $23, $3542; damages, $165—$3707. Total, 4789 feet of land, $109,685; damages, $2325—$112,010.

WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

A resolve and order were received from the Street Commissioners for the widening of Water street, accompanying which was a communication in which the Commissioners state that they have to inform the Council that Messrs. Beals, Greene & Co. elect to surrender their estate from which land is taken for this widening, as by law is provided that they may.

The estimates of damages, as before given, are as follows:

Beals, Greene & Co., Nos. 28-36 Water street, 965 feet of land, $45, $43,425; damages to buildings, $75,000—total, $118,425. E. A. White and others, trustees, Nos. 38-50 do., 2630 feet of land, $35, $92,050; damages $1200—$93,250. Total number of feet, 3595, at a cost of $135,475; damages $76,200—$211,675.

Alderman Clark called for a second reading of the resolve and order.

Alderman Power hoped the motion would not pass, although he did not wish again to go over the objections to the measure. Much had been said of late about passing important matters without proper consideration. It had got to be a common thing to have such orders read twice every time, and it was a cause of comment all over the city. This was a case of the greatest importance, and should only be passed with the utmost deliberation. He believed there was a cause to retrench a little in such matters.

Alderman Clark characterized objections at this time as simply a talk against time. The subject had been before the City Council for the last four weeks, and had been voted and acted upon, and now the passage of this order from the Street Commissioners was a mere matter of form. The objection was but a mere pretence, for the subject had been considered in a complete, thorough and satisfactory manner. There was no danger of hurrying, and if the Alderman thought so he deceived himself. The question before them was simply whether they should concur or not in the report of the Street Commissioners.

No person could be unmindful of the importance of having the streets laid out immediately, for the assessors would soon be engaged in their duties, and it was of great consequence whether taxes were to be assessed upon wide or narrow streets. There could be no haste in the matter, for the question had been up three or four times, and it had passed the Board by a vote of 9 to 3. To vote again would be but a mere form. It was desirable that it should go to the Council to be acted upon at a special meeting, and only this was needed to complete the improvements on the entire territory.

Alderman Power inquired if it would not be necessary to pass this by a two-thirds vote, no appropriation having been made for the widening.

Alderman Clark said he was happy to inform the Alderman that it would not. This was a part of the territory for which an appropriation has been made. The question raised was a mere pretext. If it was supposed that the Post building was not in the burnt district, it was in answer that the building was on fire, and was a part of the burnt territory. Money had also been paid in a similar case for the widening at the corner of Washington and Summer streets, on a building which was not burned so much as the Post building.

Alderman Power said he was not aware that the Post building was on fire at all, while the money appropriated was solely for the burnt district.

Alderman Clark replied that Mudge's store, on the corner of Washington and Summer streets, was not burnt at all, but the Post building was, and had been repaired, and was a part and parcel of the burnt territory.

Alderman Power called for the yeas and nays, and the resolve and order passed to a second reading by a vote of 9 to 3, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Clark, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Brown, Cutter, Power.

The resolve and order were read a second time, and passed, by a vote of 9 to 3, the same as before.

Alderman Gaffield moved a reconsideration, for the purpose of settling the question and to bring the question for action at the next meeting of the Council.

The yeas and nays were ordered, on motion of Alderman Brown, and the reconsideration was lost by a vote of 3 to 9, as follows:

Yeas—Brown, Cutter, Power.

Nays—Bigelow, Clark, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Hulbert, Quincy, Sayward, Stebbins.

HEARINGS ON ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The hearings on orders of notice on petitions of Denison & Co. for leave to locate and use a steam boiler and engine at No. 18 Norfolk place, and of Cyrus Wakefield for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at the corner of Friend and Market streets, were severally taken up. No person objecting, the reports were recommitted.

The hearing on order of notice on petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Company for a location on Columbus avenue from Berkeley street to Park square, was taken up. Harvey Jewell explained as the call for the extension to meet the demand occasioned by the removal back of the Providence Railroad Depot, to which the cars have been running at Park square, and the extension asked for was to the new building, to connect also with their track on Berkeley street. The report was recommitted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order to pay Edmund J. Baker and others, trustees, $6775, for land taken to widen Summer street.

Order for Superintendent of Streets to grade the extension of Devonshire street and to lay sidewalks thereon, at an expense of $5000.

E. Woodward, in the proportion of $60 upon the estate of John Ryan and $80 upon the estate of W. E. Woodward, of 2700 square feet, and $35 upon another estate of W. E. Woodward adjoining the foregoing estate,—all of said property being

A second ballot resulted as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	12

William F. Brooks.....	5

Mr. Kelly was declared to be elected, in concurrence.

Alderman Sayward moved to reconsider the vote whereby the Board adopted the report and order authorizing the unoccupied rooms in the Appleton-street Primary Schoolhouse to be furnished for the use of the Normal School.

In making the motion, he said should it prevail, he would move to lay the order on the table.

Alderman Gaffield said he should make no objections, on the ground of courtesy, being assured that when considered again, it would be passed by a larger vote. Meantime he would invite the members of the Board to visit the Normal School, to ascertain for themselves its wants.

The motion to reconsider prevailed, and the order was laid on the table.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the Committee on Legislative Matters be instructed to present and urge such an amendment to the pending Militia bill as shall provide for a reimbursement to cities and towns of rents paid for regimental or battalion headquarters.

Alderman Quincy stated that expenditures of this kind had been made in past years in the expectation that they would be allowed, but they had not been, and as the Militia bill was now pending in the Legislature, it was believed that this would be a favorable opportunity to make a provision for the payment of rent for said headquarters.

Alderman Brown offered an order in favor of allowing Joseph H. Billings and another, administrators, $169 65, the amount being taxes overpaid by mistake, which was referred to the Committee on Assessors' Department.

On motion of Alderman Sayward, it was ordered that a committee be appointed to nominate candidates for the offices of Field Drivers and Fence Viewers.

Resolve and order for widening Lincoln street on westerly side, near Summer street, at an adjudged expense of $1300, was read once, and passed to a second reading.

WIDENING OF STREETS ABOUT THE POST OFFICE.

The resolve and order for the laying out as a public street the parcel of land situated between the proposed extension of Pearl street, Congress street and Milk street, at an adjudged expense of $112,010, (City Doc. No. 47,) were read once and ordered to a second reading.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said if these orders for the widening of streets around the Post Office could be passed now, by the yielding of the minority in the suspension of the rules, then the other orders on the table can be taken up and passed. The Mayor will retain the several orders ten days, as he has a right to, so that all of them may be passed at once, and there was no reason why they may not settle the question now, so far as relates to these streets around the Post Office.

If such members of the minority of the Council as were unable at the last meeting to prevent favorable action will allow the rules to be suspended, there was no reason why these matters should not all be settled tonight. He would not do it himself, but would ask the minority to make a motion for a suspension of the rules, and they would thereby favor the parties who are desirous of building on these several streets and to get their money for the land taken from them.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said he would have no objection to making a motion to suspend the rules so far as related to the order for taking the triangular piece of land on the extension of Pearl street. So much he would do, but in so doing would not commit himself in favor of the other order for the widening of Water street, which was quite a different affair. In regard to that, it was well known that he was opposed to it and could never be induced to vote for its passage or for the suspension of the rules. If it was desirable to pass this order, so that the others might be taken up which are on the table, he was content. If the gentleman desired, he would move for a suspension of the rules in this case. Some members of the minority differed from him, and he would not commit himself, much less others, by this action, and therefore moved a suspension of the rules.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said he hoped the rules would not be suspended in this case unless it was determined also to do so in the other, for there was no more reason why it should be done in the one than in the other. Unless it was determined to pass them both he hoped the motion would not pass.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said that as a general rule he was opposed to the suspension of the rules unless required by some emergency. They were too much in a hurry often, in passing upon such matters, when a week would make but little difference. But inasmuch as the widening of Water street appeared to be a foregone conclusion, and abutters on other streets which were awaiting action on this were clamoring for their lines and for settlement for their land, it was but justice that this should be passed. If necessary for the passage of those orders, he hoped the rules would be suspended.

Mr. Perkins repeated, that whether the other resolves and orders were taken up or not the Mayor would not give his consent to an approval of them until Nos. 47 and 57 were settled. If it was desirable that the owners of land taken in the burnt district should get their money, then orders should be passed now. If the widening of Water street, and the removal of the triangular piece of land was to be made, it would be as well to have it done now, otherwise parties must suffer by the delay. It lies entirely with the minority of the committee to decide now whether it shall be done.

Mr. Dean said he differed with the gentleman entirely in regard to the responsibility of the matter, for it lies entirely with the majority. He did not see why an exceptional case should be tacked upon others about which there is no question, and there could be no merit in carrying it on the back of others. Such a way of doing business was all wrong. Something that had staggered the minds of the Street Commissioners, that was opposed unanimously by the Committee on Streets at one time, which was opposed everywhere, and was objectionable in the minds of a large portion of the best citizens, was tacked on to the end of a dozen, more or less, of orders of a different character, to be carried because certain persons were clamoring for their lines.

There was another thing that he objected to. He did not know why the opinion of the Mayor should be brought in here for the purpose of influencing the action of the Council or their judgment in this matter in which they were called upon to act for themselves. When a matter came in here for their action, demanding investigation and challenging debate, it was their duty as the most numerous body representing the people, to rise to the dignity of the occasion, and whatever errors might be committed elsewhere, they should see to it that they should not pass through this branch.

Mr. Perkins stated that the resolves and orders on the table were virtually passed, for the Council was pledged to their passage. They could do no more than pass them, though some gentleman should move to take them up. But whether they passed them or not, the owners of land could not receive their money, for they can be laid upon the table of the Mayor for ten days. If they proceeded now to pass them, it would be without benefit to the owners of land. If they were all nassed at once, they would receive the Mayor's sanction, but not otherwise.

It would be entirely useless to take up the other orders if these were not passed, and unless the minority could be persuaded to consent to a suspension of the rules it would be as well to have them passed next week as tonight. He did not introduce the matter in relation to the Mayor for the purpose of influencing the Council, but simply to show that no good could come to those persons who are waiting for the settlement of their claims in the burnt district. If the minority were not willing to yield a suspension of the rules he would wash his hands of the whole matter.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said he was about to rise when the gentleman from Ward 12 addressed the Council, and he had spoken upon the subject much better than he could have done. If he had done his duty, when the gentleman from Ward 6 was speaking, he should have called him to order, for he was entirely out of order to introduce the views of the Mayor here to influence their action. It was out of order and impolitic to allude to the views of the Mayor, for the Mayor was one branch of the City Government, the Board of Aldermen another, and this branch another, and no gentleman had a right to give the Mayor's views except to present a message from him.

They had no right to present the views of the Mayor on any subject. This he stated boldly. What was the proposition before them? It was that if certain matters are carried through the City Council then certain others can be carried. Such sort of a proposition he never allowed to apply to his mind. When the gentleman rises and presents a certificate of the Mayor, then he has a right to express his views, and not otherwise. He did not think it right that gentlemen should lie out of their money, and it had been a question with him how long these orders should lie on the table, but it was not his business to move to take them up, and it would not be courteous in him to do so. They had lain there because gentlemen of the committee had not moved to take them up, and it was no fault of the minority.

These matters had lain on the table too long, and he agreed that the parties should have their money and be paid. He disagreed with the other gentleman that this had nothing to do with the other order, for they should act upon each as it came up. He did not believe in such leverage as bringing in the views of the Mayor. The Mayor was his personal friend, but there was another kind of leverage which he would not state here, and he could not believe in such kind of leverage, and he wished every word reported that the citizens may know what leverage is brought to bear upon this question. The gentleman talks of the minority, but there were no minority here.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 said that as a general thing he was opposed to the suspension of the rules. The proposition from the gentleman from Ward 6 to the minority, he thought was a very proper one, and the minority should be willing to take up Document No. 57, and vote for the suspension of the rules. He was not chicken-hearted, and did not know what kind of leverage had been brought to bear upon members of the Common Council, but believed every member had the common sense to judge of such matters themselves. No leverage could be brought to bear upon him, and he thought the remarks of the gentleman entirely out of place.

Coming from the quarter from which they did he believed they were uncalled for. He had sat there listening to denunciations of the Federal Government, and it might be supposed from the indignation manifested that it was a little rebellious. The safety and convenience of the citizens of Boston had a great deal to do with the Federal Government, and the Federal Government had a great deal to do with the safety and convenience of the citizens of Boston. To use the language of the gentleman, it was out of place to stigmatize members of the Council as he had done.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 said this discussion was out of place. When this question was disposed of then the question of the widening of Water street could be acted upon. He did not believe the minority would try to defeat a measure of this kind, which had the approval of a majority, for the minority may become a majority in some other case in the course of the year, and would not wish to be thwarted in that kind of way in the passage of any measure. To do one thing at a time, he would move the previous question.

The motion for the suspension of the rules was carried, by a vote of 47 yeas to 13 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Abbott, Adams, Anderson, Barnes, Blackmar, Bleiler, Boardman, Bowles, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Dean, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Hall, Hine, Holmes, Jones, Lamb, Loring, Mahan, Marston, McCue, McKenney, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Power, Prescott, Risteen, Tower, Train, Upham, Warren, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

Nays—Bicknell, Dacey, Flatley, Flynn, Harrington, Hughes, Kelley, Kingsley, Martin, Page, Shaw, Thacher, Wells.

The order was read a second time, and was passed by a vote of 46 yeas to 14 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Abbott, Adams, Barnes, Blackmar, Boardman, Bowles, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Dean, Denny, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Jones, Lamb, Loring, Mahan, Marston, McCue, McKenney, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Risteen, Tower, Train, Upham, Warren, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

Nays—Anderson, Bicknell, Bleiler, Dacey, Flatley, Flynn, Hughes, Kelley, Kingsley, Martin, Page, Shaw, Thacher, Wells.

WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

The resolve and order for widening Water street to sixty feet on the northerly side, from Devonshire to Congress street, at an adjudged expense of $211,675 (City Doc. No. 57), was read once.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 moved a suspension of the rules for the passage of the order.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said he was content that the rules should be suspended in the last case, and that the order should be passed, because to his mind that was a clear case. In regard to this matter of Water street, he was clearly of the opinion that the public convenience and necessity did not require the widening of Water street, and he had been confirmed in that opinion by the meetings in the Board, by the action of the Street Commissioners and the Committee on Streets, as well as by the opinion of many citizens. In a case of this kind not only the honor and integrity of the Council, but of the city of Boston, was at stake. The safety and convenience of the city was the only criterion by which they were to act, and it was only when that coincided with the wishes of the Government that they could gratify their desires; and while he yielded to no one in loyalty to the Federal Government, he would also yield to no one in his loyalty to the city of Boston, which demanded of him at that time his best fidelity.

When the Federal Government came to them and said they would give to Boston a basis on which they should lay out their streets, making it imperative that if the city did not follow their behests they would not lay out some money on the Post Office, he claimed that the city was governed by its own laws and the laws of the Commonwealth, and could not listen to them. Why, the other day, in the Court House, he inquired of one of the Street Commissioners how many streets there were leading to this square about the Post Office. The reply was, eleven including Spring lane. He also asked what the aggregate width was, and the reply was five hundred and fifteen feet. Yet in the midst of that they were told that they must make a little jog beside the Post Office, in order to give more room and complete safety from fire.

He thought that, as far as Boston was concerned, they had already stretched their consciences, and had gone to an inordinate expense without any corresponding benefit. He was therefore opposed to any undue expedition in the matter, for they more than the Board of Aldermen represented the people in the matter. He did hope that while they were ready to do all that they could, and stretch a point where it was possible to bring it within the bound of reason, they would in this case act the part of good law-abiding citizens, and say that they could not submit to any other requirements, which their consciences could not permit.

Mr. Perkins stated that the question had already been fully discussed and was now whether they should allow the business to take its course, and not on the merits of the case.

On motion of Mr. Hughes, the yeas and nays were ordered on the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. Flynn said that while he was not in favor of the widening of Congress street as passed, he believed they should both go together.

Mr. Blackmar said he was peculiarly gratified at the announcement of the gentleman, indicating that the minority were not to stand in the way of this improvement. There could be no reason for delay unless it was expected gentlemen would change their views, and if there could be no good, why should they delay?

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said he had voted with the minority and should continue to do so. He did not think it was hardly fair for the gentleman to stand up there and tell them that they should do what he might say. The gentleman did n't furnish brains for him. If he could show any good reason for the measure he was ready to hear it and be convinced. Gentlemen would say to him, "Go down Water street and look up." He wanted any one to go to Washington street and look down Water street. They would say to him, "Look up as far as Devonshire street—no further." The jogs were all right as long as they were opposite the Post Office. He was ready for a good, wide, straight street, to connect with School street widened. The whole thing was clear in his mind, and he did n't think the gentleman from Ward 11 could make in any clearer. The whole matter of street widening had been forced by cunning, and the Council was pledged to do what it couldn't get over. He did not think they had got to do it, and he found that the taxpayers outside didn't think so. He was ready for any good improvement; but if the gentleman of the Committee on Streets could, in all that had been laid out, find one that was straight, he would vote for this measure. If the gentleman could show him why Federal street was widened on the westerly side, he would agree to vote for Water street.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said he was so well satisfied that members had made up their minds on this subject that he believed nothing would be gained by delay. He did not see the public necessity for the widening, and as he could not see that anything would be gained by delay, he would vote for a suspension of the rules.

Mr. Dean said he was a believer in the old adage that "While the lamp held out to burn the vilest sinner may return." He had great hopes of converting the council yet, and if the matter were put off the minority might become swollen to the majority. He was sorry to see this defection in the ranks of the minority. If he had foreseen it he would not have made the first motion for suspension of the rules.

Mr. Page believed the widening of Congress street was the least needed, and as a week's delay would not avail anything, he moved the previous question.

Mr. Dean said he was sorry that the vile sinner was on the wrong side.

The motion for the previous question was sustained.

The vote on suspension of the rules was, 42 yeas to 18 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Adams, Barnes, Blackmar, Boardman, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Denny, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Flynn, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Jones, Lamb, Mahan, Marston, McCue, Page, Pease, Perkins, Pickering, Fowers, Prescott, Ristein, Shepard, Tower, Train, Upham, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

Nays—Abbott, Anderson, Bicknell, Bleiler, Bowles, Dacey, Dean, Flatey, Hughes, Kelley, Kingsley, Loring, Martiu, McKenney, Shaw, Thacher, Warren, Wells.

The order was then read a second time, and the question being on its passage—

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 asked for the ruling of the Chair whether the passage of the resolve and order did not require a two-thirds vote.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 wished to know whether the question was before the Council. It would be sufficient time when the vote is taken to decide whether such a vote is required; and if it is to be debated he would like to say something on the subject.

The Chair stated that he would rule on the subject now, as requested. He had given some attention to the subject, as to whether the passage of the order would require a vote of two-thirds or that of a majority. By rule seven of the Joint Rules and Orders, it is provided that "after the annual order of appropriations shall have been passed, no subsequent expenditures shall be authorized for any object, unless provision for the same shall be made by special transfer from some of the appropriations contained in such annual order, or by expressly creating therefor a city debt; in either of which cases the order shall not be passed unless two-thirds of the whole number of each branch of the City Council shall vote in the affirmative, by vote taken by yea and nay."

It appeared that the general order to provide for the expense of widening the streets in the burnt district was passed Dec. 26, 1872: "that the Treasurer be and hereby is authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of one million dollars, the same to be appropriated for the widening, extending, grading and paving of streets, and for all damages and expenses in consequence thereof, within the district burnt over by the fire of November 9 and 10, 1872,—the said loan to be designated as the 'Burnt District Loan.'" That order has not been changed except in increasing the amount of the loan to four millions of dollars more. If the above cited provision in section 7 applied to this order, the question would be whether the expense of this widening had been provided for by the Board. That would be determined by the question of fact whether the Post building was within the district burnt over by the fire of November 9 and 10. Upon that question the Chair was clear. There had been no map or plan defining the burnt district, and no order passed defining such district. The only boundaries therefore, were the buildings unburnt and the streets burnt over, forming a cordon of buildings unburnt, and streets as the boundaries, and in no other way can the limits of the district be established.

The new Post Office and the Post building, although damaged by fire on the sides up to which the fire burnt, were not burnt over, but form a part of the cordon of buildings surrounding the "district burnt over by the fire." The order providing for the loans therefor does not cover the expense of taking the Post building, and under the rules, if it were applicable, the order before the Council would require a two-thirds vote.

But the Chair had come to the opinion that section 7 of the joint rules did not apply to these orders. The Board of Street Commissioners was an independent body, and up to a certain amount have exclusive jurisdiction in the expenditures for the widening of streets—to the amount of $10,000. They are the parties who are to adjudicate in the laying out of streets, and are empowered for the purpose by the Legislature. The only part which the City Council has in the matter is to accept or reject their action, having a veto power on it; otherwise the City Council has no power.

When the Street Commissioners shall adjudge that the public safety or convenience shall require the laying out or widening of a street, they are required to make an estimate of the expense, if over $10,000, once $25,000, and send it to the City Clerk, to be laid before the City Council for their concurrence, and not to take effect until so concurred in. By this act of concurrence a vote of only a majority of each branch is required, the authority having been given by the Legislature in the creation of the Board of Street Commissioners.

In such a case it would not be in the province of the City Council to make a rule requiring a two-thirds vote for the concurrence in such orders, for, if so, they might defeat the acts of the Street Commissioners. If they could make a rule requiring a two-thirds vote, they could also require a vote of nine-tenths or that it should be unanimous, and thus defeat the acts of the Commissioners. A legal decision, as declared by the Supreme Court, had determined this to be entirely disconnected from official acts, making it a quasi judicial authority, entirely separate from the general business of the city.

To satisfy himself entirely he had obtained the opinion of the City Solicitor, and he read the correspondence on the subject, as follows:

J. P. Healey, Esq., City Solicitor:

Dear Sir—Is section seven of the joint rules and orders of the City Council applicable to the vote of concurrence or rejection of the orders of the street Commissioners for the laying out, altering or discontinuing the streets?

Yours, truly,

E. O. SHEPARD,
President Common Council.

E. O. Shepard, Esq.:

Dear Sir—In my opinion the rule is not applicable to the case you put. The joint rules and orders of the City Council are for the government of the two branches when they are acting as the City Government, or branches of it, and only when they are so acting. When the members of the City Council are called upon to concur or non-concur with the Street Commissioners in laying out or widening streets, they act as a tribunal created by law for these purposes, and entirely independently of their office as the City Government.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. P. HEALY, City Solicitor.

In his opinion, then, the joint rule of the City Council was not applicable to the Government of the two branches when acting upon an order of this kind. The act by which the Street Commissioners are governed is entirely independent of the City Government in this respect. And the Chair decides that the passage of the order requires but a majority vote.

The question was then stated to be upon the passage of the order.

The resolve and order were passed by a vote of 36 yeas to 25 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Adams, Barnes, Blackmar, Boardman, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Collins, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Denny, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Edwards, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Lamb, Mahan, Marston, McCue, Pease, Perkins, Prescott, Risteen, Tower, Train, Upham, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

Nays—Abbott, Anderson, Bicknell, Bleiler, Bowles, Caton, Dacey, Dean, Flatley, Flynn, Hughes, Jones, Kelley, Kingsley, Loring, Martin, McKenney, Page, Pickering, Powers, Shaw, Shepard, Thacher, Warren, Wells.

Mr. Perkins moved a reconsideration of the vote, which he hoped would not prevail, and the reconsideration was lost.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order to pay John Galvin $500, for expenses as Superintendent of Common and Public Squares.

Order authorizing the purchase of a self-acting fire engine, at not exceeding $2000.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not more than $300, for a gun rack for and repairs in the armory of Company A, Ninth Regiment.

The order for the appointment of a committee to make arrangements, at not exceeding $21,000, for the celebration of the Fourth of July, 1873, was considered.

Mr. West of Ward 16 moved as an amendment to substitute $15,000 for $21,000, believing that there should be a curtailment of expenses somewhere, and he did not know where it could be better done than in this matter.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 favored the amendment as a good one, and believed there was no city in the country where there was so much money expended for the celebration of the Fourth of July as in this city. He was a believer in the Fourth of July and in the celebration of it, but he had been led to look into the matter of expenditures, and believed that much of it was unnecessary.

Mr. Shaw gave an analysis of the expenditures under the direction of the Committee on the Celebration of the Fourth of July. In the matter of refreshments, the rowing regatta and goose race sub-committee, in an expenditure of $2267 33, expended $399 70 for refreshments; the refreshments of the sailing regatta sub-committee and an expenditure of $2267 33, amounted to $323 95; the refreshments of the General Committee on the Henry Morrison cost $846 50. The matter of the goose race was a particular subject of ridicule by him.

In the present condition of the finances of the City Government, when so many millions of dollars were expended for street improvements there should be a curtailment of expenditures. Before many years he believed there would be a financial crisis in the country, and now old commercial houses were going down, being obliged to pay from one-half to one per cent. per day for loans.

Mr. Shaw further stated as the debt of the city about $30,000,000 and in three years more it would amount to $50,000,000, increasing the interest account to $10,000 a day. It was time, then, he said, to stop and reflect upon the matter, and look before they leaped, that every dollar of illegal expense may be saved. The Council began early in the year to cut down expenses, and he would be glad to cut down the aggregate amount so as to prevent indiscriminate expenditures by sub-committees.

Mr. Wells said the amount proposed to be expended was less than that of last year, and he did not think that one day's amusement would be expensive at the price proposed. So far as printing was concerned, there were a great many members of the City Council who did not get a chance to ride on any other day, and it could not be expected that the committees would walk on that day. The amount of $25,000 expended was doubled in the advantages by the amount of trade brought into the city. The goose race he admitted was a failure. He would be willing to make the appropriations $18,000, and dispense with the refreshments.

Mr. Perkins said he had made an examination of the matter, and was satisfied that $15,000 was all sufficient. He hoped that all the other amendments would be voted down.

Mr. Pickering thought that $15,000 would be sufficient for the celebration of the Fourth of July in a proper manner. The committee might exercise a good discretion and save some of the expense, particularly that for a goose race. He thought the gentleman from Ward 5 was hard on the goose, for geese had saved an ancient city, and there was no knowing what they might do yet for us.

Mr. Flynn said he hoped the amendment would prevail, and he was about to offer an amendment to dispense with the fireworks.

Mr. Wells withdrew his amendment.

Mr. Shaw said if he had said anything for which he was sorry, he was willing to be forgiven. At least it would be supposed he was sound on the goose.

The order was amended to make the amount $15,000, and, as amended, the order was laid on the table.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following order:
Ordered, That with a view to the early closing of the present building on Marcella street, now occupied as a smallpox hospital, the Board of Health be respectfully requested to communicate to the City Council what in their judgment are the requirements of the city for a permanent hospital for the treatment of persons suffering from smallpox or other contagious diseases.

Alderman Stebbins stated that when this hospital was opened, he expressed the opinion that he should be among the first to have it closed when the exigency for its use had passed away. There were no doubt good objections to such a hospital in that neighborhood, that it would be an injury to the property there, and no doubt the assessors would so consider it. For that reason it was desirable to close it, if no longer needed.

The order was passed.

ORDER OF NOTICE.

On the proposed construction of a sewer in Eighth street, between Old Harbor and G streets. Hearing Monday next, April 28, 4 P. M.

REDUCTION OF NUMBER OF TRUANT OFFICERS.

Alderman Gaffield moved a reconsideration of the vote requesting the Mayor to make a reduction in the number of truant officers.

Alderman Power hoped the motion would not prevail, being of the belief that the Committee on Police had the best of reasons for asking that a reduction be made, after considering the subject thoroughly.

Alderman Gaffield said he had paid great attention to the subject, had spent many hours with the chief of the truant officers, was familiar with the nature of their duties, believed their services to be valuable to the schools, and a reduction in the number of them would prove to be an unfortunate thing to the schools.

Alderman Power said he supposed the Committee on Police understood what they were about when they reported in favor of a reduction. He had also given great attention to the subject, and if others do as much as the officer did at South Boston, six would be as many as were necessary for the whole city. He did not doubt they were all excellent men, and he had no fault to find with them; yet it was well known that there was a great pressure for appointment as a truant officer than for any other officer, for the reason that they had nothing to do for half the year, and but little duty to perform. The best of these officers had been police officers.

Alderman Sayward said he did not understand why a change was proposed, for if ten were needed years ago, the increase of population and of schools would call for an increase rather than a decrease of officers. If there was no need of them, and the police could do the duty as it seemed to be supposed, then abolish the office. But as it was, he believed there were none too many. The School Committee he believed to be better able to judge of the matter, and he could not vote for a reduction unless better reasons were given than had been, which were no reasons at all. If they had so little to do, as was urged, then reduce their pay.

Alderman Power referred to the vacations, the many holidays, Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, which these officers had, and said he believed the city did not need so many, any more than it needed two mayors, and if it had been an evil in past years in having too many of such officers it should not be tolerated any longer. He did not know the men; thought they were first-class men, but if $5000 to $7000 could be saved yearly they should save that sum. If the School Committee were the best able to judge of such matters, why did not the Alderman yield to their judgment in the matter of the normal school? He had no interest or feeling in the matter, nor anything against the truant officers, but the office was believed to be so desirable that a greater pressure was made for the appointments than there was for the office of Mayor.

Alderman Sayward said he would give his reasons in relation to the normal school when that question came up, but so far as related to holidays and not being obliged to work on Sundays, it was true of the banks and places of business. Neither was there trade in some articles, while parties might get ready on Sundays to sell.

Alderman Gaffield stated in relation to making reports, that the truant officers reported to the Mayor and not to the Chief-of-Police, who did not know whether or not they properly discharged their duties. These officers were the friends of the children. He might be willing to yield to a reduction to eight.

Alderman Power repeated that these officers were not employed half of their time. He had paid a great deal of attention to this subject, and believed it would be for the best interests of the city to reduce the number of these officers.

Alderman Sayward wished to know if a reduction was made to six, how it would affect these officers in making them work nights and Sundays.

Alderman Clark stated that the members of the Committee on Police had given a good deal of thought to the subject, and on consultation believed that six would be a sufficient number of truant officers, one each for East Boston, South Boston, Roxbury, and Dorchester, and two for the city proper. It was not a question with them as to whether half, three-quarters, or the whole of their time was engaged, but whether so many of them were needed. There was no doubt it was a desirable office, an easy berth, and there was a great pressure for it.

Alderman Sayward referred to the great distances which an officer in Ward 16 would be obliged to travel—five or six miles—from one schoolhouse to another. If the officers did not do all the duty which was desired of them, he supposed they did all they have to do. He had not heard many applicants for the office, and had not been troubled as he had been in a pressure to get upon the police.

Alderman Gibson said the committee had looked over the matter thoroughly, and believed that there were four men more than necessary. He did not look at it as affecting his district or others, but believed it was their duty to save money, if it could be saved. So far as related to territory, he did not believe it would be necessary for an officer to go over all of Ward 16, and was of opinion that the duties of the office were required among what would be called the lower orders of society, which was about twenty per cent. of the population. The committee had looked at the matter fairly and squarely, and believed it was for the interests of the taxpayers that some of these officers should be dropped.

Alderman Sayward said it was admitted that the committee did not know what the amount of duties of these officers was. If there ever was a need for ten officers he believed there was now, and it remained for the committee of this year to make the discovery that the officers were not needed.

Alderman Power replied that if an evil had existed, it was better late than never to remedy it. These men were an independent body, having a roving commission, with no one to report to, and that was a reason why so many desired to get into it. He hoped the committee would require them to report at some place.

Alderman Clark stated that it was contemplated requiring these officers to make a report every day at some place. Their duties were not so laborious but what they had a good deal of time. In regard to the matter the committee had the advice of those who know. With the best of abilities in such an office six would be ample. He did not suppose that Ward 16 would want two, for some parts of the city would require more than others. He presumed that six could attend to all the duties of the office as they ought to be attended to.

Alderman Sayward said he did not speak for Ward 16, as needing these officers, but for the school system. If four men could perform all the duties, as was recommended, it might be claimed that half of the police officers could do all the duties of that force; and if so, the expense of half could be saved. The police might be hired to do the duties of the office by the job. If there had been a necessity for so many officers, and an increase in everything else and in all departments of the city, why not increase these officers? He thought there was a doubt whether the number should be reduced.

Alderman Power believed that one fact proved that there was no need of so many officers, in their having so many half-days and holidays, and in not being employed all the time. It was a bad argument to make that because an evil had existed for years it should not be remedied.

Alderman Sayward said he did not see any evil to be remedied. These officers report to the Mayor and to the teachers of the schools, and to the head of the force.

Alderman Gibson said the committee had the Superintendent of Schools before them, and he had up-hill work to show that so many officers could find business to do. He would not give half price for men who do not work half the time, and would much prefer to pay a man $2000 for working the whole time, than to pay him $500 for half his time. For that reason it was that men working in the navy yard were not worth anything, but were ruined for work. Men should work enough to harden their muscle.

Alderman Power believed that the officers could hunt up information at the schools when in session, and in the afternoon, when there are no schools, and in the evening they could visit the homes of the children.

Alderman Sayward said it appeared to be the wish of the gentleman to make these officers work Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, Sundays and holidays. In reply to the Alderman from Ward 1, he said if it was an object to make men work more to develop their muscle, then why not bring back the old hours of working from sunrise to sunset? He did not, however, believe that the Alderman would work any more if he could make as much in three days as he could in a week.

Alderman Gaffield gave statistics to show the number of teachers and pupils in the schools, and expressed the belief that it would be for the best interests of education that the force should be increased rather than be decreased. The truant officers could better perform the duties than could the police officers, and it was not desirable to have the children frightened by a police officer. These officers were the friends of the children and sought, by kind words, to lead them to school, and to secure to them a good education, which should be for their benefit and the good of the country.

The motion to reconsider was lost—6 to 6—as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Emery, Gaffield, Hulbert, Quincy and Sayward.

Nays—Brown, Clark, Cutter, Gibson, Power and Stebbins.

NORMAL-SCHOOL ACCOMMODATIONS.

Alderman Gaffield moved to take up the special assignment—the report and order authorizing the unoccupied rooms in the Appleton-street Primary Schoolhouse to be furnished for the use of the normal school.

Alderman Sayward said he had little more to add to what he had said on the subject, and he believed it was an unnecessary change which took place a year ago, in part abolishing the normal school, and leaving the schoolhouse built for a Girls' High and Normal School to be a high school for girls exclusively. The house was large enough to accommodate both, and he could not see why there should be a change. Making such a separation by removing to the Rice School District meant a new schoolhouse for the Normal School. Was there such a necessity? He believed not, for there were but 554 scholars in the high school when the house was calculated for 1200. To make the change it would cost $9000 a year to educate 48 pupils. The expense of fitting up the schoolhouse would not be less than $1000.

Alderman Gaffield approved of the remarks of the Alderman in the case of the matter just disposed of, that those who have charge of such matters are the best capable of judging what is required. In regard to the necessities for the normal school, it would be much better to have ten or twelve classes for the training of teachers than it was last year to have but one class of primary scholars from the best families at the South End picked out for the purpose. The only expense would be for seats. The desks in the Rice School would answer all the purposes of the normal school.

Alderman Sayward made some statements relative to the transfer of the training school from Somerset street to the normal schoolhouse, and to the increase of salaries from $1500 originally to $9000; and he wished to know what right the School Committee had to abolish the normal school as they did, by the removal of the training school and the separation proposed.

Alderman Clark said he would like to hear from others who visited the normal school, on the invitation of the chairman of the Committee on Public Instruction. It seemed to him that the expense of fitting up the rooms for the accommodation of this school would be too large if it amounted to $2000.

Alderman Gaffield stated, in reply to an inquiry for information, that there were from sixty-five to seventy in the normal school.

Alderman Sayward said there were but forty-eight last year.

Alderman Gibson wished also for information from those who visited the school, but thought $9000 was a large sum for the education of so small a number.

Alderman Brown said he visited the school and was well repaid. He believed the accommodations asked for should be provided, and to furnish facilities in more classes to be taught would be more benefit than the cost of supplying chairs. Instead of $1200, he did not believe the expense would be more than $300. If they voted, as they had, large sums for other purposes, he did not think they should be afraid of this.

Alderman Sayward said he was not surprised at the change which had taken place among the members of the Board, but with reference to the expense he had the estimate of the Superintendent of Public Buildings, that not $300, but $1200 would be necessary. He had seen no reason why he should change his opinion from that of last week.

Alderman Emery said he was one of those who visited the school, as proposed, and was well pleased, but was disappointed in not meeting there the Superintendent of Public Buildings, through whom they could ascertain the cost of the proposed improvements. Without going into any particular figuring, it did not appear that the cost would be very great, but rather a small amount considering the good to come of it.

Alderman Sayward repeated that the figures which he had were made by the Superintendent of Public Buildings, at a cost of not less than $1200. Further the building on Newton street was designed both for a normal as well as a high school; and if the old master had been retained, the classes for the training schools would have remained in the house.

Alderman Brown asked for the items of the estimates given by the Superintendent of Public Buildings.

Alderman Sayward reported that he had none, but the cost was as estimated by the Superintendent.

Alderman Power said, he did not know that he understood the subject, and wished to know if there were the same number of classes in the high school-house to which instruction could be given.

Alderman Gaffield replied that it was not possible to have the same facilities in the high school-house, which there would be in having five or six primary-school classes and ten or twelve grammar school-classes.

Alderman Clark wished for information from other members of the Board who visited the school.

Alderman Sayward wished to know why a house which could accommodate 1200 pupils, could not provide for more than 554.

Alderman Bigelow said he visited the school, and while he was favorably disposed before making the visit, he was convinced in doing so that the expense to be incurred was desirable. A large expense would be justified in the elevation of the schools and teachers, which such a measure would secure.

Alderman Power thought it desirable that the young ladies should have a number of classes to teach, but if there was room for 1200 in the high school-house, and it could provide for 500 or 600 more than now, there was no necessity for another school.

Alderman Gaffield stated the uses to which the various rooms in the high school-house were put, and while there were 80 or 100 desks in some of them, he urged that two classes could not be put into one room, and with the continued increase in the number of scholars, there could not be the room for a normal school which was desirable.

Alderman Brown said that Mr. Hutchins, the chairman of the committee on the school, was present, and he would like to have him state the wants of the school.

Alderman Clark repeated his wish to hear from other members of the Board who visited the school.

Alderman Sayward objected to inviting others, not members, to address the Board, and believed that Mr. Hutchins had done his duty in personal conversations with the members of the Board in regard to the school. He repeated that he believed the present school-house was large enough for both schools.

Alderman Gibson, in view of the diversity of views among those who visited the school, moved that the order be laid on the table.

Alderman Gaffield replied that there was no diversity of opinion among those members of the Board who visited the school, for they were all agreed, so far as they had spoken, that the wants of the school required the passage of the order.

The motion to lay on the table was lost.

The question was taken on the passage of the order, and it was carried, by a vote of 7 to 5, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Brown, Clark, Emery, Gaffield, Hulbert, Quincy.

Nays—Cutler, Gibson, Powers, Sayward, Stebbins.

The list of jurors qualified to serve in the courts of Suffolk was accepted by the Board.

STATISTICS OF BOSTON.

Alderman Power submitted the report of Ellis W. Morton, employed under an order of December, 1870, "to procure and arrange for publication statistics relating to the city of Boston obtained for the ninth United States census."

The analysis gives the general result of the tables compiled, as follows:

The entire population of Boston, including Roxbury, annexed in 1867, and Dorchester, annexed in 1869, has increased, in seventy years, from 30,049 to 250,526. In none of the decennial periods has the increase fallen below 10,000. The increase, and the decennial percentage of increase, however, was much larger from 1830 to 1850 than during any other period of the city's career. Rising from 70,713 in the year 1830, to 107,347 in the year 1840, being an increase of 36,634, it kept on in a still greater ratio during the next decade—from 107,347 to 163,214; adding very near 100,000 to its population in twenty years. From this larger basis of 163,214, twenty years ago, it has made an increase of 87,312 during the last twenty years, of which 37,780 has been made during the last ten.

If we come to a comparison between 1865 and 1870, we find the total increase of population to be from 231,461 to 250,526, or 19,065. Of this increase, 6863 is of foreign males and 3314 of foreign females; 5783 of native males and 3105 of native females—or a total foreign increase of 10,177 and native increase of 8888. This foreign increase is upon a basis of 77,809, the total foreign population in 1865, while the native increase is upon a basis of 153,652, the native population of that year; so that while the per cent. of increase of the whole population is 8.24, that of the foreign population is 13.08.

Of the total foreign-born population, 87,986 in number, 56,903 are of Irish birth and 13,818 of British American; 5977 English, 5608 German, and all other 5680. Yet, with the exception of the German-born population, the percentage of increase has been less among the Irish than among other foreign-born persons, it being only 5.05 per cent., against 55.16 per cent. in the case of the natives of British America, and 15.08 per cent. in the case of the English. Under the head of "all other" nationalities, the increase from 1865 to 1870 was 1562, or 37.93 per cent.

Table III. shows, perhaps with more distinctness, the slight proportional increase of foreign-born over native-born persons. Of the population of 1865, the whole number being 231,461, the number of natives was 153,652, or 66.39 per cent., while the number of foreigners was 77,809, or 33.61 per cent. In 1870, the whole number being 250,526, the number of natives was 162,540, or 64.88 per cent.; foreigners 87,986, or 35.12 per cent. If we examine, in this table, the percentage of increase of foreigners of the various nationalities, we find that the Irish increase since 1865 has been from 54,166 to 56,903; a diminution of percentage of the whole population from 23.40 to 22.71 per cent.; there is also a diminution of the German percentage of the whole from 2.34 to 2.24 per cent.; the foreigners of other nationalities, on the other hand, exhibit an increase of percentage, mostly in the case of natives of British America.

The increase and diminution of population by wards, between the year 1865 and the year 1870, is shown in Table No. 5. All the wards show an increase of population except Ward 4, Ward 5, Ward 6, and Ward 8, where the aggregate diminution is 11,755. The large decrease in Ward 5, and the large increase in Ward 12, are no doubt mainly to be attributed to the Fort Hill-improvements. The relative increase of population by wards is shown by the table of "per cent. increase," and in this table, the wards which show an increase of population rank as follows: Ward 12, Ward 1, Wards 13, 14 and 15, taken together, Ward 11, Ward 9, Ward 7, Ward 16, Ward 2, Ward 10 and Ward 3. The population of the wards varies from 28,921 in Ward 7, to 8536 in Ward 13 (Highlands). The order in which they now rank, as regards population, is as follows: Ward 7, Ward 1, Ward 2, Ward 12, Ward 3, Ward 15, Ward 11, Ward 5, Ward 9, Ward 10, Ward 16, Ward 6, Ward 14, Ward 8, Ward 4, Ward 13.

Boston numbered, in 1870, among its population, natives of every State and Territory in the Union, except Nevada, Nebraska, and West Virginia, although Arkansas, Alaska Territory, and Washington Territory, having only one each, and Oregon having only two, narrowly escaped being included with the three places first named.

Of the entire population, one half (that is to say 125,341 out of 250,526) are white natives of this Commonwealth, and there are in addition 1279 colored natives of this State; and 154,652 are natives of the New England States. The natives of the Southern and Western States number about 3000. The white natives of Massachusetts are distributed by wards as follows:

Ward 1.....	12,761	Ward 9.....	7,081
" 2.....	11,321	" 10.....	7,266
" 3.....	6,920	" 11.....	8,284
" 4.....	4,340	" 12.....	11,490
" 5.....	6,291	" 13.....	4,565
" 6.....	5,155	" 14.....	6,790
" 7.....	13,203	" 15.....	7,297
" 8.....	5,271	" 16.....	7,806

The foreign-born white population is thus distributed:

Ward 1.....	8,567	Ward 9.....	4,214
" 2.....	11,423	" 10.....	3,654
" 3.....	5,014	" 11.....	3,447
" 4.....	3,451	" 12.....	5,846
" 5.....	6,222	" 13.....	3,305
" 6.....	2,884	" 14.....	3,120
" 7.....	13,880	" 15.....	6,223
" 8.....	3,450	" 16.....	2,884

In the twelfth table there is, in addition to this table of foreign-born persons, a table of persons of foreign parentage, in the aggregate, and by wards, which gives this result:

Foreign fathers.....	150,779
Foreign mothers.....	150,645
Foreign fathers and mothers.....	142,249

Exhibited by wards, it is not likely that the proportion between the wards differs materially from that in the table next given above.

The natives of Ireland are distributed in wards, as follows:

Ward 1.....	4,177	Ward 9.....	1,838
" 2.....	8,687	" 10.....	2,210
" 3.....	3,248	" 11.....	2,112
" 4.....	2,363	" 12.....	3,832
" 5.....	4,752	" 13.....	2,172
" 6.....	1,748	" 14.....	1,937
" 7.....	10,454	" 15.....	3,638
" 8.....	1,847	" 16.....	1,885

The colored population of Boston is 3513, being an increase of 1082 since 1865. Of the whole number, 3115 are of native and 398 of foreign birth; 162 of these last being from Nova Scotia and 65 from New Brunswick. Ward 6 contains 1778 of these colored inhabitants, and there appear to be none in Ward 13. Somewhat less than one-third of the colored people (or 1279) were born in Massachusetts; and of the remainder 770 were born in Virginia and 240 in Maryland. Of colored Africans there are only 9. We do not observe any other facts in regard to this small class of our population which call for further comment or analysis.

Table No. 7 exhibits the native white population by wards, classified by age and sex. We make the following summary:

Total number of native white males.....	78,052
" " " " females.....	81,373
" " " " colored males.....	1,517
" " " " females.....	1,568
" " " " foreign white males.....	40,130
" " " " females.....	47,458
" " " " colored males.....	188
" " " " females.....	210

This summary shows no great disparity between the sexes, except in the case of those of foreign birth, where the disparity might be expected to exist. If we look at the different ages, we find a considerable disproportion between males and females in some cases. For instance, between the ages of twenty and twenty-one, there are 1637 native white males, and 2023 native white females. From sixty-five to seventy there are 692 native white males and 933 native white females, and it will be observed that above this age the females considerably predominate in number. Over the age of ninety there are 27 native white females and only 8 native white males; though the one who is set down as having reached the age of one hundred is a male. The age of four persons, three of whom are in Ward 8 and one in Ward 12, is unknown. The same general fact regarding the great longevity of females is shown by Table No. IX., in relation to the foreign-born population.

The proportion of dwelling houses to families constitutes perhaps the most interesting table of what is called the "social statistics" of the city. This will be observed at a glance, in the first two columns of Table XII. The wards, as is to be expected, show a wide diversity in this respect; but we have not thought it necessary to point out, in any new summary or table, the statistics on this point.

The opportunities of secular education, in public and private schools, and in higher institutions of learning, are exhibited in the table of colleges, etc. It should be mentioned that the State Nautical School has been abolished since 1870. Nearly 700 public schools are in operation, with an average attendance of more than 33,000; and these are supported at an expense of $850,000, raised by taxation; yet there are 17,391 persons in the city who cannot read, and 23,420 who cannot write.

The Unitarians have the largest number of church organizations (27) and church edifices (26); the Methodists next (organizations 22, edifices 21). Next in order come the Congregationalists, the Roman Catholics, the Baptists and the Episcopalians. In the table of accommodation for the people the order is changed, and is as follows: 1st, Roman Catholic; 2d, Congregationalist; 3d, Unitarian; 4th, Baptist; 5th, Methodist; 6th, Episcopalian; and so on. In value of church property the order is—1st, Unitarian; 2d, Congregationalist; 3d, Roman Catholic; 4th, Episcopalian; 5th, Baptist; 6th, Methodist.

The facts in relation to the libraries and to the newspapers and periodicals are stated in the tables with sufficient conciseness, though the classification of the newspapers as "political and literary," is likely to mislead those who do not consider that the best of our daily papers are those to which the public look for their literary intelligence and reading.

The productive industry of Boston is partially exhibited in the table of manufactures, so various in their character as to embrace almost every field of ingenuity and contrivance.

It should be remarked here that, owing to many and peculiar difficulties in their collection, little confidence can be placed in the accuracy or the completeness of the statistics of manufactures. They are, of course, presented as officially recorded; but it seems just that they should be accompanied with a caution.

There are twenty-five branches of this description of industry, which yield more than a million dollars each of product, beginning with clothing (men's and women's), $18,757,621. To this add, though not in the order of product, but alphabetically, boots and shoes, carpets, coal oil, confectionery, furniture, gas, iron, curried leather, malt liquors, lumber, machinery (of all kinds $4,244,405), marble and stone work, molasses and sugar refined ($5,414,273), organs, pianofortes, paints, printing (of all descriptions $5,733,160), ship building and upholstery. Nearly as many more of these industries produce between half a million dollars and a million dollars each. The curious searcher will find many facts in this table from which he may deduce valuable, as well as interesting theories, and, perhaps, with a due degree of care, something better than theories.

For instance, it would not be very difficult, perhaps, to arrive at some useful conclusions as to the relative disproportion between the wages of men and women, and the comparative profitableness to the city of the different descriptions of productive industry. But this has not been deemed within the province of the compiler of these tables, and may be left to the skilled statistician and the political economist.

Under the head of Social Statistics may also be found certain figures as to valuation, public debt, taxation, pauperism, crime and wages, which are so concisely stated that they do not need any restatement or analysis. They are, besides, of comparatively small value, because, under most of these heads, later statistics may be found in works published by the city or the State Government.

Social Statistics—Under this head is given the city valuation, public debt, taxation, pauperism, crime, etc.

Wages—Average wages of a day laborer without board, $1 89; with board, $1 28. Average wages to a carpenter per day without board, $2 93. Average wages to a female domestic per week without board, 12½ to 15 cents per hour. Average price of board to laboring man per week, $4 44.

Libraries—One State library, 30,000 volumes; one Athenæum library, 88,800 volumes; public library of the city of Boston, 157,189 volumes; three libraries of courts, 10,000 volumes; one library of Theological Seminary, 5000 volumes; one library of Female Medical College, 400 volumes; twenty-two church libraries (pastors'), 9790 volumes; one Y. M. C. Association library, 4500 volumes; six libraries of various associations, 63,000 volumes; eighty-eight Sabbath-school libraries, 60,950 volumes; twenty circulating libraries (subscription), 65,386 volumes; two hundred and three private libraries, including those of lawyers and clergymen, 180,059 volumes.

Newspapers and Periodicals—7 political dailies, average circulation, 193,000; 4 political bi-weeklies, 20,000; 8 political weeklies, 59,700; 1 political bi-monthly, 1000; 1 religious daily, 8500; 9 religious weeklies, 138,500; 2 religious bi-monthlies, 14,000; 14 religious monthlies, 105,250; 1 religious quarterly, 650; 17 literary weeklies, 306,000; 14 literary monthlies, 262,000; 1 literary quarterly, 2500; 19 miscellaneous weeklies, 242,200; 2 miscellaneous bi-weeklies, 6000; 3 miscellaneous bi-monthlies, 23,000; 13 miscellaneous monthlies, 50,480; 4 miscellaneous quarterlies, 5100; 1 miscellaneous semi-annual, 4000.

The amendment to order concerning the discontinuance of rent of Armory First Battalion, by inserting "May" for "January," was concurred in.

The ordinance to amend an ordinance relating to the City Hospital being under consideration—

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said his attention had been called to this subject, and referring to section five of the ordinance, he said that so far as related to the smallpox hospital, that had been placed in the hands of the Health Department, and he believed it to be unnecessary to pass this amendment, inasmuch as the general arrangement of the affairs of the hospital were not interfered with, and it would be absurd to require the petty details of arrangements to be approved by the City Council.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 3 said he would like further time to look into the matter, and on his motion the ordinance was laid on the table.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

John S. Dunlap and Ivory Bean, for release of conditions upon eight lots of land bought by them of the city on Dedham street and Harrison avenue, in April, 1871. Referred to Committee on Public Lands.

ORDERS.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 offered several orders relating to the Common, etc., as follows:

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to contract with John Reardon for the care of Blackstone, Franklin, Worcester and Lowell squares and Union park, at an expense not exceeding $1650; to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 asked for information in relation to this order, stating that he supposed the Superintendent of the Common had the charge of all the public parks and squares.

Mr. Dacey said he could not answer the inquiry, but supposed the order was an usual one. It would be impossible, he supposed, for the Superintendent to attend to all the parks and squares, and he supposed he had the power to employ parties to superintend them, which, however, he corrected by saying that it was let out.

Mr. Denny said he did not know but what it was all right, yet from the terms of the order it did not appear that the person named was a laboring man, as the salary was more than would be paid. As they had one Superintendent of the Common, he did not know how they could have another, and until a further explanation was made, he hoped it would be laid on the table.

The order was laid over.

The following order was refused a second reading:

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to contract with Peter Callahan for the care of Maverick square, Belmont square, Central square and Putnam square and the trees in the streets of Ward 1, at an expense not exceeding $700; to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 subsequently moved a reconsideration of the rejection of the order, stating that there was a misapprehension in regard to it. It was customary to pass such an order for the care of the squares and trees in East Boston, and this should be passed.

The reconsideration prevailed, and the order was laid on the table.

The following orders were severally read once:

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to build a tool house on the Common, at an expense not exceeding $1200; to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $1800 in purchasing settees and in painting and repairing settees, fences and fountains on the Common, Public Garden and other public grounds; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $5850, for team work, carpenter work, mowing machines and tools for the Common, Public Garden and other public grounds; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $4000 in furnishing manure, loam and sods for the Common, Public Garden and other public grounds; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $8700 in furnishing trees, plants, shrubs and seeds for the Common, Public Garden, and other public grounds; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $7000 in furnishing gravel and concrete for walks and malls on the Common, Public Garden and other public grounds; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to expend not exceeding $5000 in improving the condition of Washington park; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for the Common and Public Grounds.

Mr. Train of Ward 13 asked for an explanation of the expenditures of these orders, whether they were separate matters entirely from the general appropriation for the Common and Public Grounds.

The Chair replied that he supposed they were so.

On motion of Mr. Hall of Ward 10—

Ordered, That the Street Commissioners be requested to report to the City Council the expense of widening Water street to fifty feet from Congress street to Broad street, and of extending the same to Atlantic avenue.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12, from the Committee on Ordinances, to whom was referred the communication from the Mayor, recommending an increase of the force in the law department, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying ordinance authorizing the appointment of a third assistant to the City Solicitor:

An ordinance to amend an ordinance relating to the Law Department.

Section 1. The ordinance relating to the Law Department, passed the 2d day of April, 1866, and amended the 11th day of April, 1868, is hereby further amended by striking out in the fifth line of the second section the word "two," and inserting in place thereof the words "a first, a second and a third."

Mr. Dean, in explanation of the ordinance, said the committee had given great attention to the subject, and while they did not comply with all that was required, they believed it was necessary to provide for another assistant to the City Solicitor. The great increase of the law business made it necessary, and this increase was a result of the growth of the city. It was found necessary, often, to have two persons in the courts at the same time, the City Solicitor was required to attend to various causes, and whenever streets were widened and land taken it becomes necessary in every instance to have the titles examined. This now makes a large amount of business.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 expressed himself as in favor of the ordinance, but he would prefer the organization of a law bureau. With the most profound confidence in the ability of Mr. Healy, the City Solicitor, not excelled by any one, he would have an advocate skilled in addressing juries, and many men of less ability than the Solicitor might perhaps do better in that respect. He did not believe in having a City Solicitor attend before committees of the Legislature, which was of no practical benefit, and he doubted the power of such an officer to pledge the city in matters coming before legislative committees, unless instructed so to do. His belief was that the City Solicitor should have power to employ a competent advocate to appear before juries.

The ordinance was passed.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12, from the Committee on Ordinances, to whom were referred the communications from the Mayor recommending an increase of compensation for the officers of the Law Department, and the order establishing the salaries of the City Solicitor and his assistants and clerk during the ensuing year, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the salaries of the following-named officers, for the year beginning on the 1st day of April, 1873, shall be as herein-mentioned, to be paid monthly, subject to the deduction of any and all sums due from such officers to the city, namely: To the City Solicitor, $6000 per annum; to the first and second assistants of the City Solicitor, $3000 each per annum; to the third assistant of the City Solicitor, $2500 per annum; to the clerk of the City Solicitor, $1500 per annum.

Mr. Dacey, from the same committee, made a report dissenting from the recommendation of the majority in regard to the increase of compensation for the officers of the Law Department and recommended the passage of the accompanying order, establishing the salaries of those officers for the ensuing year, at the rates heretofore paid:

Ordered, That the salaries of the following-named officers for the year beginning on the first day of April, 1873, shall be as herein mentioned, to be paid monthly, subject to the deductions of any and all sums due from such officers to the city, namely: to the City Solicitor, $5000 per annum; to the assistants of the City Solicitor, $2500 each per annum; to the clerk of the City Solicitor, $1500 per annum.

Mr. Dacey, in sustaining his report, said he agreed with the committee in providing an additional assistant City Solicitor, but could not agree to any increase of salaries. Besides the salaries received, it appeared that a large amount was received as perquisites. In all trustee suits there were costs of $5 or $6, which go to the solicitors, and where lands which have been taken are deeded back, the cost of making of the deeds goes to the Solicitor's office. The salary proposed to be paid to the Solicitor is the same as that received by the justices of the Superior Court and the district attorney, and that of the assistants is the same as received by the assistant district-attorney, with the opportunity of making more by private practice, which these judges and attorneys cannot have. It would be doing injustice to increase the salaries, and he moved to substitute the minority report for that of the majority.

Mr. Dean, in reply, said the making of a minority report was the best evidence that the subject had received careful consideration. There were those of the committee who at first agreed with the gentleman who made the minority report, yet upon further consideration believed there should be an increase of salaries. The assistants, though young, are familiar with the business of the office, and it was believed to be good economy to secure their services. As to the perquisites spoken of, they were but a trifle, and may amount to $200 a year, with a considerable amount for the making of deeds.

The City Solicitor is required to be up early in the morning, working by gas light, and remains up till late at night, and with three hundred and sixty cases in court, he calls upon him to answer inquiries from various sources, the increase of business from the growth of the city, he is called upon to labor more than any person in connection with the City Government. As was justly said by the gentleman from Ward 5, he is possessed of very rare acquirements in municipal law, and the salary proposed is small enough. It was not altogether correct to compare his salary with judges' and others, which are all low enough, and are the smallest in the community for the services. Presidents of insurance companies and banks are paid much higher salaries, with less labors.

A comparison with the heads of departments shows the labor to be different and the value to be different, and while they are not obliged to get to their offices before certain hours, and leave them at a fixed time, when their labor ceases, the Solicitor's labor is continued early and late. The capacity of the assistants is much greater than the salary which this proposes to give, the first-assistant being often called upon to compete with the ablest of lawyers in the trial of cases.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 said the gentleman had given excellent reasons why there should be an increase in the force in the Law Department, and he believed the Council would be unanimous in voting for such an increase; but he had given no reason for an increase of salaries. Their labors were arduous, requiring the best of legal talent, and in addition to the salaries there were perquisites, the amount of which was not told. He had not heard any reason for an increase of the salary to the highest point given by the city, and for that reason he should vote for the report of the minority rather than that of the majority of the committee.

Mr. Dean said it seemed to him that the labors of the City Solicitor were the poorest paid of any office in the City Government. They paid $5000 a year to persons in responsible positions, who go to their offices at eight or nine o'clock and leave them at five, while the Solicitor, a man to whom they intrust the most important pecuniary affairs of the city, is constantly tried and taxed with his labors, and if he makes a blunder or commits an error, he loses in a day what would be the amount of his salary. He is called to encounter the strongest men of the bar, and there are required of him attainments, skill and industry far beyond anything in the City Government. The amount asked for is much less than can be earned by any skilful lawyer in full practice, and any one knows that a man like him in private practice can earn a great deal more money.

As to the services of the assistants, when they are compared with the salaries of $3000 paid to persons in different departments in every part of the city, without a quarter of the skill or ability, the pay is not great. One of the assistants is required to try very important causes, and the amount of increase, but $500, is small. The perquisites, with trifling exceptions, go to the conveyancer, the third assistant, is to have but $2500, as proposed, and the amount of perquisites may make his pay come up to the others.

Mr. Dacey replied that there was no doubt about the competency of the City Solicitor, but the question was whether there should be an increase of his salary, when he can earn just as much outside of his salary. As to the Solicitor's working early and late, it was no wonder, when one of his assistants goes to Europe and another to California; and they should remain at home and he should go to bed earlier.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 believed there was a disposition in the City Council to give ample salaries, and he had not heard of an increase being asked for. It could not be expected that salaries should be raised in proportion to the increase of business, but with the increase they should add to the force. For instance, the increase in the business in the treasury did not call for a great increase of work from him, but for an increase of force in his office. An increase of the force was a virtual increase of the salary, for a man who works all the time cannot be expected to work any more.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 stated that as a member of the committee he had considered the question in all its various branches. The Council was not disposed to increase salaries, and with that disposition they would not vote in accordance with the views of the committee unless they took time to consider the question. The Committee on Ordinances held various meetings and the conclusion was not hastily arrived at. It was considered in all its phases, and they heard the same arguments used here, and were not disposed to urge a great increase of salaries. The question came before them through the Mayor, who asked for an increase of the force and urged the necessity of paying a larger sum in salaries than that paid now.

The gentleman from Ward 2 was in accord with the committee in most matters. It was agreed that Mr. Stackpole devoted his entire time to the duties of his office, and had no perquisites, working by day and by night. He should have an addition to his salary, just what the committee said. A young, smart, intelligent advocate, capable of enduring hardship, was required, and the gentleman from Ward 5 had represented the views which were entertained by the Committee on Ordinances. In the position of first assistant, he is obliged to meet the best legal talent of the State. Mr. Healy needs assistance, and he came before the committee stating that he has persons associated with him familiar with all the duties of the office, and know all about the cases pending, but if they are not well paid they will resign and new men be required.

In view of this possibility, the question is, is it better to refuse an increase of pay after the services of several years—to refuse the request of the Mayor and City Solicitor so far as relates to the salary of the City Solicitor. It was feared that an increase would meet with opposition, not because it was too large, but because it might endanger the other part of the ordinance. Before the question was taken on the minority report, he hoped the council would take time for the consideration of the subject. Believing that no one would wish to vote against what would be for the best interests of the city, and in order to give more time for its consideration, he would move to lay the reports on the table.

The motion was withdrawn at the request of Mr. Dean, who stated the manner in which the subject came before the Council and the committee, and the communication of the Mayor was read at his solicitation.

Mr. Shaw said he was not aware that his views were in accord with those of the committee until stated by his colleague, and he had not mentioned them to any member of the committee, while the fact was gratifying to him. He believed the proper way to dispose of the question was to grade the salaries of the assistants. The salary of $6000 was not too much for the City Solicitor, and it should be higher rather than lower, for it was the most important office in the City Government.

After speaking of the great ability of the Solicitor, he said he believed that fifty lawyers as competent as were the assistants would jump at the chance of getting the positions held by them, for the purpose of getting experience and being brought into notice; for it would be worth more than $2000 for the name alone. There could be no fair comparison of the services of the City Solicitor with those of his assistants; for his age and experience and his profound learning were not to be spoken of in comparison with the services of young men. He agreed with his colleague that greater physical ability was desirable in the services of an advocate, and he would have the assistants graded. He would amend by making the salary of the City Solicitor $6000, the first assistant $3000, the next $2500, and the third $2000.

Mr. Dean, in answer to the gentleman from Ward 6, said there could not be an increase of the force in this case, as in others which he stated, to meet the necessities of the office. With 360 cases for trial, often two to be tried at the same time, and preparations to be made for others, there must be a pressure which an increase of force could not meet. The committee believed that although their report might meet with opposition, they would do their duty, and the Council must take the responsibility in the matter. It was not until the danger of losing the services of efficient men, and a call made by the Mayor, that this report was made, and if it was not a necessity it comes in the strongest form. He moved to lay the report on the table, which was carried.

On motion of Mr. Page of Ward 9, it was ordered that when the Council adjourns, it be to Thursday evening next, eight o'clock, and that eight o'clock be the hour of the meeting of the Council until otherwise ordered.

Alderman Power presented the petition of the Beacon Base Club, in behalf of the young men and boys of Boston, renewing their request for a restoration of the western portion of the Common as a playground, in support of which they state that no sufficient reason has been given why this portion of the Common should not be restored to its former use as a playground for all; that while great efforts have been made to prove ball playing dangerous to passers by, but two cases of more than trifling injury have been found; that the only opposition to this use of the parade ground comes from a small number of the wealthy residents of the locality, who are able to afford expensive recreation on land and water, and who for the sake of having this portion a little more beautiful to the eye, would deprive hundreds of young men of the exercise necessary for their bodily health, which exercise they are able to obtain in no other place; that at the recent hearing the majority of the committee gave more heed to the objections of a few wealthy citizens, most of whom pass the summer months, when the playground is in requisition, away from the city, than to the interests of the young men who are unable to afford expensive recreations, nor have the time to go to the outskirts of the city to obtain exercise; that there is no other place within the city limits sufficiently large and accessible to schools and business offices.

They further urge that Madison square and Orchard park are utterly unsuited for this purpose on account of distance, and in addition Madison square is of such small size and so surrounded by buildings that the windows of the neighboring houses would be in constant danger of destruction by balls, if many should make use of the ground. They further represent that the small portion of the Common still devoted to athletic sports is inadequate to the needs of the large number who wish to use it, and accompany the request with a petition of a large number of voters who are in favor of this restoration.

The petition was signed by C. A. Bartol and others, 2088 in number, in which they urge—

That the Common was intended as a pleasure ground and not as a highway; that there is room enough, without the parade ground, to supply the need of a promenade; that the health of the youth of the city is of more importance than mere beauty in a public park; that the boys have been gradually driven from every other part of the Common, the whole of which they formerly enjoyed, and that the public welfare does not require further restrictions; that the small portion of the parade ground that is devoted to athletic sports is entirely inadequate for the large number who wish to use it, and that there is no other place within the limits of the city sufficiently large and accessible to schools and business offices.

The petition was read, when Alderman Power moved that the petitioners be granted a hearing on Monday next, at 4½ o'clock, before the Board. Amended to include the remonstrants, when the order for a hearing was passed.

A jail requisition for $1872 34 was approved.

HEARINGS ON ORDERS OF NOTICE.

The hearings on orders of notice on the proposed construction of a sewer in Eighth street, between Old Harbor and G streets, and of H. Blunt for leave to locate and use a steam engine and boiler at No. 715 Tremont street, were taken up. No person appearing in relation thereto, the reports were recommitted.

The hearing on order of notice on petition of the Highland Street Railroad Company for extension of location in Dudley street, between Warren street and Mount Pleasant avenue, was taken up.

W. A. Field, for the Metropolitan Railroad Company, objected to the granting of the location, on the ground that it was formerly a location of the Metropolitan road, and discontinued in 1865 under the direction of the Board of Aldermen of Roxbury, on consideration of granting sundry other locations. This discontinuance of track of a quarter of a mile was declared to be useless by the conditions of the new locations. They therefore object to the granting of this location, because it was once granted to them, and then revoked on conditions. If the public convenience require the laying of tracks, they were ready to lay tracks and run cars, but if unnecessary, the grant should not be made to any one.

T. W. Clarke, for petitioners, stated as his understanding of the case relative to the Metropolitan Railroad, that, having the right to run their cars through Goid row, and desiring to connect their tracks from Warren street and Eustis street with their tracks more directly on Washington street, new locations were granted on condition of discontinuing the track on Dudley street, as formerly used. The residents of Winthrop and Grenville streets and of Mount Pleasant avenue were desirous of car accommodations, had petitioned the Legislature almost unanimously for the extension of the tracks of the Highland Street Railroad, and were now desirous that the location should be granted. He believed that the Metropolitan Railroad Company had now about as much track as they could take care of, and there was no necessity for their use of this location.

The report was recommitted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order to pave Columbus avenue, from Berkeley street to the bridge, with wood, at an estimated expense of $9000.

Order for the purchase of hose for the Fire Department from time to time as needed, to the extent of ten thousand feet.

Order to set back the fence projecting over the line of Brookline avenue, south of Maple avenue, and cut down trees over said line.

Order to macadamize Commonwealth avenue, and set edgestones between Clarendon and Dartmouth streets, at an estimated cost of $4500.

Order to grade Second street from O to P street, and P street from First to Third street, at an estimated expense of $500.

Order to macadamize Woodbine street, and set edgestones between Warren street and Blue-Hill avenue, at an estimated expense of $6000.

Order to pave Chandler street from Tremont to Berkeley street with small granite blocks, etc., at an estimated expense of $12,000.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The petitions of Charles L. Beal, Harriet D. Green, Samuel G. Snelling, Alexander Beal and others, D. C. M. Rupp and others, and of John S. Dunlap and Ivory Bean, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Ordinance to amend ordinance relating to the Law Department, so as to provide for an additional Assistant-Solicitor.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $125, in repairing gunrack in armory of Company E, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., Eliot street.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $175, in repairing gunrack of Company C, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., Northampton street.

Order allowing $200 to each post of the Grand Army of Republic in Boston, towards expenses of "Decoration Day."

The order authorizing the employment of additional assistance in the office of Chief-Engineer of Fire Department, was referred to the Committee on the Fire Department.

FURTHER WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

The following order was passed, in concurrence:

Order for Board of Street Commissioners to report the estimated expense of a further widening of Water street to fifty feet, between Congress and Broad streets, and of its extension at said width to Atlantic avenue.

Alderman Clark subsequently moved a reconsideration of the vote concurring in the passage of the order, believing there was no reason for such an expenditure at the present time, and it would not be just to require the Street Commissioners to report upon the measure within sixty days.

The reconsideration was carried, and on a further motion the order was laid on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Public Instruction, to whom were recommitted the orders authorizing the purchase of land on Marlborough street, between Gloucester and Fairfield streets, for the purpose of locating thereon a primary schoolhouse, made a report that upon the application of the committee, an act has been passed by the Legislature authorizing the State Commissioners on Public Lands to sell directly to the city a lot of land on the "Back Bay" for school purposes. The city is thus enabled to obtain a suitable site without entering into competition with other buyers. The passage of the accompanying orders is respectfully recommended:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Instruction be authorized to purchase of the State Commissioners on Public Lands, at an expense not exceeding $50,000, a lot of land situated on Marlborough street and Exeter street, containing 22,962 square feet, more or less, to be used for the purposes of a primary school.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $50,000, to be applied to the purchase of land for a primary school in Ward 6.

On a motion to suspend the rules for the passage of the order, Alderman Gaffield stated the circumstances under which the report was made, and in relation to the lot, he said it would be large enough for a grammar schoolhouse as well as for a primary schoolhouse.

The orders were passed.

COCHITUATE WATER BOARD.

Alderman Bigelow, for the joint special committee appointed to nominate suitable candidates for members of the Cochituate Water Board, made a report recommending the election of Thomas Gogin and Charles R. McLean to fill the vacancies occurring in said board on the first Monday in May.

The report was accepted, and the Board proceeded to an election, the candidates proposed being elected by ten votes each.

FRANKLIN FUND.

Alderman Hulbert, from the committee appointed to examine the accounts of Frederic U. Tracy, the Treasurer of the Franklin Fund, made a report that they found the same to be correct as presented by said Treasurer, from which it appears that the state of said fund is as follows:

Balance January 1, 1872	$160,911 15
Interest accrued	10,404 65

Amount of fund January 1, 1873	$171,315 80
--------------------------------	--------------

The report was accepted.

Alderman Hulbert, from the committee to whom was referred the application of Herbert C. Locke, for the benefit of the Franklin Fund, made a report, recommending that the same be granted, the securities being satisfactory. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Paving, made a report recommending reference to the Committee on Sewers on the petition of William R. Austin and others for a sewer in Pleasant street, near Pearl street, to carry off surface water. Accepted.

Alderman Gaffield, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Treffe Garceau, to be compensated for personal injuries caused by an alleged defect in Washington street at the junction of Linden park, made a report recommending that the petitioner have leave to withdraw; also leave to withdraw on the petition of William Holliday, to be compensated for injuries to his property by the acts of the Board of Health in overflowing his lands on Huntington avenue for the purpose of abating a nuisance. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses, as follows: Edwin Rupert, to give a dramatic entertainment at Nassau Hall, April 28; W. C. Pope, to open the St. James Theatre for dramatic performances, May 5; William McNiel, to exhibit a panorama at Summer Hall, May 3; also a license to Nehemiah T. Merritt, as an auctioneer; and licenses to nineteen persons as victuallers and innholders, for transfer of hack licenses, for wagon stands, wagon licenses, to keep intelligence offices, etc. Severally accepted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on applications for licenses as victuallers, as follows: John Danden, Craigie's Bridge; Joseph Lambrecht, 148½ Hanover street; Owen Head, 121 Cambridge street; M. H. Sullivan, 1568 Washington street; Isabella A. Hanley, 104 Lewis street; Michael Keenan, 78 Portland street; William Hurley, 124 Beach street, and revoking for cause the license to William H. Merriam, as an auctioneer, 11 Pemberton square, and the wagon license of Andrew Merrithew. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of stables, as follows: Boston & Albany Railroad Company to occupy a wooden stable for four horses, corner of Clyde and Marginal streets; S. & A. R. Whittier, to occupy a wooden stable for twelve horses, rear 502 Harrison avenue; Jacob Dicker to occupy a wooden stable for one cow and one horse, on Heath avenue, Ward 15; Thomas Connor, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse, rear of 26 Cherry street, Ward 14; Cecelia Lewis, to occupy a wooden stable for three horses, on Dunreath place, on condition that the stalls shall be placed in the L part of the carriage house nearest her dwelling, and but one of said stalls shall be considered for permanent use. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clarke, from the Committee on Police, to whom was referred the petition of the agent of Barnum's Circus, for leave to parade through certain streets in the city of Boston, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That permission be granted to the agent of Barnum's Circus for the occupation of the following-named streets by a procession on the 12th day of May next: Columbus avenue, Berkeley street, Boylston street, Arlington street, Beacon street, Charles street, Cambridge street, Bowdoin square, Chardon street, Merrimac street, Hanover street, Court street from Hanover street to Tremont street, Tremont street from Scollay square to Beacon street, Beacon street to Charles street, Charles street to Park square, Park square to Pleasant street, Tremont street to Chester park, Chester park to Columbus avenue. And the Chief-of-Police is hereby directed to clear the said streets and squares for the passage of the procession.

The report was accepted and the order was passed.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR SUFFOLK-STREET DISTRICT.

The Joint Special Committee on the Suffolk-street District beg leave to represent, that an appropriation of two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars will be required to pay the executions issued by the Supreme Judicial Court upon the awards of the Commissioners appointed to assess damages on account of the taking of certain estates on the Suffolk-street District, under the provisions of Chapter 277 of the acts of the year 1868.

The appropriations heretofore made for the improvement of the Suffolk-street District amount to..... $2,106,248 96
The total amount expended to this date (including drafts remaining unpaid) 2,075,397 93

Unexpended balance..... $30,851 03

This amount will be required to complete the unfinished work on the district.

The executions remaining unpaid, with interest thereon to date, will amount to about $275,000.

The committee would, therefore, respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order.

For the committee,

L. R. CUTTER, Chairman.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars; to be added to the appropriations heretofore made for the improvement of the Suffolk-street District.

The order was read twice and passed.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL CLAIMS.

The Committee on Claims, to whom were recommended the reports upon the petitions of Smith & McGaragle and Holohan & Maguire to be paid for labor performed and materials furnished in the construction of the Smallpox Hospital on Swett street, which was destroyed by fire December 26, 1872, made a report that upon a statement of the facts in their cases the City Solicitor has given the following opinion:

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE,
BOSTON, April 21, 1873.

To the Committee on Claims: Gentlemen—The claims of Messrs. Smith & McGaragle and of Messrs. Holohan & Maguire against the city of Boston, in regard to the validity of which you request my opinion, depend more upon questions of fact than upon questions of law. In each case the parties entered into an agreement to do a specified job for a specified price, and they are not entitled to receive the price unless they completed the job.

In the case of Smith & McGaragle it seems to be quite clear that they had not completed their work. They state, in effect, in their petition to the City Council, that the building at the time of the fire was in their possession and that they intended to deliver it to the city the following day.

The case of the plumbers, Holohan & Maguire, stands upon the same ground as that of Smith & McGaragle, with the exception that they had no formal delivery of their work to make, the premises upon which the work was done not being in their possession. The statement of facts submitted to me finds that the job was "substantially" done. If this means that it was completed, the contractors having done all they stipulated to do, are entitled to be paid the contract price; if it means that it was not completed, but was in some stage of progress approaching completion, then, the job being unfinished, the contractors are not entitled to any payment on account of it.

The fact that the plumbing materials saved from the conflagration were appropriated to the use or benefit of the city is evidence tending to show that they who received them for the city supposed that the contractors had completed their job, and were entitled to payment for it; and if the persons so acting for the city had authority to accept the work when completed, their action, as described, would tend pretty strongly in favor of the contractors' claim.

I am, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,
J. P. HEALY.

In accordance with the views here presented, the committee would respectfully recommend that Messrs. Smith & McGaragle have leave to withdraw their petition, and that the claims of Messrs. Holohan & Maguire be paid.

Signed by Alderman Cutter for a majority of the committee.

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Messrs. Holohan & Maguire the sum of $1240, in full compensation for labor performed and materials furnished in the plumbing for the Smallpox Hospital on Swett street, which was destroyed by fire on the 26th of December, 1872; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for the erection of a Smallpox Hospital.

The undersigned, a member of the Committee on Claims, respectfully dissents from so much of the foregoing report as relates to the claims of Messrs. Smith & McGaragle, and would respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order.

WILLIAM G. THACHER.

Ordered, That all in excess of the sum of $5000, collected by the City Treasurer as insurance on the Smallpox Hospital destroyed by fire on the 26th of December, 1872, be paid over to Messrs. Smith & McGaragle, contractors for the erection of said hospital, and that in addition thereto, there be allowed and paid to said Smith & McGaragle the sum of $6200, said payments, with the payments already made on said contract, to be in full compensation for labor performed and materials provided by said Smith & McGaragle on account of the erection of said building; said sum of $6200 to be charged to the appropriation for the erection of a Smallpox Hospital.

A motion for a suspension of the rules, for the consideration of the report, was carried.

A question was raised what effect it would have to pass the order to pay the claim of Holohan & Maguire, in its relation to the report on the claim of Smith & McGaragle.

Alderman Gaffield believed it would virtually give the other petitioners leave to withdraw.

Alderman Sayward called for the ruling of the Chair on the question, and the Chair ruled that as the order was a part of the report, its passage would virtually give the other parties leave to withdraw.

Alderman Sayward moved to substitute the report of the minority for that of the majority.

The motion was lost, by a vote of 5 to 5.

The question being upon the passage of the order appended to the majority report—

Alderman Power in explanation stated that he had paired with Alderman Gibson who was away, yet if he were at liberty he should have voted for the minority report.

Alderman Sayward called for the ruling of the Chair on the vote just taken, believing there had been a mistake made, and the Chair declared that the motion to substitute the report of the minority of the committee for that of the majority was lost.

The question was taken on the adoption of the report of the majority, and was declared to be carried, when a doubt was raised and a count made.

Alderman Clark said he should vote for the plumbers' bill, as he determined when the question was up before, as a bill which the city was legally and equitably bound to pay. But he could not see how that would prevent them from voting for the report of the minority. If voting for the majority report was voting against paying Smith & McGaragle, then he should vote for the minority report. He was in doubt how to act in the matter to secure what he wished.

Alderman Brown moved to lay the reports on the table, and that with the opinion of the City Solicitor they be printed. To his mind the matter was rather cloudy, and he presumed it was so, too, to the minds of other members of the Board.

Alderman Sayward said he would second the motion, for he did not understand the opinion of the City Solicitor.

Alderman Quincy believed it would be but fair to both parties to have such a delay that gentlemen may know how to vote. If there was any way in which the portions of the report could be divided, it should be done, and he hoped the motion would prevail, that it may be better understood.

The motion to lay on the table was carried.

REPORT OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Alderman Clark presented the thirty-fifth annual report of the Boston Fire Department, which was ordered to be sent down.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Committee on Bathing be authorized to repair and maintain free public bathing houses for men and boys and for women and girls in different sections of the city, at an expense not exceeding $15,500; also to employ such assistance as may be required for the proper care and management of the several houses, at an expense not exceeding $18,000; said sums to be charged to the appropriation for Public Baths.

Ordered, That there be paid to John C. Tucker the sum of $800, in full compensation for all damages caused to his estate, No. 172 Chambers street, by the raising of the grade of said street, by order of the Board of Aldermen, September 17, 1872, upon the usual conditions; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Paving.

Ordered, That there be paid to Michael Downey the sum of $1375, in full compensation for all damages caused to his estate, corner of Circuit and Regent streets, by the lowering of the grade of Circuit street, as ordered by the Board of Aldermen September 26, 1871, and for all damages which may be caused to said estate by the lowering of the grade of Regent street, as ordered by the Board of Aldermen March 1, 1873, upon the usual conditions; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Paving.

Ordered, That the Chief-of-Police be directed to close School street between Washington and Province streets against public travel April 30, between the hours of 7 and 10 o'clock A. M., during the process of removal of a staging from the new building erected on said street.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to sell, by auction or otherwise, the building now upon the engine-house lot, corner of Warren and Quincy streets, Ward 14, and pay the proceeds of said sale to the City Treasurer.

Ordered, That the Directors for Public Institutions be authorized to allow the Winthrop Railroad Company to move a wooden building upon a portion of the city farm at Winthrop for a temporary purpose only, in order to facilitate the running of the horse cars to Point Shirley.

Ordered, That the Committee on County be authorized to remove the clock tower from the County Jail; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for the County of Suffolk.

Alderman Sayward stated in support of the above order, that the tower had decayed, and the clock was of no use to persons connected with the jail, and it was designed to remove the tower and run the roof up a pitch.

Alderman Gaffield objected to the removal of the clock, which was useful to residents in that portion of the city, and he hoped the tower, if necessary, would be repaired, and that the clock would remain where it is.

On his motion, the order was laid on the table.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That a bill of S. B. Heustis, police officer, for extra services at evening schools, amounting to $6, be allowed for payment by the Auditor of Accounts, provided it is approved in the usual manner.

Ordered, That there be paid to Henry Kelley the sum of $150, for land taken from the heirs of John Brooks, and all damages occasioned by the extension of Harrison avenue, by a resolve of the Board of Aldermen, November 11, 1870, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Extending Harrison Avenue.

Ordered, That there be paid to Seth Pettee the sum of $407.40, for land taken by resolve of the Street Commissioners, Oct. 28, 1872, for the widening of Cottage street, upon the usual conditions; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Widening Streets.

Alderman Stebbins offered the following order: . .

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be requested to consider the expediency of removing the public drinking fountain at the easterly end of the Old State House, the same being an obstruction to public travel.

The question being upon the passage of the order—

Alderman Stebbins stated that the drinking fountain was in the direct line of travel through Devonshire street.

Alderman Clark, pending a doubt, said he did not see the necessity of opening streets if they were to be obstructed as this would be by allowing the fountain to remain there.

Alderman Stebbins, in reply to objections, stated that the order was simply one of inquiry into the expediency of removing the fountain.

The order was passed.

ORDERS READ ONCE.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen,
MAY 1, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at eight o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The annual report of the Boston Fire Department (City Doc. No. 53, 1873) was ordered to be placed on file.

The petitions of John R. White & Son, William R. Clark, Dyer & Gurney and Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation were severally referred, in concurrence.

A paper relative to assistance in the Fire Department office, which was referred in concurrence, was subsequently reconsidered and non-concurred in. Mr. Pease of Ward 1 stating that it was sent to the Council through a mistake.

The following reports were accepted, in concurrence:

Reports of leave to withdraw on petitions—

1. Of William Holliday, to be paid for damages to land on Huntingdon avenue, by action of Board of Health.

2. Of Trefle Garceau, for compensation for injuries from defect in a highway.

The order to pay bill of S. B. Heustis, police officer, of $6, for extra services, was read once.

The order authorizing the sale, by public auction or otherwise, of the building on the Engine-house lot, corner of Warren and Quincy streets, Ward 14, being under consideration—

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 inquired what the property was which was for sale, why it was to be sold, and why the term "or otherwise" was used.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 replied that the building was of two stories and much dilapidated, was very old, probably two hundred years, and could not well be removed.

Mr. Shaw said he was contending, for principle in this matter, for all sales of the kind by the city should be by public auction. It had been repeatedly charged that members of the City Government had obtained property sold by the city, at a less price than by public sale, and he would move that the words "or otherwise" be struck out.

The motion was carried.

The order authorizing a bathing house to be constructed for men and boys at Mt. Washington Bridge, at not exceeding $4000, was considered.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 inquired whether the building proposed was needed, and whether it could be completed by the time required for its use.

Mr. Whiston of Ward 8 replied that the building was needed, and that it would be completed by the time specified.

Mr. Flynn further inquired if the old building could not be repaired so that it would answer its purposes well enough.

Mr. Whiston replied that the building was water-logged; it was one of the first that was built, and hogsheads enough could not be put under it to keep it afloat. The committee had condemned it as unfit for repairs.

Mr. Shaw said he saw another order further down, for the repairs of bathing houses, and wished to know if that would not cover the expense required in this case. He believed in cleanliness as next to godliness, and in godliness also; but if he could not get a sufficient explanation he could not vote for this order. Why should there be separate orders, he would like to know; for here was one of $4000, and further down an order to repair bathing houses at a cost of $15,500. This was not a year in which to throw away money, and until shown that it was needed he was not willing to cast away any money.

Mr. Whiston replied that the order to come up was the usual order for the repairs and maintenance of the bathing houses, the appropriation for which had already been made.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 inquired if new spars could not be put under the bathing house which would be sufficient to float it.

Mr. Whiston replied that an attempt to repair the building would cost about as much as the building of a new one, and it would be necessary to build a new one in another year. This was among the first which was built, and the committee believed it could not be repaired to float it.

Mr. Wells wished further to know whether it was the repairs of the building or the spars which were needed

Mr. Whiston replied that in moving the building last fall, a schooner ran into it and caused such damages as made it unfit for repairs.

Mr. Shaw said he hated to speak again, but it appeared that appropriations were called for to the amount of $39,000 for bathing houses, and if not satisfactorily explained, he should feel obliged to vote against them. He did not know, but thought too much money was called for.

Mr. West of Ward 16, with a view of getting more information on the subject, moved that the order be laid on the table.

The motion was carried.

The following orders were read once.

Order authorizing public bathing houses to be repaired and maintained in different sections of the city, at not exceeding $15,500; also authorizing the employment of such assistance as may be required for the care and management thereof, at not exceeding $18,000.

The order to pay Henry Kelley $150, for land taken by the extension of Harrison avenue, Nov. 11, 1870.

The following orders were several y read twice and passed, in concurrence:

Order authorizing 10,000 feet of new hose to be purchased for the Fire Department, from time to time, as needed.

Order requesting Water Board to consider expediency of removing the drinking fountain at the easterly end of Old State House.

Order authorizing Directors for Public Institutions to allow Winthrop Railroad Company to move a wooden building on a portion of the city farm at Winthrop, for a temporary purpose only, in order to facilitate the running of the horse cars to Point Shirley.

Report and orders authorizing a purchase to be made, at not exceeding $60,000, of a lot of land on Newbury and Exeter streets, containing 22,960 square feet, to be used for the purpose of a primary school; and for a loan of said sum to be applied to the purchase thereof.

Request and order for a loan of $275,000, to be added to appropriations heretofore made for improvements on Suffolk-street district. (City Doc. No. 61, 1873.)

MEMBERS OF COCHITUATE WATER BOARD.

The report nominating Thomas Gogin and Charles R. McLean as members of the Water Board, to fill vacancies to occur on the first Monday in May, was accepted, and the certificate of the election of said Gogin and said McLean as such officers was read.

The Council proceeded to an election, when Mr. Gogin received 50 votes. Mr. McLean 48, and there were 4 for other persons.

Messrs. Gogin and McLean were declared to be elected, in concurrence.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The order authorizing the Treasurer to allow on deposits of money of proprietors in Mt. Hope Cemetery, for the permanent care of said lots, interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, being under consideration—

Mr. Burt of Ward 16 stated, in explanation, that the sums of money referred to were for the purpose of improvements upon the lots, the interest of which it was proposed to expend for such improvements.

The order was passed.

EXPENDITURES ON THE COMMON.

The order authorizing the building of a tool house on the Common, at not exceeding $1200, being the first of several orders providing for expenditures on the Common and Public Squares, was considered.

Mr. Train of Ward 14 said he believed the expenditures proposed, as he said at the last meeting, were too much, and that they needed further looking into and might be cut down essentially. This order provided for a tool house at an expense of $1200, and he believed a plain building suitable for the purpose could be put up for $500 or $600, which would be a saving of fifty per cent. He knew something about gardening, and had talked with responsible parties who would be willing to take the contracts for the several works to be done at one-half the prices proposed to be paid. The sum to be expended for concrete walks was too large, and it was not necessary that so much should be done this year. There were twenty-five public squares in the city, some of which were quite small, and could be taken care of for $300 or $400 apiece, yet the average was $1600, which was too large. Some of the expenditures were not necessary this year, and could wait until another year.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 stated that the committee had thoroughly examined these several proposed expenditures, and today they had opened a large number of proposals, the lowest of which for building a tool house was $1000. On the matter of repairs of settees, etc., on which he was a sub-committee, the lowest price offered was $1000, which was about as cheap as he could get them done, and which would leave $800 for the painting. In the expenditure of $4000 for loam, manure, etc., it was believed the price was moderate. The sum of $5800 was as low as can be done the carpenter work, team work, etc.; the citizens have a great desire that more of the walks shall be of concrete, and the sum for that and for expenditure for trees, shrubs, etc., was believed to be as low as they can be.

Mr. Train replied that competent men had informed him that contracts could be made for about half these prices in almost every instance. If the City Forester had taken the care of the land as he should have done, the large expenditures for manure, etc., would not be required. On the score of economy he was opposed to these expenditures, and would ask to have the orders recommitted. If the expenditures were justly needed, he should make no objection. What would become, then, of the amount appropriated, if the sum was not used, for he did not believe it would all be required this year.

Mr. Wilbur said that the gentleman did not seem to understand that no money could be expended if not appropriated, and if it was not all used it went back to the City Treasury.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said he hoped no one would object to a motion to recommit, for it was an object worthy of recommitment. The subject had attracted considerable attention, and he would suggest when it comes up again, that the committee would present all the expenditures which they will need, and take the whole subject into consideration. A petition would soon be presented for laying out walks on Independence square, which now has only a walk around it. Across it there are paths which are muddy and swampy, and there are no steps or outlet on one side, so that the person who goes that way is obliged to get over a fence or return. There will be an application for an expenditure on that square, and when the subject comes up again he hoped all the expenditures required would be laid before the Council.

Mr. Powers of Ward 4 said he hoped no tool house would be erected on the Common, unless the necessity was very urgent. Such a building, besides being unsightly, would be a place of deposit for wheelbarrows and other articles by its side, with the gathering of refuse material which would be no ornament to the Common or to the city. A plenty of old buildings could be leased in the vicinity of the Common for a deposit of tools.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 hoped the motion to recommit would prevail, and when the committee reports that they will give a statement of the difference in the appropriations between last year and this year.

The motion to recommit was carried, carrying all the other orders, as follows:

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $1800 for settees and for painting and repairing settees, fences and fountains on the Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $4000 for manure, loam and sods for Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $5850 for team work, carpenter work, mowing machines and tools for Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $7000 for gravel and concrete for walks and malls on the Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $8700 for trees, plants, shrubs and seeds for the Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $5000 in improving Washington park.

On a further motion of Mr. Train subsequently, the following orders were taken from the table and recommitted:

Order authorizing a contract with John Reardon for the care of Blackstone and certain other squares and Union park, at not exceeding $1650.

Order authorizing a contract with Peter Callahan for the care of Maverick and certain other squares, and the trees in streets in Ward 1, at not exceeding $700.

VETO OF NORMAL-SCHOOL ORDER.

The following communication was received from the Mayor:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL,
BOSTON, May 1, 1873.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Boston: Gentlemen—I return herewith to the branch of the City Council in which it originated an order to provide accommodations in the primary school-house on Appleton street for the normal school recently established by the School Committee, and I beg leave to state briefly the reasons which have compelled me to withhold my approval.

Previous to 1857 it was not legal for any city or town in this Commonwealth to establish public schools for the education of children over fifteen years of age. In that year an act was passed (since incorporated into the General Statutes, sec. 7, chap. 28,) authorizing the establishment and support of such schools. Although the School Committee have the superintendence of these schools, when established, and are authorized to determine what branches of learning may be taught therein, the City Council of cities and the inhabitants of towns acting in town meeting, alone have authority to establish the schools, and "may determine the term or terms of time in each year and the hours of the day or evening, during which said schools shall be kept, and appropriate such sums of money as may be necessary for the support thereof."

The fact that a normal school, as it was termed, was in existence as a part of our school system before the year 1857, does not alter the legal aspect of the case. It is sufficient that the City Council, after the authority was granted, established a "Girls' High and Normal School," at which a course of instruction was adopted, not only to qualify the graduates to become teachers, if they chose to adopt that profession, but to give all the pupils, whether they desired to be teachers or not, a complete and thorough education. This school, having outgrown the contracted quarters where it was first located, was established by the City Council in 1871 in a building specially erected for the purpose on Newton street, at an expense of $310,715.

In 1870 the School Committee recommended a division of the school and the establishment of a "distinct Normal School," devoted exclusively to the education of teachers, and on the 8th of January, 1872, a committee of seven was appointed by the School Committee to report upon a plan for a "distinct Normal School." On the 12th of March, 1872, that committee submitted the following orders, which were adopted:

First, "That the committee on the subject of a distinct normal school be and hereby are authorized to report to this Board a plan for the organization of a normal school in the city of Boston, which school shall be established and go into operation at the beginning of the next school year."

Second, "That the same committee be authorized to secure for the accommodation of said normal school the room now unoccupied in the Appleton-street Schoolhouse."

On the 14th of May the same committee submitted a plan for a "distinct normal school," which was adopted by the School Committee. It is provided, among other things, that "the school shall be known as the Boston Normal School, and its purpose shall be to furnish an opportunity for such young women as wish to become teachers a course of distinct professional study."

"The teachers shall be a head master and such assistants as may be found necessary."

"Candidates for admission must signify in writing their intention to teach."

"A diploma from either of the high schools shall be evidence of qualification for admission."

On the 11th of June, 1872, the rules and regulations were amended by striking from the organization and management of the Girls' High and Normal School all that pertained in any way to the normal department. The training schools which had been located in this building were discontinued, and the pupils distributed into other schools.

It will be observed, from the hasty review, that the new school is expressly stated to be a "distinct normal school." It is a school above and beyond the high schools already authorized by the City Council, and it appears in the Manual published for 1873, as a distinct and independent organization.

It is questionable whether such a school as this can be established at all at the public expense, and it is clear that it cannot be established without the previous consent of the City Council. That consent has not been given. If it be said that the school originally established by the City Council was denominated a normal school, with aims and purposes similar to those possessed by the new organization, the legal objection to the action of the School Committee still remains, as that body has not the authority to establish another such school.

These are the objections which have made it my duty to return the order to your honorable body for further consideration, but I cannot forbear calling your attention to the expense involved in carrying out the policy inaugurated by the School Committee. It appears from the last semi-annual report of the Superintendent of Schools, that the average number of pupils connected with the new normal school is fifty-three, and the average daily attendance forty-eight. The head master of the school receives a salary of $4000 per annum, and the four assistants $4500, making the salaries of the teachers to these forty-eight pupils, $8500 per annum. The building erected on Newton street was intended to accommodate 1200 pupils. The high school for girls contained in March last 632 pupils. The new normal school is accommodated at the present time in one room of the building; so that, making allowance for the accommodation required for the botanical and other departments, there remain several rooms unoccupied by any teachers or scholars.

If it is necessary to introduce primary classes for the practice of the normal pupils, there are, I believe, suitable facilities for so doing. The estimated expense of providing separate accommodations for the new school is $2000, but it is evident that the portion of the primary-school building which it is proposed to occupy at this time will be needed in a very short time for its legitimate purposes, and the Government will then be called upon to provide a new building for the normal school.

I submit herewith the opinion of the City Solicitor upon the legal aspect of the case.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor.

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE, 2 FEMBERTON SQUARE, }
BOSTON, April 28, 1873. }

Sir—To the question you proposed to me in regard to the legality of the action of the School Committee in establishing a normal school, I reply, that I find no authority for the establishing or maintenance of such a school by them. The committee can expend the moneys raised for the support of schools only for the support of schools of the description which the statutes of the Commonwealth require or authorize to be maintained, and normal schools are not of that number.

I am, with great respect,
Your obedient servant,

J. P. HEALY.

Hon. Henry L. Pierce, Mayor, etc.

On motion of Mr. Pease of Ward 1, the communication was laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Richard Leeds, for extension of time in which to build on Sharon street. Referred to Committee on Public Lands.

J. A. Tucker and others, that Magazine street may be extended, and that Eastis street may be extended to Magazine street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Granville B. Putnam and others, that Waltham street be paved with wood in front of the Franklin Schoolhouse.

T. W. and J. H. Cox and others, that Blue-Hill avenue be graded.

Severally ordered to be sent up.

Mr. Jones of Ward 14 presented an invitation to the Mayor and City Council, from C. C. Emery, commander, on behalf of Thomas G. Stevenson Post 26, G. A. R., to be present as guests of the post, at Forest Hill Cemetery on Decoration Day, May 30, 1873. Accepted, and sent up for concurrence.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred the order from the City Council to erect a grammar schoolhouse on the City Hall estate, Boston Highlands, made a report, as follows:

They have had plans prepared and received estimates for doing the work, and find that, owing to the advance in labor and building material, $90,000, the amount authorized to be expended in the erection of the building, will not be sufficient, but that $20,000 in addition to the amount already authorized will be required before contracts for building can be awarded. They would respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $20,000, to be added to the amount already authorized for the erection of a Grammar Schoolhouse, Dudley District.

The order was read once.

Mr. Bicknell, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred among the unfinished business of last year, the accompanying report and order for the erection of a stable on Highland street for the Health and Paving departments, made a report as follows:

That the public service requires that the building should be erected, and in view of the same they would respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to procure estimates for the erection of a stable on the city lot on Highland street, for the accommodation of the Health and Paving departments, and report to the City Council the estimated cost of the same.

The order was read once.

Mr. Page of Ward 9, from the Joint Standing Committee on Armories, reported leave to withdraw on petition of Lieutenant M. R. Walsh and others, in behalf of Company F, First Regiment, M. V. M., asking that a new armory may be provided by the city for the use of said company. Accepted.

Mr. Page, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Lieutenant-Colonel John H. Roberts that provision may be made for the headquarters of the First Battalion of Cavalry, reported two orders; to allow and pay $360 for rent of such headquarters at No. 7 Green street, and for the expenditure of $225 for fitting up said headquarters.

The report was accepted and the orders were passed.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Harbor, to whom were referred the papers relating to the assessment made by the Commonwealth upon the city of Boston for the compensation for tide water displaced by the construction of Atlantic avenue, and the filling of the docks inside of the same, made a report, as follows:

The substantial facts in the case are these: The act authorizing the city to lay out and build a street over tide waters between Lewis and Rowe's wharves (chap. 324, 1867) provided, among other things, that such compensation should be made for all displacement of tide water as the Harbor Commissioners should determine, and in the manner required by chapter 149 of the acts of the year 1866. It is provided in the fourth section of the acts referred to that the Harbor Commissioners shall in all cases affecting the harbor of Boston require the parties displacing tide water by filling flats or erecting buildings to make compensation therefor either by improving the harbor or paying money for improvements to be made hereafter under the direction of the Commissioners.

In 1870 the engineer to the Commissioners computed the amount of tide water displaced between the planes of mean high and low water by the filling of the avenue proper and the interior basins at 168,523 cubic yards, and an assessment of $61,663 was made upon the city as the money equivalent for compensation in kind. In accordance with an order of the City Council the Mayor petitioned the General Court in 1871 to relieve the city from the payment of this assessment. After a full investigation of the subject the application was refused and on the 9th of November of that year the Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth made a formal requisition upon the city for the amount assessed with interest thereon.

No action was taken upon the subject until the next meeting of the General Court, when another effort was made to have the assessment abated, but without success.

The matter has now been brought to a point where it is no longer possible for the city to resist payment, the State Treasurer having declined to allow the city for receipts on account of the corporation tax, and for advances made on account of soldiers' relief, until the requisition for tidal compensation is satisfied. In the meantime the interest on the original assessment has been accumulating, so that the amount due at this time is $71,837 93. The City Solicitor has given his opinion that the claim is a valid one, and the payment of it cannot be successfully resisted. The Committee would therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to the Treasurer and Receiver-general of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the sum of $71,837 93, in full settlement of the assessment made by the Board of Harbor Commissioners of the Commonwealth for compensation on account of tide water displaced by the construction of Atlantic avenue, and the filling of the interior basins; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Atlantic Avenue.

Mr. Pease moved a suspension of the rules for the passage of the order, stating that as the money must be paid, and as some $30,000 was due to the city from the State for soldiers' aid, etc., and it was desirable that a settlement be made with the State to come within the expenditures of the financial year just closed, arrangements for which have been made.

The order was read a second time and passed.

Mr. West submitted the following request:

To the City Council—The Committee on Finance respectfully ask for the passage of the accompanying order, for the purpose of facilitating the business of the city.

For the Committee,
HENRY L. PIERCE, Chairman.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be, and he is hereby authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, a sum not exceeding four millions of dollars, in anticipation of the taxes payable this year, and that all moneys obtained under authority of this order shall be made payable on or before the 30th day of April 1874.

The order was read twice and passed.

ORDERS.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 offered the following order, which was read once:

Ordered, That there be paid to the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation the sum of $225,000, due the said corporation upon certain conditions as set forth in the indentures between the city of Boston and the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation, dated September 30, 1871, relating to the purchase of land of the said corporation by the said city, and the extension of Columbus avenue to Park square, said corporation to give the city a receipt for the same satisfactory to the City Solicitor; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for the Extension of Columbus Avenue.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to procure plans and estimates for a new police station, to be erected on a lot of land purchased for the purpose on Fourth street, between K and I streets; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 inquired if it was necessary that this police station should be erected at the present time.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said the subject of a new police station in South Boston had been under agitation quite a length of time, and was believed to be a necessity. A purchase of land was made last year as a result of that necessity. In fact a temporary place had been used as a sort of police station in that section, and as it was well known that the old police station was near this end of South Boston, a great bulk of the population was beyond it. In some cases it is necessary to carry men a mile and a half to the station house. The people of South Boston were law-abiding citizens or they would have required the building long since. They had poor gas over there, with the streets poorly lighted, and the deficient amount of police force was sadly felt.

The order was passed.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 offered an order that the Superintendent of Streets, under the direction of the Committee on Paving of the Board of Aldermen, be authorized to contract for the watering of streets in the burnt district for such a length of time as the public health and convenience may require.

Mr. Shaw briefly advocated the order, for the comfort, convenience and health of those required to work in or pass through the streets in the burnt district, and the order was passed.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 offered an order, which was passed, authorizing the Cochituate Water Board to make their annual report in print.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 moved to take from the table the ordinance to amend an ordinance relating to the City Hospital, and the motion was carried.

Mr. Dacey said he had made some inquiries in relation to this ordinance since the last meeting, and believed as stated by the gentleman from Ward 12, that it was unnecessary. He had talked with the Superintendent of the hospital about it, who said it was got up by mistake. He moved, therefore, that it be indefinitely postponed, which was carried.

SALARIES IN THE LAW DEPARTMENT.

On motion of Mr. Dean of Ward 12, the majority and minority reports and orders on the subject of the salaries of officers of the Law Department were taken up from the table for consideration.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 expressed the belief that a wrong impression was received from what was said about costs at the last meeting of the Council. Although the city has the legal right to costs in suits in which it is a party, the whole amount of costs last year was but $73 05. One-half of the amount of costs goes to the head of the department, and the remainder is divided among the assistants. It was also said that a considerable sum was received as perquisites in the making out of deeds. This amount as perquisites is very small, most of it being paid out to a clerk who is employed by them.

On an examination for several years of the comparative increase of salaries of city officers, it would be found, that the smallest increase of any officer was 53 per cent., excepting the City Solicitor, the increase of whose salary had been but 25 per cent. This did not include the Superintendent of Public Lands, whose duties are yearly decreasing, and with reference to which the question had been debated of abolishing the office. With an increase of the salary of the City Solicitor to 53 per cent. it would make it $6000 as proposed by the majority. Mr. Stackpole, the assistant has no outside practice, and the other assistant has had but one case during the past year, and all they make is from their salaries, the perquisites being inconsiderable. These statements he made to remove erroneous impressions, and he believed the proposed increase of salaries not unreasonable.

Mr. Dacey of Ward 2 said he was still of the opinion that the minority report should be substituted for that of the majority. He had looked into the matter of perquisites and believed that the Assistant City Solicitors have practised in the courts and do now practice. It was only within four weeks that one of them went down to Richmond, Va., on business outside of his office, and another had recently gone to Lowell on business outside of his office. As to the making of trustee writs, they may not amount to much, but they do practise, and there are many waiting who would be willing to take their places for the perquisites they get. He was confident there should be no change in the salaries of the assistants.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said he had taken some pains also in relation to the matter, and agreed nearly with the statement of the gentleman from Ward 6. His amount of fees taken was a little more, being $85. As to the making of deeds, there were three hundred made last year, and if $3 for each was received that would amount to $900. He was satisfied that if the assistants have any other practice, it is not done at the expense of the city, and that they work hard for what they get. The Law Department, in his opinion, was the poorest paid by the city.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 believed it eminently proper that there should be a graduation of salaries, as suggested by the gentleman from Ward 5, for an increase of a similar amount in each case was hardly the thing. It appeared by the statement made, that $900 was received for making deeds, some of which was paid for clerk hire. He understood that the first assistant being in constant attendance upon courts, could have very little in perquisites, and it would be unjust to the first to pay the same to the second assistant. He had been credibly informed by parties who should know, that to pay the first assistant $3000, would not give him as much as the second would receive at a salary of $2500.

Mr. Dacey said he was in favor of giving the first assistant $3000, but it was understood he did not ask an increase of salary.

Mr. Holmes stated that there was no distinction in first and second assistants. Mr. Kittredge was, in fact, appointed first, and it was their feeling that there should be no grade. For that reason Mr. Stackpole may not have desired an increase, not wishing to have an invidious distinction or superiority of one over the other.

Mr. Pickering said he could say the gentleman alluded to it does desire an increase of salary, although he might not ask for it.

Mr. Shaw questioned the method of comparison which had been made, which he said was not just. A fair comparison showed that the cost of the Law Department had more than doubled in the time specified. He was in favor of an increase of pay of the head of the department as due to his great ability, but in regard to the expense it should be considered that there were more persons paid than five or six years ago. There should be no perquisites allowed to city officers, and the city could afford to make the deeds required in deeding back property. He would like to know who authorized them to employ the clerk who was paid from these perquisites. If he could have his wish, these offices should be graded, and no perquisites allowed.

Mr. Mahan of Ward 5 called attention to the ordinance adopted at the last meeting of the Council, which established a grade of a first, second and third assistants to the City Solicitor. He suggested that the question might be met satisfactorily by voting down the motion to substitute the minority report, and then vote directly upon each salary under the grade established.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 believed that if the reports were recommitted, they could be reported in a form which would be better understood and more acceptably. In that way this might save time.

Mr. Dean said he would make no objection to recommitting, although from the debate there had been a thorough expression of opinion.

The motion to recommit was carried.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 moved to take from the table the order for the appointment of a committee to make arrangements, at not exceeding $15,000, for the celebration of Fourth of July, 1873, and that it be assigned to Thursday evening next at half-past eight o'clock.

The motion was carried, and the order was so assigned.

COMMUNICATION IN RELATION TO A SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

OFFICE OF BOARD OF HEALTH, {
BOSTON, May 5, 1873. }

To His Honor the Mayor and the City Council of Boston: Gentlemen—In compliance with your order of April 25, 1873, concerning the early closing of Marcella-street hospital, that “the Board of Health be respectfully requested to communicate to the City Council what in their judgment are the requirements of the city for a permanent hospital for the treatment of persons suffering from smallpox or other contagious diseases,” we beg to state that in our opinion a permanent hospital for such a purpose situated upon a dry and healthy site, conveniently accessible, is absolutely necessary.

That the Marcella-street hospital is the only suitable one now in the hands of the Board of Health; that the Sweet-street hospital was abandoned on account of being, in the opinion of this Board and that of a large number of the leading physicians of Boston, situated in a very undesirable location for the successful treatment of our unfortunate patients; that the Board has been vigilant in the search of some desirable location, and believe it has succeeded in finding one suitable and accessible and more isolated than that on Marcella street.

The Board would therefore recommend that some early action be taken by the City Council with a view to purchasing a lot and erecting thereon a hospital for the reception of persons having a disease dangerous to the public health.

By direction of the Board of Health.

C. E. DAVIS, JR., Clerk.

Referred to Committee on Health.

WIDENING OF CONGRESS STREET.

A resolve and order was received from the Street Commissioners providing for the widening of Congress street between Water and State streets, on the easterly side, to the width of fifty-four feet, at an estimated cost of $484,626.

The several items of expense are as follows: G. D. Howe and others, trustees, No. 50, 464 square feet of land, $38—$17,632; damages, $500—total, $18,132. Francis M. Johnson, Nos. 48-42, 1019 feet, $35—$35,665; damages, $665—$36,330. Henry L. Hallett, trustee, No. 40, 547 feet, $42—$22,974; damages, $524—$23,498. Heirs of William S. Perry, Nos. 34-30, 825 feet, $45—$37,125; damages, $1000—$38,125. Unknown owners, passageway, 69 feet, no expense. Heirs of Hinman Meredith, Nos. 26-24, 508 feet, $32—$16,256; damages, $1000—$17,256. John L. Gardner, Nos. 22-20, 417 feet, $37—$15,429; damages, $19,500—$34,929. Unknown owners, passageway, 209 feet. New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, Nos. 6 to 2, corner of State street, 3191 feet, $66—$210,606; damages, $105,750—$316,356. Total, 7249 feet of land, $355,687; value of buildings before widening, $147,750; cost of widening, $10,000; value of old materials, $15,500; damages to buildings, owners and occupants, $128,939—$484,626.

Alderman Clark stated that the subject had been before the Committee on Streets, and they were nearly unanimous of the opinion that this plan of widening of Congress street should be carried out.

On his motion the rules were suspended, and the resolve and order was passed in concurrence with the Street Commissioners.

The order authorizing the employment of additional assistance in the office of Chief Engineer of Fire Department, which was referred by this Board to the Committee on the Fire Department, coming up with non-concurrence in such reference, the Board receded from its reference.

The order authorizing the sale, by public auction or otherwise, of the building on the engine-house lot, corner of Warren and Quincy streets, Ward 14, coming up with an amendment to strike out the words "or otherwise"—

Alderman Clark opposed concurrence, stating that $5000 were lost to the city in one instance, by requiring a sale to be by auction, and in another case this year $5 more a foot was offered for land than it would have brought at auction. The Joint Committee on Streets was composed of honest men, and would act for the best interests of the city, whether to sell at private or public sale, and should not be compelled to make sales by auction.

Alderman Sayward inquired whether it was land to be sold, and whether it was not the Committee on Public Buildings who were authorized to make the sale. On the assurance that it was the Committee on Public Buildings who were authorized to sell a building, he said he should not object to the order as it is, if the City Council so ordered it, but he believed the committee were honest, and would act for the best interests of the city.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The order for the Superintendent of Streets, under the direction of the Committee on Paving, to cause the streets in the burnt district to be watered, the expense to be charged to the Burnt District Loan, was referred to the Committee on Paving.

HEARING ON LIMITS OF BASE-BALL GROUNDS.

The public hearing on the proposed extension of the limits of the base-ball grounds on Boston Common, was taken up, by assignment, at four and a half o'clock.

The petitioners were first heard.

J. B. Ames, for the Base Ball Club Association, stated that the committee of the City Council declined to act directly upon their petition, and offered as a substitute for the Common Madison square and Orchard park. The first was not only too far off but was also too small, making it liable constantly to the breaking of windows. Orchard park was still further off, and more objectionable on that account. Should the report of the committee be accepted, it would be but of granting these places, and refusing the use of the Common.

So far as the question in issue was concerned, it was that base ball playing was dangerous. One case cited was that of a man who was hit in the abdomen; a second was the case of a little girl, who was not hurt; and the only other case was that of a person now a member of the club. The game had been played since 1858, and these were the only cases of injuries cited, the extent of one of which he did not know. It was objected that the Common was more beautiful to be grown up in grass, which he would concede; but it was a question whether the Common should be allowed to be beautiful, and the young men and boys be deprived of opportunities of exercise and health. It was objected that it would be used by professional players; but professional players would never use any except inclosed grounds, by means of which alone they could pay the necessary expenses.

Francis Gardner said he did not appear here for base-ball players, but for the boys of Boston, where he had lived most of his life. When he was a boy there were pastures and play grounds in Pearl street, Rowe street, Fort Hill and other places. The boys had been driven from most of the Common, and he contended that the health of the boys required more room for play. More room was needed merely for the boys of the high schools. Without the means of exercise in their plays health could not be secured, and the result was that there were more applications for relief from schools in one week now than there were in a month forty years ago. In the returns which were made for absences those which were made from ill health were not included.

H. H. Coolidge said he came here in complete sympathy with the boys, and as a Boston boy. When he went to school, the whole Common was open to their use. The boys had been crowded until they were allowed to have little space, except upon the Parade Ground, which was but a swamp when he was a boy. As a resident of Boylston street, he would be incommoed as much as any one by the playing, and he would not believe that gentlemen living in the neighborhood who desired to have the Common a beautiful lawn, would be incommoed at a time when most of them were out of town. As a desirable measure, he urged that, physically and intellectually, the granting of the petition should be complied with.

John T. Sargent said he supposed the question was whether they would allow more ground to be used for plays, especially that part known as the Parade Ground. Recurring to the uses to which the Common was put in the early days, although restrictions had been put upon the use of it, it was still a Common, and for that reason it was proper that the use of it should be continued as a parade ground. On the ground of health he urged that the use of the Common as a parade ground and for play by young men and boys was indispensable.

Stillman B. Allen stated that two thousand persons had petitioned the Board in favor of granting this petition, and these were among the best citizens and largest taxpayers; he did not doubt that a much larger petition could be got up in a little time. There were some 25,000 or 30,000 young men who must have some games to play, and if a better game could be furnished he was willing to give this up. Taking the testimony of Dr. Gardner, there was five times as much sickness among pupils in school as there was formerly. This request was desirable because it was necessary that the young men should be healthy and strong; it was needed as a place of rest and for many physical and moral reasons.

Rev. William B. Wright said he came to learn why boys should not have the privilege asked for, as the word Common would seem to imply a public place for recreation. There was an argument not alluded to, that of the circle of young men standing here, pleading eloquently for air, life, physical culture. Providing a proper playground for boys and young men he contended was but supplementing the admirable school system of this city by furnishing strength to that part which was weak.

Joseph F. Paul said he came here to listen to the reasons against granting the request of the boys. With reference to the objection that ball playing is dangerous, there were dangers in other games, but not to cause injuries which may not be overcome. He believed it to be better, and he urged it upon school teachers, that he would prefer to have his children come out of school with a good constitution than to have their brains crammed with debilitated bodies. If driven to the country, he believed there would be a thousand snares for them to which they were not now subject. As had already been said, the boys who engage in base-ball playing, do not go from such plays to saloons, but to a place of rest, as a man would to sleep after a hard day's work.

Benjamin F. Guild, as a Boston boy, said that in his day the boys were kings on the Common. The game of base ball he believed to be peculiarly adapted to the American character, in the discipline of the eye, nerve, courage, etc. As one who took part in introducing the game to this city, he believed it to be a game to be encouraged. It was true there was danger in the game, as there was in all games.

Joshua Bates, as a teacher for thirty years said he had been accustomed to seeing boys at play on the Common, and by way of physical exercise, should a petition be circulated for the object, he did not doubt that it would be universally signed by the teachers. As there was no other place which could be used for the purpose, he hoped the request would be granted.

Mr. Hayden urged the claims of boys in stores as well as the boys in school who needed this additional play ground.

W. L. P. Boardman said it was conceded that without physical exercise boys could not grow up to be strong men. Upon an examination of the ground which would be occupied as a play ground, there would not be one hundred dwellings incommoed by the playing. The report of the Superintendent of Schools was cited to show how many scholars in certain schools could obtain the use of no other ground than the Common as a play ground. Madison square, he contended, was unfitted as a play ground by reason of its size and the distance from central portions of the city, and it was only large enough for the use of the scholars of the school fronting upon the square.

The hearing for the petitioners was here closed.

Alderman Clark presented remonstrances from Rev. Rufus Ellis, George T. Bigeiow and others.

Turner Sargent offered remonstrances from John A. Lowell and others, and from Mrs. Mary E. Dale and many other ladies residing on Park, Beacon, Arlington and other streets in the vicinity of the Common, on the ground of the danger which would result to themselves and young children from allowing the use of the entire parade ground for base-ball playing.

Turner Sargent, as a remonstrant, said what he had to say would be a matter of common sense and not of poetry, and in opposing the granting of the petition, he did so because it would be dangerous to women and children, there being seven paths across the space proposed to be used, and two malls which adjoined it. It was not their fault that they were obliged to be present to oppose the petition, and he urged that the Common was an objectionable place for base-ball playing on account of the large amount of travel across it, there being a city beyond. It was simply a case requiring the ball players to move on, by the growth of the city. In his younger days he played on Fort Hill, and in Winthrop place, and was driven to Charles street. The march of improvement requires pushing on further. The boys were old fogies in resisting progress. Before coming here he purchased one of the halls which were used, which was called a dead hall. To show it was the best argument which he could use.

J. Tisdale Bradlee said he did not appear here to oppose ball playing and exercise in the open air, but there was a proper time and places for such plays. He agreed that the Common was for the use of all the people, and for that reason he did not believe that the Common should be granted to the use of a few, to the detriment of the health and of the lives of others. At the hearing before the committee it was contended that the boys had a right to the Common for a playground, and that all the restrictions were usurpations. This he denied, and was prepared to prove that there was no such right belonging to boys.

Mr. Bradlee cited from Dr. Shurtleff's "History of Boston" to show that the Common was purchased not for a playground but for other purposes. In 1684 a portion was set apart for a training field, and when the pasturage of cows became greater than could be allowed, the selectmen were authorized to make restrictions, and the Common ceased to be a grazing field in 1830, because of the danger through accidents. Then it was that the rights of foot passengers were recognized. Little children, he contended, had rights as well as large ones, and while grown people could take care of themselves, little children cannot do so. The Common was not for the use either of rich people as had been said, residing in the vicinity, but for the poorer classes, from the North End and from other sections, whose places for recreation had been taken from them.

From the history of the Common, he contended there was no special right in any one to its use, but a permissive right only. There was no objection to the game of ball which was played when he was young, when the ball used was a soft one, but the one now used and which was exhibited is more like a grape shot, or a paving stone. In the objections made by him, it was to secure the comfort and safety of those who had occasion to cross or frequent the Common. The little girl spoken of who was injured was his child, and it was true that it did not hurt her much, because it was a spent ball. But there were cases of a more serious character, in which persons were helped to the drinking fountains for a restoration to consciousness and to physicians for treatment.

There was a case of a man in the employment of the city who was so injured that he had never been able since to do a day's work. There was another case also, in which a citizen was injured, went abroad, was subjected to an operation for his injuries and died. Although it might not be positively certain that his death was the result of his injuries, there was strong evidence to show that it was. There were many other cases of injury from base-ball playing, but a multitude of cases were not necessary to show that it was a game which was dangerous. Parties were not only injured on the field but on the malls, and it was but a right to ask for protection against such dangers.

S. H. Russell said he did not occupy the ungenerous position which had been attributed to remonstrants, of opposing the playing of boys on the Common, for no one would do that; but it was an opposition to games of violence, and not a day passes in which some person was not endangered by being hit by one of these hard balls. He was himself struck by a wooden ball and was lame in consequence for several weeks. In referring to the growth of the city, and to the population beyond the Common, he said that from eight thousand to ten thousand persons cross the Common every day twice, and these persons were to be put to inconvenience and subject to danger for the benefit of one hundred or two hundred persons at a time in playing ball with two or three times their number looking on.

John Chandler said he had but little to add to what had been so well said, but he could attest to the great danger to which bystanders were subject, while he had never seen any one greatly injured. It had been objected that the remonstrants were rich men and aristocrats, but he was not of that class. As a resident and taxpayer of the city for forty years, and having the good and well being of the city as much at heart as any one, in common with others he rejoiced when the unsightly place on the Parade Ground was grassed down. It was made an objection that the boys were allowed no place on the Common, while the large space already allowed was ignored. Others had rights as well as base-ball players; children and women had such rights.

Mr. Chandler urged further objections to the granting of the petition, and in regard to ball playing denied that this was such a healthy game as was claimed for it. When it was claimed that the health of boys and young men had deteriorated in consequence of loss of play ground, he supposed it would not be claimed that the change began with the restrictions put upon the Parade Ground in 1869. As an illustration of what was generally believed to be characteristic of the game, he said he had seen it stated in connection with the opening of the ball playing season that there was a demand for liniment and surgeons.

Charles S. Faulkner remonstrated against granting further space for base-ball playing, for should more space be allowed, it will be necessary to close up certain well-travelled paths. Various reasons were urged by him against granting the petition, and he cited the case of the late Samuel Frothingham as the person injured by a base ball, and he never had a well day afterwards.

The hearing was now declared to be closed.

Alderman Stebbins moved to recommit, with instructions to the committee to report back to the Board.

Alderman Power objected to recommitting the subject, and he hoped the prayer of the petition would be granted. The argument which had been made in opposition was not sufficient to convince him that it should not be granted. He was familiar with base-ball playing and knew that, although dangerous, it was conducive to health. If objected to because it was dangerous, objections could be made to every other form of physical exercise, as in gunning, fishing, boating, etc. Because there was danger in these methods of exercise no one would contend that they should be given up in consequence.

Alderman Clark raised the question of order, that the question was on recommitment.

Alderman Power said he was giving reasons against recommitment. He had some knowledge of the game, and had been engaged in games all over the Common, and much of the strength and muscle which he had was due to such games. Once the whole Common was a playground, and players had been driven back to six of the forty-eight acres and confined to half of that. He did not think that it was a hardship for ladies and children to give way in yielding up so small a portion of the Common to ball playing.

Alderman Quincy hoped the report would be allowed to take its usual course, and not be settled now. He wished time to consider the various arguments which had been made on both sides. Most of the members of the Board had heard them for the first time, and wished time to consider and weigh them. When called upon to act, they should have time to prepare themselves.

Alderman Power said he supposed all the members of the Board had made up their minds on the subject, but if not he would not oppose a reference.

Alderman Gibson raised the question whether it was not possible to enlarge the playground without inconvenience to the citizens who cross the Common. He confessed he would not be willing to be hit by the ball which has been exhibited here.

The motion to recommit was carried.

Alderman Emery, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Morton & Chesley for an extension of time in which to build on lands purchased of the city on East Dedham street, made a report recommending the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the time for building upon a lot of land on East Dedham street, as sold by the city May 1, 1871, to Morton & Chesley, be extended to May 1, 1874, upon condition that they pay to the Superintendent of Public Lands the sum of $200 within ten days from the passage of this order.

The report was accepted, and the order was passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of petitions for stables, as follows: Eliza J. Ellingwood, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse on Codman park, near Townsend street; J. W. & J. H. Cox, to occupy a wooden stable for four horses on Highland-park avenue; Albe C. Clark, to occupy a wooden stable for three horses on Mill street, Harrison Square; Aaron J. Dean, to occupy a wooden stable for three horses on Westminster avenue, between Walnut and Shawmut avenues; S. Farrington, for apportionment of assessment for extension of Harrison avenue, the time having passed in which the betterments assessed for extension of Harrison avenue may be apportioned. Severally accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the same committee, reported that in their opinion, after a careful consideration of the subject, it is inexpedient to grant the prayer of petitioners, A. L. White & Co., and others, that the opening of Washington street to Haymarket square be postponed one year; and no action necessary on the remonstrance of Cyrus Wakefield and others, against the postponement of time for opening said extension of Washington street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Gibson, from the Committee on Police, reported amendments to the police regulations, as follows:

Ordered, That the rules and regulations for the government, disposition and management of the Boston Police be and the same are hereby amended, as follows:

In section 4, strike out the words "once a week, or oftener," and insert in place thereof the words "as often as practicable."

In section 65, defining the duties of lieutenants, strike out the words "they shall rank first and second, as named in their appointment."

Strike out section 68, defining the duties of sergeants, and insert in place thereof the following: "Section 63—They shall, under the orders of the chief, the deputy or the captain of the station to which they are detailed, perform such duties, and at such hours of the day or night, as may be designated."

In section 71 strike out all after the word "received," in the fifteenth line.

Ordered, That until otherwise ordered, the Standing Committee on Police be authorized to make such rules and regulations in relation to the police uniforms as they may deem proper and necessary.

Alderman Gibson explained as the first amendment to relieve the Chief of Police from the duty of visiting all the station houses once a week, which was not now practicable, and explained the second amendment.

Alderman Quincy asked for further information, and that the subject be laid over for further consideration.

The subject was laid over.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on Paving, to whom was recommitted the petition of Highland Street Railway Company for an extension of location in Dudley street, reported the accompanying order of location.

Ordered, In addition to the rights heretofore granted to the Highland Street Railway Company to lay down tracks in several of the streets of the city of Boston, said company shall have the right to lay down a double track on Dudley street, from the tracks of said company as now laid near Warren street to the westerly line of Mt. Pleasant avenue.

The right to lay down the tracks located by this order is upon the condition that the whole work of laying down the tracks, the precise location of the same, the form of rail to be used, and the kind and quality of pavement used in paving said tracks, shall be under the direction, and to the satisfaction of the Committee on Paving and the Superintendent of Streets, and shall be approved by them.

Also upon the condition that the Highland Street Railway Company shall accept this location, and agree in writing to comply with the conditions therein contained, and file said acceptance and agreement with the City Clerk within thirty days of the date of its passage: otherwise it shall be null and void.

The report was accepted, and the order of location was adopted.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on Paving, made a report, recommending that the petition of Aratus E. Pratt be granted, to sprinkle certain streets in Roxbury. Accepted.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That a license be granted to Cook & Handy to sprinkle Dudley street, between Putnam and Centre streets, with salt water, upon the usual conditions.

Ordered that the Superintendent of Sewers be and he is hereby directed to construct a common sewer in Eighth street, between Old Harbor and G streets, and to report a schedule of the expense thereof to this Board, pursuant to law.

Ordered, That there be paid to William A. Thompson the sum of $800, in full compensation for all damages caused to his estate No. 174 Chambers street, by the raising of the grade of said street, by order of the Board of Aldermen Sept. 17, 1872, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Paving.

Ordered, That there be paid to Annie E. Bryant the sum of $800, in full compensation for all damages caused to her estate, No. 176 Chambers street, by the raising of the grade of said street, as ordered by the Board of Aldermen, Sept. 17, 1872, upon the usual conditions; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Paving.

Ordered, That there be paid to Edward Moore the sum of $500, in full compensation for all damages caused to his estate No. 170 Fourth street, by the raising of the grade of said street, by order of the Board of Aldermen, Oct. 1, 1872, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for Paving.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the Union Freight Railroad Company that, in the opinion of this Board, the public safety and convenience require that Causeway street, between Leverett street and the Boston & Maine Railroad, should be paved with small granite blocks, and that said company be directed to pave with small granite blocks the space on said street occupied by its tracks; said work to be done under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Superintendent of Streets.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the Metropolitan Railroad Company that in the opinion of this Board the public safety and convenience require that Causeway street, between Leverett street and the Boston & Maine Railroad, should be paved with small granite blocks, and that said company be directed to pave with small granite blocks the space in said Causeway street occupied by its tracks; said work to be done under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Superintendent of Streets.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the Cambridge Railroad Company, that in the opinion of this Board, the public safety and convenience require that Causeway street, between Lowell street and the Boston & Maine Railroad, should be paved with small granite blocks, and that said company be directed to pave with small granite blocks the space on said Causeway street occupied by its tracks; said work to be done under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Superintendent of Streets.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the Albany-street Freight Railway Company, to restrict the use of steam as a motive power on its road to the hours between six o'clock at night and six o'clock in the morning.

Ordered, That notice be and hereby is given to the Union Freight Railroad Company to restrict the use of steam as a motive power on its road to the hours between six o'clock at night and six o'clock in the morning.

Alderman Power asked for a suspension of the rules for the passage of the order.

Alderman Stebbins hoped the order would not be passed now, for this road had but just got into operation, and he wished time to look into the matter.

Alderman Power stated that the use of steam was allowed this corporation in consequence of the fire, to enable them to carry off the waste material, and it was not contemplated to permit the use of steam-power during the day in their regular business.

Alderman Gibson believed it would be best to allow the use of steam all the time, and cited cases in New York, Baltimore, and all through New Jersey, in which steam was used in the streets of cities. The former experiment of requiring the Boston & Maine Railroad Company to draw their cars across the streets by horses was given up because it was better for the public to use steam in facilitating the work.

Alderman Hulbert claimed that it would be better for the public to hold this corporation to its original contract.

Alderman Gibson said he believed the time would come when engines would be used, which would not be objectionable, and all street cars would be drawn by them.

Alderman Emery opposed running beyond Atlantic avenue by steam as unsafe.

Alderman Stebbins said he had understood the corporation had an engine made on purpose to run in the streets.

Alderman Power said that when the proper time came for the use of such engines in the streets at all times, it would be well enough to consider the subject, but this was simply to require the company to comply with their original grant, beyond which they were allowed to go only for a temporary purpose.

The question was taken and the order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins—

Ordered, That there be paid to William G. Russell, William S. Dexter and Daniel S. Richardson, commissioners appointed by the Supreme Judicial Court to adjudicate the damages sustained by the Model Lodging House Association and others, appellants to said court, by reason of the action of the city in taking their property on the Suffolk-street district, the sum of four thousand dollars in full for their services; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Suffolk-street Improvement.

Alderman Stebbins stated that the order was in accordance with the decree of the court.

Ordered, That there be paid to George O. Currier, or his assigns, the sum of $350, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Shawmut avenue, by resolve and order passed by the Street Commissioners, Sept. 17, 1872, upon the usual conditions; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Suffolk-street District.

Alderman Stebbins called up a motion of which he gave notice after the last meeting of the Board to reconsider the vote by which an order was passed on the 28th ult. to close up a portion of School street.

After the motion was made, he said, it was determined to do the work in removing the stage on the new building in the night, and it was so done. He moved, therefore, an indefinite postponement of the order, which was carried.

CLOCK ON THE JAIL.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield, the order to remove the clock tower from the County Jail, at a cost not exceeding $500, was taken from the table, when he moved to substitute the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on County Buildings be and they are hereby authorized to repair the clock tower upon the County Jail, at an expense not exceeding $2500, to be charged to the appropriation for the County of Suffolk, which sum, together with amounts previously expended on said jail during the municipal year, does not exceed $5000.

Alderman Sayward objected to the substitute, on account of the expense as well as the difficulty of making the tower strong enough for the clock.

Alderman Gaffield did not doubt the Alderman as chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings would make the repairs at less expense if possible. The citizens of that section of the city did not wish to part with the clock.

Alderman Clark said he hoped a better tower would be provided if the present one was poor, and if necessary a fire-proof one. He was surprised that Sheriff Clark should have advised the removal of the clock, and would as soon have removed the clock from the Old South as from the jail. The clock was a great advantage to the people of that part of the city, and to thousands of persons coming over the Cambridge bridges.

Alderman Power advocated the adoption of the substitute, and considered the tower to be a great ornament to the jail. As the only cheerful thing about the building, he hoped the clock would not be removed.

Alderman Sayward said that it was not to be expected that they would provide clocks for the people of Cambridge, and as to the cheerfulness of the clock, it could not be any advantage to the inmates of the jail.

Alderman Gibson also advocated the substitute, and it was adopted.

ADDITIONAL MARKET FACILITIES.

Alderman Gibson offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Markets be authorized to hire a portion of the Mercantile wharf property for market purposes, from May 1, 1873, to May 1, 1874, at an expense not exceeding $2500; to be charged to the appropriation for Markets.

Alderman Brown stated, in support of the order, that he was on a sub-committee to provide relief for the crowded condition of the streets around the market, and it was found that about an acre and a half of land belonging to the Mercantile Wharf Corporation could be had for the purpose at the small sum named. It was believed that it would afford the accommodations required, and it would be acceptable to the marketmen as well as relieve the streets and prevent obstructions to the business in the vicinity of the market.

Alderman Clark objected to hiring any land or paying any money to the Mercantile Wharf Company, so long as that corporation refuses to pay betterments on account of the extension of Atlantic avenue. The city had filled the land for them, and their refusal to pay betterments stood in the way of the city's receiving betterments to the amount of $100,000 from Messrs. Quincy and Martin Brimmer.

Alderman Stebbins said he understood as the cause of the difficulty that the corporation had been unable to see their way out of a dispute in the settlement of a line in the boundary of their property, but they thought they should be able to in a short time.

Alderman Clark contended that it would be time enough to pay money to that corporation when they paid for what the city had done for them. Their ground of objection was that their property was not bettered, and they stood in the way of others who were willing to pay betterments.

Alderman Gibson said that this was the only spot to be had by which relief could be given to the business men around the market, who complained that they could not do business on account of the crowding of the streets with market wagons. The use of it would not cost the city a dollar.

Alderman Clark referred to other land in the vicinity which could be had and further denounced the Mercantile Wharf Corporation for its course in resisting payment of betterments.

Alderman Brown did not doubt that the corporation would pay the betterments when they found that they were obliged to. They were now required to pay an increased tax upon the valuation of their property, and the use of the land which was offered to the city was not one-third of its value.

Alderman Gibson believed it would be a good trade for the city, and the land should be secured, when parties could remain there as long as they wish and people could go there and purchase, marketing all day with no objection by the regular marketmen.

Alderman Power wished to know whether it was designed to erect a market house on this land, and if so, how much was to be expended.

Alderman Brown replied that nothing had been determined in relation to the matter, but the Superintendent of the Market was of the opinion that six or eight shanties could be put up, at an expense of $500 each, which would be all that was required, and the rent of them would soon pay the cost.

The order was laid over.

A large number of orders to pay for land taken to widen streets in the burnt district were severally read once.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
MAY 8, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at eight o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the president, in the chair.

The roll was called, when a quorum appeared to be present, as follows:

Abbott, Bicknell, Blackmar, Boardman, Brackett, Brennan, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Collins, Darrow, Deau, Denny, Flatley, Flynn, Harrington, Hine, Holmes, Jones, Loring, Madden, Mahan, Marston, Martin, McCue, McKenney, Morse, Page, Pease, Pickering, Powers, Prescott, Shaw, Thacher, Tower, Train, Upham, Warren, Wells, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The quarterly reports of the City Registrar, City Clerk, and Overseers of the Poor, were severally ordered to be placed on file.

The petitions of Mrs. M. A. French, Vance & Co., Beacon Base-Ball Club, and of Rev. C. A. Bartol and others, and the remonstrances of John A. Lowell and others, Mrs. E. Dale and others, and of Rufus Ellis and others, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The reference to the Committee on Health of a communication from the Board of Health, recommending the early purchase of a site for the erection of a hospital for persons having diseases dangerous to public health, was concurred in.

The order to pay William J. Russell, William S. Dexter and Daniel S. Richardson $4000, in full for their services as commissioners to adjudicate the damages sustained by the Model Lodging House Association and others, appellants, by reason of the action of the city in taking their property on Suffolk-street district, was considered.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 wished to know something of this order, and whether it came from any committee.

Mr. Prescott of Ward 9 stated that commissioners were appointed by the Supreme Court on the settlement of damages with parties on the Suffolk-street district; those commissioners had rendered their report, and the court had decreed that the compensation named should be paid to them.

The order was passed.

The resolve and order for widening Congress street between Water and State streets, at an adjudged expense of $484,626 (Printed City Doc., No. 63, 1873), were read once.

The following orders were passed, in concurrence: Order to pay George O. Currier $350, for certain land taken and damages occasioned by widening Shawmut avenue.

Report and order for extension of time for building on a lot of land on East Dedham street, sold by the city to Morton & Chesley, May 1, 1871.

The non-concurrence in amendment to strike out "or otherwise" in order for sale of the building on engine-house lot, corner of Warren and Quincy streets, coming up—

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 stated that the amendment was made on his motion, and as a matter of principle it should be adhered to. When he made it, he was not aware that the building was a small matter, as he was now informed. If some one would inform him that such was the fact, that the matter was of little consequence, he would not object to concurring with the Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4 replied that the sale of the building was a small matter, hardly enough to make it an object to sell it at public auction.

The Council concurred with the Board of Aldermen.

The nomination by the Board of Engineers of the Fire Department of Henry W. Longley as Secretary of that board, and the certificate of his election by the Board of Aldermen, were read, when the Council proceeded to a ballot, and Mr. Longley was elected in concurrence, by an unanimous vote, the number being 48.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Order to pay bill of S. B. Heustis, police officer, of $6, for extra service.

Order to pay Henry Kelley $150, for land taken by the extension of Harrison avenue, November 11, 1870.

Order authorizing public bathing houses to be repaired and maintained in different sections of the city, at not exceeding $15,500; also authorizing the employment of such assistance as may be required for the care and management thereof, at not exceeding $18,000.

Report and order for a loan of $20,000 to be added to the amount already authorized for erection of grammar schoolhouse, Dudley District.

Report and order authorizing plans and estimates to be procured for the erection of a stable on city lot, Highland street, for Health and Paving departments.

PAYMENT FOR LAND FOR EXTENSION OF COLUMBUS AVENUE.

The order to pay Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation $225,000, due as set forth in the indenture between the city of Boston and said corporation, dated Sept. 30, 1871, being on its passage—

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 wished for some information from some committee in relation to the subject, for there appeared to be no report accompanying the order.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 made a statement of the facts relating to the indenture between the city and the Providence Railroad Company relative to the extension of Columbus avenue, the indenture being made Sept. 30, 1871, for the conveyance of 63,000 feet of land for $475,000. Immediately afterwards about 21,000 feet of land was delivered and a payment was made of $150,000, leaving $225,000 to be paid when the remaining land was delivered. The corporation now propose in accordance with the terms of the indenture to deliver 36,500 feet of land, retaining 5600 feet on which the head house stands for one year, nine months or a year being required to complete their new depot, and for which $100,000 will remain unpaid. This delivery of land will enable the city to extend the avenue to Park square.

Mr. Shaw wished to know how the subject came before the committee, for he had not seen any petition or application of this kind for a change in the indenture.

Mr. Flynn read the date of the application upon which the report was made, and stated further that the corporation wished to retain the house for another year for the use of its offices.

Mr. Shaw read the heading of Document 78, which he held in his hand, to know if that was the indenture, and being assured that it was, said he believed that under its conditions, as a legal proposition, they had no right to vote to pay this money. It was a solemn contract on both sides, to pay the money when all the land was delivered, and this order could not be passed without a change in the contract. Property in the neighborhood had depreciated in value on account of the condition of things. The corporation had taken away a portion of their depot, but that which would remain would be in the way of the extension of Eliot street, a part of the design. They had no right, as he believed, to pay the money, until the terms of the contract were completed. The city should receive a valuable consideration for the hindrance to the business which will be caused by the delay of the extension of Eliot street.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 said the question was whether there was or was not an interference in the limit of time under the conditions of the contract. If there was not they had no claim to make upon the corporation. So far as related to retaining the head house in its connection with the extension of Eliot street, the subject had been well considered, and it was believed the city would be in no wise injured. As a consideration for the delay, the city will not be obliged to pay the remaining $100,000 for a year, which at six per cent. would be $6000 for the use of the land not delivered. That would be a fair compensation if there was no immediate necessity for a removal of the rest of the building.

Mr. Flynn stated that the company would not be obliged to make the necessary surrender until September next, under the contract. The matter was discussed very fully in the Committee on Streets, and it was believed to be a reasonable request, for which, as the company retains one-eighth of the land, we retain one-third of the payment of the money for six or nine months.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 stated the matter as he understood it, and in relation to the proposed measure, it was an arrangement whereby the terms of the contract were modified. As to the necessity for the possession of the piece of property retained, if it was not needed and the public could afford to wait, they would be compensated for the use of the property.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 said the matter had been fairly stated. The city want the land for the extension of Columbus avenue, and that will be delivered up so that the extension will be made. For the land retained the corporation offered to give the use of $50,000, but $100,000 was insisted upon, and that was agreed to. We don't need the land now, and there could be no objection to an agreement to the proposition. The City Solicitor will see to it that the form of receipt is sufficiently secure.

Mr. Shaw wished to know of Mr. Flynn if he said the Street Commissioners approved of the measure, to which he replied that he did not.

Mr. Shaw said he knew that they did not.

Mr. Shaw stated that the fairness of the arrangement was more plausible than real. Not only the extension of Columbus avenue was required, but the laying of sewers, grading of the streets, and the laying of edgestones was to be done. If Eliot street was to be extended, it was a part and parcel of the whole arrangement, and any delay in the work will be an injury to the city. A delay of a year from next September, will put off the finishing of the work two years, for nothing would be done so late in the season.

Mr. Flynn replied that the extension was but for one year from the 1st of May.

Mr. Shaw said he was glad to hear the statement, yet he had gone into a calculation which shows that the expense from delay would far exceed the $6000 which was stated as compensation for the use of the money.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 said there were many members who, like himself, did not understand the subject properly, and he would move to have the order laid on the table, which was carried.

FOURTH OF JULY EXPENDITURES.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 moved to take up the special assignment, the order for the appointment of a committee to make arrangements, at not exceeding $15,000, for the celebration of Fourth of July, 1873.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 moved, as an amendment, that no portion of said sum shall be expended for fireworks.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 16 wished to know for what purpose the $15,000 was to be expended, if fireworks were not included, for they had already stricken out the goose race, which he did not suppose cost a great sum. He could not see how the expenditure of $15,000 could be made.

Mr. Flynn replied that the expenditure last year amounted to $21,000, and this order reduces it $6500; he thought $15,000 would therefore be well spent without expenditures for fireworks.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 suggested striking out an expenditure for a sailing regatta, which he believed was a needless expense.

Mr. Pickering inquired the cost of the fireworks last year.

Mr. Flynn replied that it was $3000.

Mr. Shaw said it was $2800, with $200 for refreshments.

The motion to amend was lost, by a vote of 19 to 24, when the order was passed.

The Chair appointed the committee as follows:

Ward 3, Wells; 1, Weston; 2, Dacey; 4, Flatley; 2, Shaw; 6, Perkins; 7, Flynn; 8, Harrington; 9, Wilbur; 10, Marston; 11, Barnes; 12, Deau; 13, Morse; 14, Jones; 15, Thacher; 16, Upham.

On motion of Mr. Thacher of Ward 15, the President of the Council was added to the committee.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

M. M. Ballou, for revoking of conditions on sale of land by the city to Paul D. Wallis on Washington street, near Chester square, May 2, 1856, so that it may be placed on the same footing with that of his neighbors.

Martin Hayes, for extension of time in which to build on land on Albany street, purchased of the city in June, 1871.

Severally referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

COMMUNICATION FROM SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 presented the following communication:

I would respectfully submit to the City Council that the music stands constructed for public use and under my charge, have become so dilapidated from their long usage as to render them unfit for further services, and that others should be constructed to take their places. I would recommend that seven be constructed and made in such a manner that they can be put up and taken down without injury. For doing this work, I have received estimates, and find that an expenditure of $1500 will be required. I would therefore recommend the passage of the subjoined order.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES C. TUCKER,
Supt. of Public Buildings.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Public Buildings be authorized to procure seven music stands, at an estimated cost of $1500; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses.

The order was read once, and the further consideration thereof postponed to next meeting.

EXPENDITURES FOR COMMON AND PUBLIC GROUNDS.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Common and Public Grounds, to whom were referred the orders authorizing the expenditure, for certain purposes, of a portion of the appropriation made for the care and improvement of the public grounds during the present financial year, having considered the subject, respectfully submitted the following report:

In preparing the estimates of expenditures required in their department during the year, the committee instituted a careful scrutiny into the various items with a view to reduce them to the minimum amount necessary to keep the grounds in their present condition. Under ordinary circumstances a considerable increase over the appropriation of the previous year would have been asked for in order to improve the small parks in the outskirts of this city, but owing to the large expenditures rendered necessary in other departments of the Government on account of the fire, the committee recognized the propriety of postponing all work not absolutely required to maintain the present standard.

They accordingly reduced the estimates $10,000 below those of last year, and $7800 below those of the year before, making a total reduction of about $18,000 from the appropriations for the two years previous. Under the ordinance passed the 28th of February, 1870, the committee have the care and custody of the Common, public squares, and public fountains of the city, subject to such ordinances as may, from time to time, be passed by the City Council. After the annual appropriations are made, it is customary for the committee on this department, as well as all other committees having executive powers, to present to the City Council orders authorizing them to expend, for various purposes, an amount not exceeding the appropriation named therefor.

The orders in the present instance cover an expenditure of $35,900, from the appropriation of $80,000,—the several items named in the separate orders being as follows:

For purchasing new settees, repairing old ones and painting and repairing fences and fountains.....	$1,800
For trees, plants, shrubs and trees.....	8,700
For manure, loam, etc.....	4,000
For concrete.....	7,000
For team work, carpenter work, mowing machines, tools, etc.....	5,850
For care of grounds in East Boston.....	7,000
For care of Blackstone, Franklin, Worcester and Lowell squares and Union park.....	1,650
For improvements of Washington park, Roxbury	5,000
For a tool house on the Common.....	1,200

In many of these items, the amounts which may be required during the coming season cannot be accurately estimated. A severe storm or a severe drought may injure the grounds so as to call for unexpected outlays for sods, plants, shrubs, seeds, loam and gravel. Acting upon the best information they can obtain, the committee have asked for authority to expend for these purposes an amount not exceeding a certain sum. The whole sum named may be required or it may not. It is necessary to trust in some measure to the discretion of the committee.

For the care of the squares in East Boston and some of the small squares in the city proper, the appropriations are the same as last year, and the committee believe that the work cannot be properly performed for a less sum. In regard to the construction of a tool house on the Common, it is only necessary to state that some convenient place is required for the storage of the tools belonging to the department, and the deer park, on that portion of the Common adjoining Boylston street, seems to be the most suitable place that can be found.

There is at present no place under the control of the committee where the machines and tools can be preserved from the action of the weather and where shelter can be afforded to the workmen during a sudden storm. If the full amount designated in the order should be required to provide accommodations for this purpose, it certainly cannot be regarded as an unreasonable expenditure for a permanent structure, necessarily somewhat ornamental in its exterior appearance on account of the location.

It will be observed that the item of $1800, which has been commented upon as an expenditure for settees alone, covers a number of other things, namely, the painting and repairing of all the fences and fountains in and around the public grounds of the city. The item for concrete, $7000, is based upon estimates for work required upon the Common. The occupation of the Baek Bay lands for dwellings has caused a large amount of travel across the Public Garden and the Common at all seasons of the year, and it is necessary that the paths principally used should be constantly kept in good condition. This can be accomplished more economically and satisfactorily by the use of concrete than in any other way. It can be shown conclusively that instead of injuring the trees or grass on the borders of the walks where it is used, it is on the whole beneficial to them.

It is hardly necessary to make any explanation in regard to the appropriation of $5000 for the improvement of Washington park in Ward 14. To put the park in proper condition at least $20,000 will be required, and that sum was put into the original estimates for the year, but finally reduced to $10,000. The committee now ask authority to expend only half the amount appropriated. With these statements the committee respectfully return the orders to the City Council and ask that they may be adopted.

The question was stated to be on the passage of the several orders, which were severally taken up.

The order authorizing the building of a tool house on the Common, at not exceeding $1200, was first considered.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 said there were great objections to the erection of any building on the Common, of any name or nature. The erection of a coliseum was a movement vetoed by the people, although to be but temporary, and as had been stated, if a building as proposed should be put up, it would be surrounded by broken wheelbarrows and other articles of an unsightly character. It could not be a slightly structure for the Common, and he did not believe in trespassing upon the Common with any kind of building.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 stated that the subject was discussed in committee, and it was believed there should be a place of deposit for the various tools used by the workmen, the mowing machines and other tools, which would be injured by exposure. It was proposed to put up the building in the deer park.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said he was in favor of putting up such a building in the deer park, where the watering machines and other articles could be stored.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 said it was well known that many of the implements which were used were liable to injury from exposure to the weather, and while he was opposed to desecrating the Common, there must be some place for these tools, which could be provided for there, otherwise there would be a great loss of time and expense in their transportation.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 inquired on what part of the Common it was proposed to build this tool house.

Mr. Wilbur replied that it was to be on the deer park.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 wished to know if these orders were here as the result of their recommendation, and being answered that they were, said he believed they should be passed.

Mr. Wilbur stated that they were under consideration for two hours in the committee.

Mr. Barnes again expressed the hope that they would be passed.

Mr. Shaw said he could see no objection to a house in the deer park, a slightly, pretty house, which could not be put anywhere else. He understood there was a sketch for such a building, which he asked the messenger to exhibit. Such a building would make a respectable appearance, in which the various implements would be housed.

Mr. Powers of Ward 4 said he failed to see the expediency or necessity for such a building, for they had got along many years without it, and the Common was no larger. They should hesitate a good deal before making encroachments on the Common by the building of a tool house, and he could not see why the workmen could not carry their tools home on their backs. No such a building could be seen on the Central Park in New York or on squares anywhere else. They had one building too many now on the Common, and if a tool house was needed there, they would be required some time on all the squares. The greenhouse on the Public Garden might be extended, if necessary, in its present style, for the purpose. The same argument used for a tool house might be urged in favor of a stable, and in time a tenement house be required for the workmen on the Common.

Mr. Wells said he hardly thought the workmen could carry mowing machines and watering carts on their backs. He had to provide a place or means to carry tools when he hired men to do work. There might be a place for tools under the bridges in Central Park, but there was hardly room for them under the bridge in the Public Garden. They might deposit the tools in some of the tombs in the grave yard. As to putting up a building on the deer park, there was one there, and a larger one would take off the deathliness from the graveyard.

Mr. Wilbur said there was a reason for a tool house in the fact that machines were now used in place of scythes for mowing, and when a building is completed there will be no objection to it.

Mr. Blackmar said they ought to guard against encroachments on the Common. The tools which were used could all be taken away at night, and could be carried in carts if the men were not able to carry them on their backs.

The order was passed.

The other orders were severally passed, as follows:

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $1800 for settees and for painting and repairing settees, fenees and fountains on the Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $4000 for manure, loam and sods for Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $5850 for team work, carpenter work, mowing machines and tools for Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $7000 for gravel and concrete for walks and malls on the Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $8700 for trees, plants, shrubs and seeds for the Common, etc.

Order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $5000 in improving Washington park.

Order authorizing a contract with John Reardon for the care of Blackstone and certain other squares and Union park, at not exceeding $1650.

Order authorizing a contract with Peter Callahan for the care of Maverick and certain other squares, and the trees in streets of Ward 1, at not exceeding $700.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Shaw of Ward 5—

Ordered, That the Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings consider and report as soon as may be, what, if any, measures should be taken by the owners and occupants of buildings composed principally of combustible materials, or stored with combustible materials, in densely populated parts of the city, the better to preserve such buildings from fire, and for the better protection of the lives and property of the inhabitants of such localities.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 offered the following orders, which were read once:

by the Committee on Public Instruction and the expense of procuring the same to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to procure plans and estimates for the construction of an English High Schoolhouse and a Latin Schoolhouse upon the land recently purchased by the city for the purpose on Warren avenue, said plans to be approved by the Committee on Public Instruction; the expense of procuring the same to be charged to the appropriation for Schoolhouses, Public Buildings.

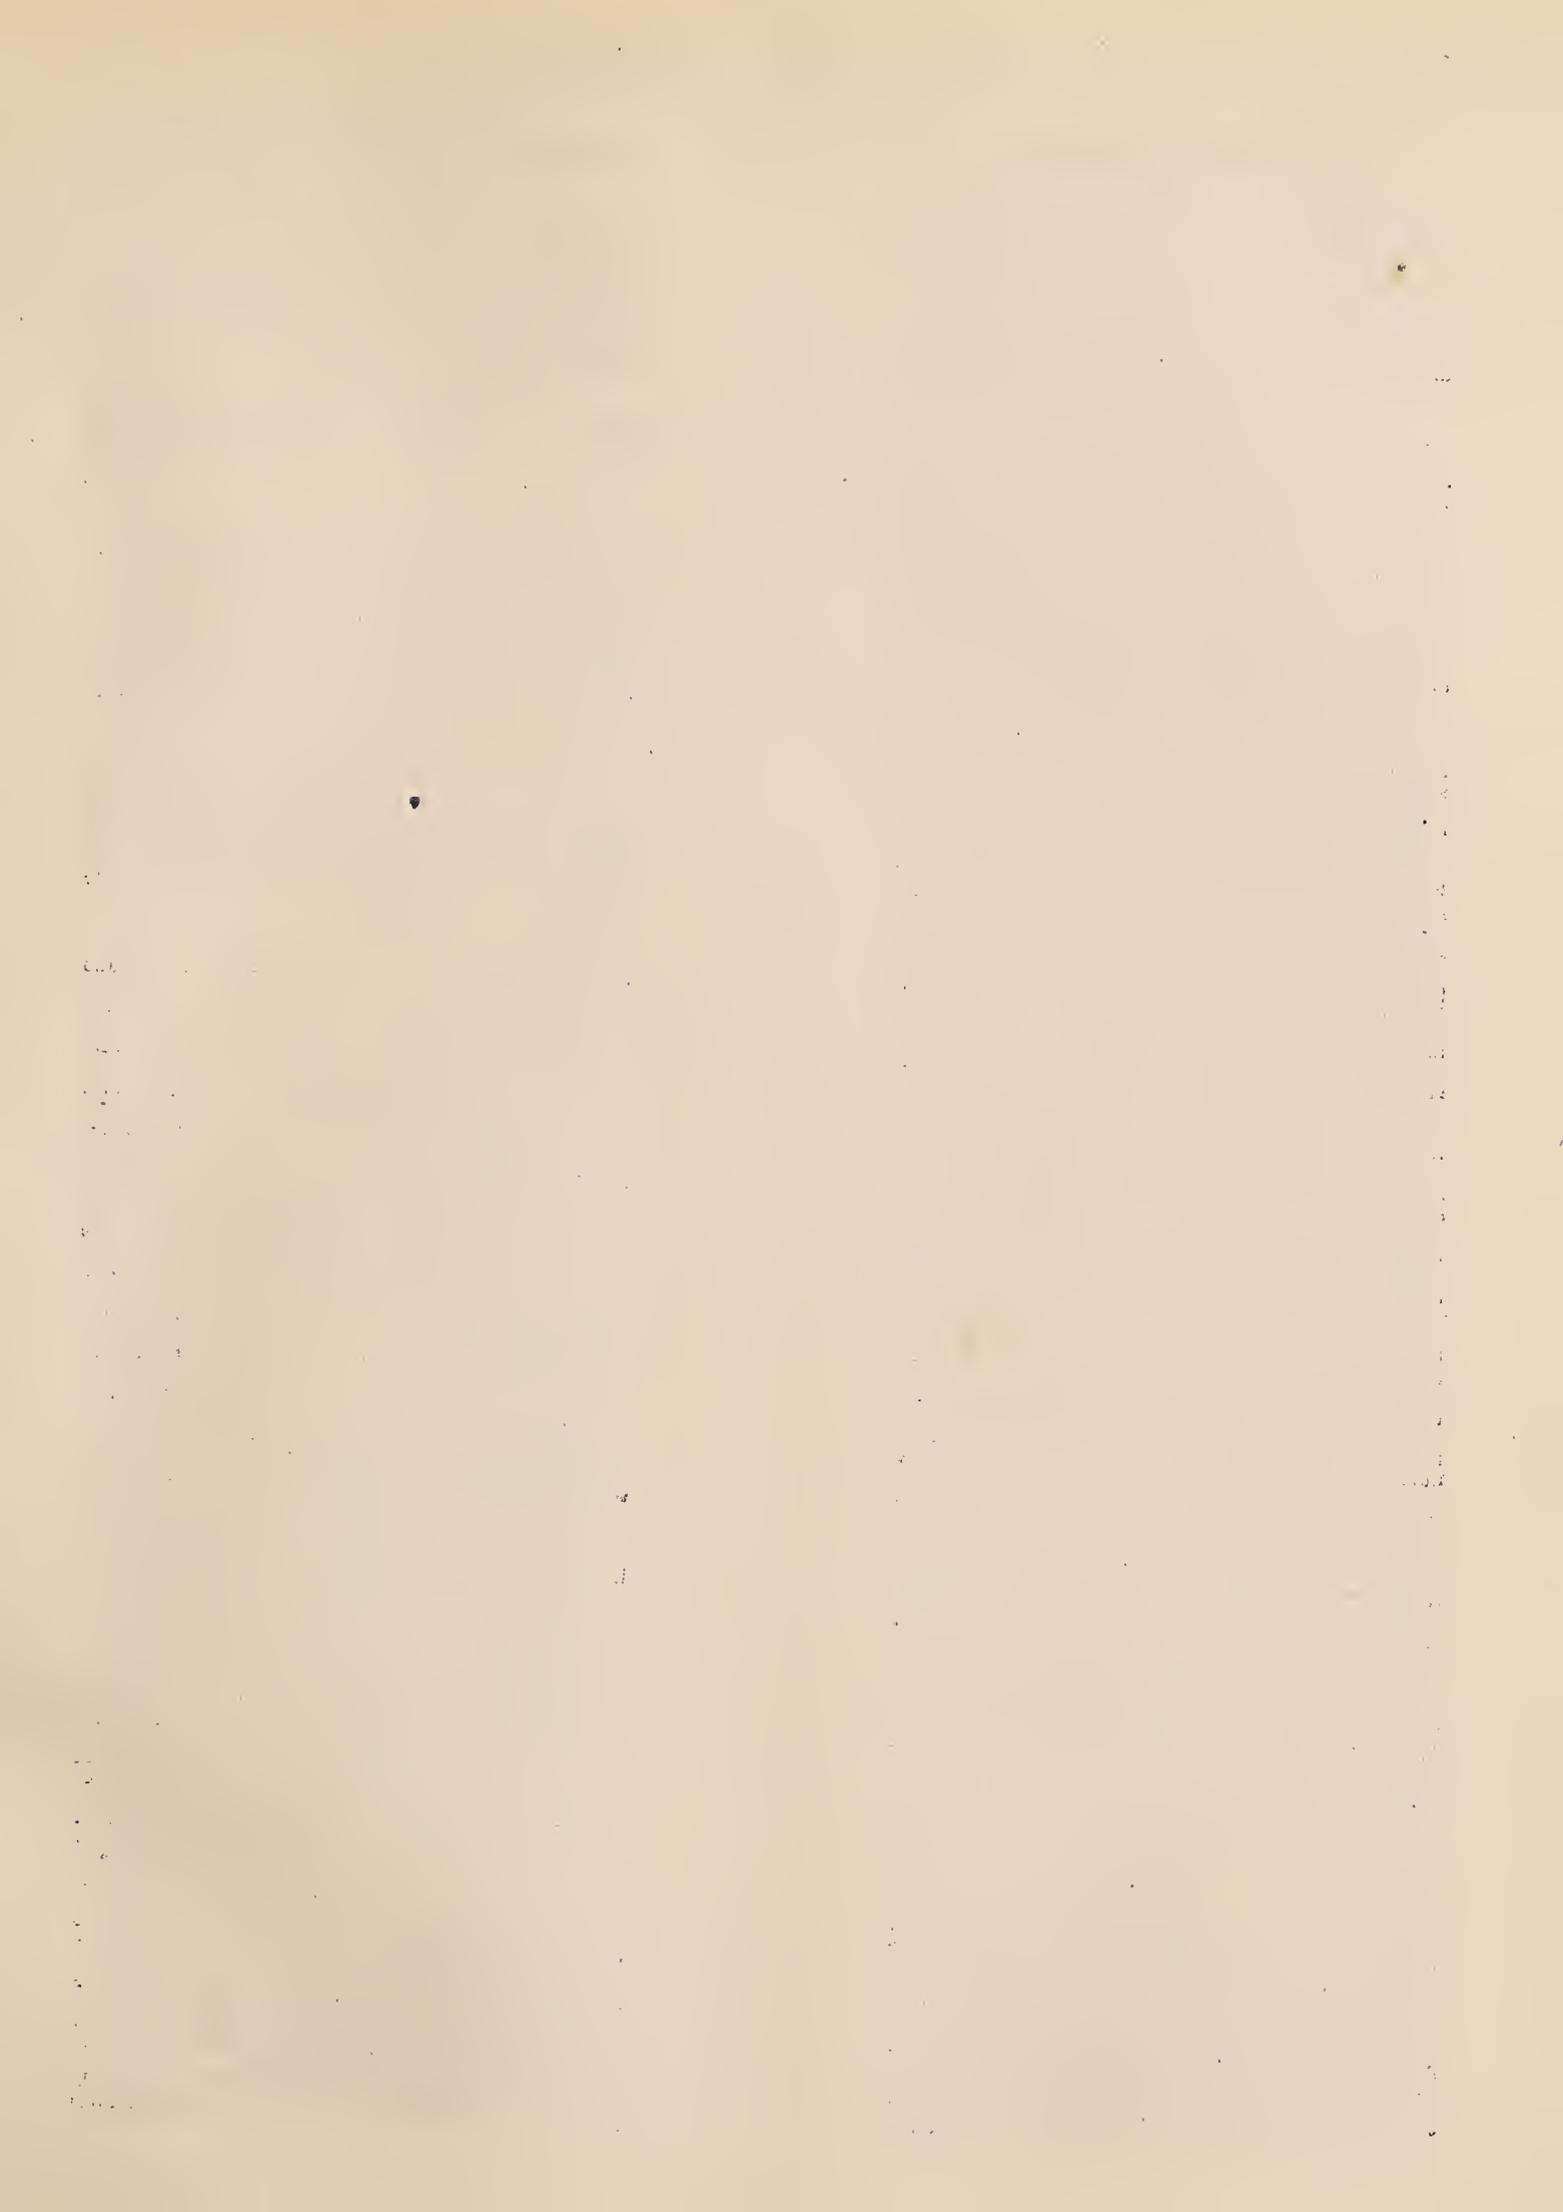

On motion of Mr. Dean, of Ward 12, the order authorizing a bathing house to be constructed for men and boys at Mt. Washington-avenue Bridge, at not exceeding $4000, was taken from the table and passed.

The Mayor's message, returning without his approval and with his objections, an order to provide accommodation in the Primary Schoolhouse on Appleton street, for the Normal School recently established by the School Committee (City Doc. No. 65, 1873), was taken from the table on motion of Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11.

The question was taken upon the passage of the order, the objections of the Mayor to the contrary notwithstanding.

The vote on the passage of the order was, yeas none, nays 43.

Order for the appointment of a committee of one from each ward, with such as this Board may join, to make arrangements, at not exceeding $15,000, for the celebration of Fourth of July, 1873.

The whole Board of Aldermen were joined to the Committee on the Fourth of July.

The following report and orders were considered:

Report from the Committee on Common and Public Grounds recommending the passage of the following orders: Authorizing the building of a tool house on the Common, at not exceeding $1200; authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $1800 for settees and for painting and repairing settees, fences and fountains on the Common, etc.; authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $4000 for manure, loam and sods for Common, etc.; authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $5850 for team work, carpenter work, mowing machines and tools for Common, etc.; authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $7000 for gravel and concrete for walks and malls on the Common, etc.; authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $8700 for trees, plants, shrubs and seeds for the Common, etc.; authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $5000 in improving Washington park; authorizing a contract with John Reardon for the care of Blackstone and certain other squares and Union park, at not exceeding $1650; authorizing a contract with Peter Callahan for the care of Maverick and certain other squares, and the trees in streets of Ward 1, at not exceeding $700.

Alderman Gibson inquired why so much was proposed to be expended in concrete.

Alderman Clark replied that the committee believed concrete walks to be the most economical and for the best interests of the city, and so much of the amount named would be used as might be required.

Alderman Gibson characterized concrete walks to be a complete humbug, and the expenditures for them a throwing away of money. In a hot day they would tread out, and in cold weather break off, proving to be worthless. To a statement of Alderman Clark that those now in use had proved to be very durable, Alderman Gibson said he was not aware that there were any on the Common. Red gravel or yellow sand was better material to be used for walks.

Alderman Clark said he was surprised that the Alderman had so little knowledge of the Common as not to know of the existence of concrete walks on it. The construction of walks of red gravel and yellow sand require much money for their repair, being washed by every rain.

Alderman Gibson expressed the opinion that the North-River flagging stone made the best public walks, which would last as long as a man wished to travel over them.

Alderman Clark replied that there was a walk of flagging stone on one of the up-hill paths of the Common, and it was necessary to reset this flagging every spring, on account of its being washed from its place. Neither the flagging nor sand nor gravel was stationary, concrete proving to be the best walks.

Alderman Quincy inquired whether it had been settled as to the effect which concrete walks would have on the roots of trees. In the crosswalks it might not prove injurious, but on the malls it would heretically seal the ground so that the roots of the trees would get no sustenance. Before using it on malls this question should be settled.

Alderman Clark replied that the whole subject had been considered by the committee and by the Superintendent of the Common, and it was contemplated to make experiments as to the effects of such walks on trees. It was proposed to form a basin around the trunks of trees in which water may be collected, for it is now almost impossible to get water through the solid walks on the Tremont-street mall. The experiments will be made on the Tremont-street mall.

The several orders were passed, in concurrence.

The report and order for a loan of $20,000, to be added to the amount already authorized for erection of Grammar Schoolhouse, Dudley District, being under consideration—

Alderman Gaffield moved to lay the order over one week.

Alderman Sayward inquired the reason of the motion.

Alderman Gaffield replied that there were members of the School Committee and teachers who were not satisfied in regard to the proposed lighting of the building on one side, and it was the desire of some that it should be lighted on two sides. For the purpose of considering the matter further, he asked to have the order laid over.

Alderman Sayward requested that the motion be withdrawn, which was done, when he stated that the Committee on Public Buildings had done all that was desirable to be done in the procuring and approval of plans, and after they had been approved of, members of the local School Committee were not satisfied, and want a larger house; for that was the object in securing a delay. The design is for a house of fourteen rooms, and in his opinion twelve were enough, for there will be two for future use. Should there be a stop put to the appropriation now, it will be on the ground of location and manner of lighting, and they will be obliged to hear the stories over again. It was not right that they should be dictated to by individual members of the School Committee when the plans had been approved of by the School Committee and were satisfactory to the citizens of the Highlands.

Alderman Gibson did not object to delay if expense could be saved by it.

Alderman Sayward said the delay would have the effect of increasing the cost.

Alderman Gibson believed if a few more windows were needed it would be better to put them in now than hereafter at a greater expense.

Alderman Sayward replied that there was no need of more windows. The house was planned to satisfy the Superintendent of Schools and many teachers who desired light upon but one side of the house. A meeting of school teachers had been called to consider it, and there were as many views among them as there were teachers.

Alderman Emery said he had looked over the plans and was satisfied with them. They were modelled after the house on L street, yet if there were good reasons he would not object to laying the subject over.

Alderman Sayward said the real objection of the local committee was that the house was not large enough.

Alderman Gibson, as a member of the Committee on Public Buildings, was not aware that a larger house was wanted. As a question of doubt, and as materials were falling in value, he did not object to delay in the passage of the order.

Alderman Clark hoped the order would be laid over, as there was some difference of opinion among the committee, and by delay they would more fully get their ideas and what changes are necessary.

Alderman Sayward denied that there was any difference of opinion among the committee; it was only a local committee which made any opposition, and if there was any mystification in the matter, it was the Alderman who made it.

Alderman Gibson believed it would be better, if there was any difficulty, to meet it now, for if alterations were required hereafter, they would cost five or six times as much.

Alderman Gaffield, as chairman of the Committee on Public Instruction, believed an explanation due from him, and stated that he had a letter from the local committee, in which they state that they did not approve of the plans. They had three grounds of objection—first, to the lot, which they believed to be too noisy a place; they objected, also, to the size of the house and to lighting it only on one side. That was a question for oculists to decide, which would be best for the eyes of school children. At a meeting of masters, they were all in favor of lighting the use on two sides.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the order was laid on the table.

The ordinance was read once.

REPORT ON BASE-BALL PLAYING ON THE COMMON.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Common and Public Grounds, to whom was referred the petition of the Beacon Base-Ball Club for the restoration of the northwestern portion of the Common as a play ground, and the petition of Rev. C. A. Bartol and others in aid of the same; and to whom were also referred the remonstrances of George T. Bigelow, Rev. Rufus Ellis, John A. Lowell, Mrs. Mary E. Dale and others against the use of the Common, as prayed for, having carefully considered the subject, submitted the following report:

It is represented on the part of the petitioners that the Common has from time immemorial been used as a play ground by the boys; that of late years the privileges which they formerly enjoyed have been greatly restricted; that they are prevented from occupying a sufficiently large portion of the grounds to accommodate those who desire to play the game of base ball; that it is necessary to the health of the young men and boys in the city that opportunities should be afforded to indulge in this game; that no other place can be found so accessible or so suitable for the purpose as the western portion of the Common, known as the Parade Ground. These are the substantial arguments upon which the Government is asked to grant the prayer of the petitioners, although others of less force have been advanced, namely, that the boys have certain special privileges in the use of the Common, and that it is the duty of the municipal authorities to provide convenient and suitable play grounds for them.

Previous to 1870 the care and custody of the Common and other public grounds in the city were in the hands of the Board of Aldermen. In that year the ordinances were changed, so as to provide that all the powers formerly exercised by the Aldermen should be vested in a joint standing committee of the City Council. When the committee received this trust, steps had already been taken to reclaim the grounds lying between Monument Hill and the corner of Charles and Beacon streets, from the condition into which they had been brought by the action of the ball players.

In continuing the restrictions which the Aldermen had found it necessary to impose on account of the growth of the city, the committee have been governed solely by the desire to secure equal privileges in the use of the grounds to all the inhabitants of the city. There is no foundation whatever for the idea that any class in the community has a prescriptive right to use the Common or any portion thereof to the exclusion of others. It was not until the year 1830, during the mayoralty of the elder Quincy, that its use as a common grazing field for cattle was discontinued, "dangerous accidents having occurred to promenaders." The claim to continue in the exercise of this privilege on the part of any taxpayer is stronger than the claim to exercise the game of base ball. The use of the Common as a grazing field dates from the earliest times; the use as a base-ball ground, with the game as at present practised, does not date farther back than 1858.

If it be said that the increase of population has made it impossible to accommodate all those who might desire to pasture cattle on the ground, and that to prevent discrimination it is necessary to exclude all from the privilege, it can also be said that the 25,000 or 30,000 young men and boys, who, as represented by the petitioners, desire to engage in the game, cannot all be accommodated, even if the grounds were wholly given up to them. The claim to exclusive use as a "training field" is undoubtedly stronger than any other, as the use for such a purpose is in the exercise of a public duty; but the City Solicitor has decided that the rights of the City Council over the Common were the same as their rights over the Public Garden or any of the squares, and the Council can forbid training there whenever the welfare of the city requires it to be done.

The occupation of the lands lying west of the Common by dwelling houses, and the facilities which the paths on the Common afford to persons passing to and from these houses to the business portions of the city, make it necessary to the public safety and convenience that different rules should now be applied to the use of the Common for certain purposes than those which were formerly found sufficient.

It is admitted that the game is to a certain extent dangerous, both to those who participate in it and to those who travel on the paths in the vicinity of the place where it is played; but its advocates say it is not more dangerous than many other sports in which most young men indulge, such as gunning, boating and fishing. The use of guns for shooting purposes has not, we believe, been permitted upon the Common within the memory of any man now living, and the pleasures of fishing and boating are not pursued upon the Common or the Public Garden in such a manner as to endanger the public safety.

It is not necessary for the Government to determine whether the game of base ball is healthful or otherwise, to those who practise it in the new-fashioned way. That is a matter which may safely be left to their parents or teachers. But it is the duty of the Government, a duty of supreme importance, so to regulate the use of the public property that every person can enjoy it and be protected in the enjoyment of it. That definition of our duty cannot be disputed. Applying it in the present case, it is clear that the petition ought not to be granted. It is undesirable for two reasons, either one of which would be sufficient.

(1.) The common enjoyment of the public grounds would be restricted to the enjoyment by a certain class of persons. It makes no difference in the application of the principle, whether the class is large or small. The Government cannot justly make a rule by which even one of its citizens, entitled to protection under the laws, is restricted in his rights. It cannot be pretended that the occupation of the grounds by base ball-players is consistent with its use by the citizens generally. (2.) The game interferes with the public safety and convenience. There are a number of well-authenticated cases in which persons passing along the paths and malls, as they had a right to do, and using due care, have been seriously injured, and the knowledge that the game is practised in the vicinity of the public walks undoubtedly prevents a great many women and children from using the grounds for healthful exercise and enjoyment. For these reasons a majority of the committee would respectfully recommend that the petitioners have leave to withdraw.

The undersigned, a member of the Committee on the Common and Public Grounds, respectfully dissents from the recommendations of the majority, and begs leave to state briefly his reasons therefor:

It is well known that the Parade Ground is not a part of the original Common; it was formed within a comparatively few years by filling the marsh and flats bordering on the Back Bay, and was laid out with a view to its use exclusively for military exercises, and for such games as required an open field. The ground was made as level as possible, and no trees were planted except along the borders of the malls, and but few paths were laid out over it.

When, in 1869, the portion adjoining the Beacon-street mall was surrounded by a fence and laid down to grass, it was understood that it would be restored, in one or two seasons at most, to its former use. It is now proposed to place permanent restrictions upon that portion of the ground and to limit those who desire to play base ball and similar games to less than half the original space allotted to them. The increase of population upon which this restriction is based is in fact a strong reason for its removal. If the whole ground was needed ten or fifteen years ago to accommodate the young men and boys who desire recreation and exercise, it is hardly possible that a smaller space will accomplish the purpose now. The argument of the majority proves too much. If the principles laid down in their report are to be strictly adhered to in the use of the public grounds, it will be necessary to exclude entirely not only the game of base ball and all similar games, but all shows and military reviews. This they do not propose to do. They permit the boys to occupy a small portion of the grounds for their games, and they permit various other classes and individuals to have special privileges.

Looking at this matter as it affects the general interests, it appears to the undersigned that the request of the petitioners is a reasonable one, and that it ought to be granted. A small number of persons will be incommoded, but a very large number of persons will be benefited. A great deal of stress is laid upon the danger which would result to the passers by from the use of the grounds adjoining the mall. It is only during a portion of the day that the grounds are used by the boys, and persons going to or from the West End can easily avoid the danger, if any exists, without much inconvenience. Those who desire to obtain recreation by promenading have the whole of the original Common for the purpose.

The undersigned would therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order to grant the prayer of the petitioners:

JAMES POWER.

Ordered, That the Committee on the Common and Public Grounds be instructed to restore the northerly portion of the Parade Ground to its original use as a play ground for amateur players of base ball, foot ball and similar games.

The subject being under consideration, Alderman Power moved to substitute the report of the minority for that of the majority.

Alderman Power, in support of the motion, said he believed it was hardly necessary for him to say anything, since the reasons of the majority sustained his view of the question. He was opposed to restricting the use of the Common to any one class of persons, which the majority claimed, while their design was to prohibit the boys from playing on the Common. No one objected to the proposed use of the other portion of the Parade Ground as a play ground except those who lived in the immediate vicinity.

To those who made objection he contended that they should consider the enjoyment which the city had given them in making a perfect paradise of the Common, but instead of this they seemed to think that it was for nobody but them to enjoy. It was objected that lives were endangered, yet in all this large space of the Common but the use of six acres was asked for, and the playing was when most of those who objected were out of town. When they say the boys shall not play there they deprive them of healthy exercise which will do more damage than if any person were injured by their playing. As the matter had been thoroughly discussed he would not take much time in speaking upon it.

Alderman Clark said he did not propose to take much time on the subject, the reasons of the majority being well set forth in their report, and he did not doubt that of the minority was the best which could be made in opposition. He contended that in allowing a base-ball club of seventy persons to use the ground proposed, it does exclude a large majority of the citizens from a third part of the Common for most of the year. It was an exclusion of the old gentlemen, the middle aged and the ladies and children from a large portion of the Common for three-fourths of the year. Such an exclusion was not right. It was not for the benefit of the boys, for since the introduction of base-ball playing they had the testimony of Mr. Gardner, that the health of the children of the public schools was not so good as it was ten years ago. Perhaps it was from this very reason.

It was not often that 200 or 300 mothers come here and ask to be protected in their rights and in those of their children. This one remonstrance, signed by 175 women, should be enough. In reply to what was said about the enjoyment from beautiful squares and parks, it was in answer that these persons are obliged to pay a high rate of taxation in consequence of these improvements. In regard to the play, it was dangerous sport to those who engage in it and to others. If this was the only reason, it should be a sufficient reason to prohibit such playing. On this point he received a letter, a day or two ago, which he read as follows:

Boston, May 8, 1873.

Mr. Clark: Dear Sir—I am sorry that I could not have been present to have given my testimony before your committee on the hearing of base-ball playing on the Common. I am one of those who are opposed to it, for this reason. Three years ago I lived in close proximity to the Park-square entrance, and one day when going home, crossing the Common from West to Carver street, near the graveyard, I was knocked down, having been struck by a base ball on my head, just above the temple. It completely stunned me, and I was helped home by two strangers. The physician attended me for several weeks without much success as to my full recovery, and finally recommended me to leave business and go into the country.

After several months' trial, I found that I was growing worse, so much so that I was obliged to give up business entirely. On my physician recommending a trip to Europe, I went to Paris and placed myself under the treatment of an eminent physician. The result is that I am much better now, but not entirely recovered from the blow. I sacrificed $6000 or $8000 in settling my affairs in order to leave promptly, as advised. Three years' suspension from business, together with doctor's bills, medicine, etc., making a sum total of $40,000 in money, besides the mental and physical suffering which I have undergone.

Order to pay heirs of Lewis Clapp $550, for land taken to widen Cottage street.

Order to pay Edward Jordan $2230, for land taken for the extension of Washington street; to be charged to the Washington-street Extension Loan.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS FOR PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

Alderman Sayward submitted the following communications from the Board of Directors for Public Institutions:

Boston, May 9, 1873.

To the Honorable the City Council of Boston: Gentlemen—The Board of Directors for Public Institutions respectfully recommend a change in section 7 of the ordinance in relation to this Board (page 403, Laws and Ordinances, 1869,) which requires them to advertise for supplies and materials to be obtained which exceed in value the sum of $3000; and also in section 8 of the same ordinance, so that the reports of the board may be made annually, instead of quarterly.

Respectfully,

J. P. BRADLEE,
President.

Referred to Committee on Ordinances.

Boston, May 9, 1873.

To the Honorable the City Council of Boston: Gentlemen—In September last, the Board of Directors for Public Institutions addressed a communication to the City Council setting forth the fact that the rooms occupied by the Board were inadequate for the constantly increasing business of the institutions, and requesting the Council to provide more suitable accommodations.

The Board now respectfully review the request contained in that communication, and earnestly desire the favorable consideration of the City Council. The demand for more suitable offices seems to the Board to be imperative, and the contemplated erection of a fire-proof vault for the Treasury Department will render one room entirely useless for the purpose for which it is now occupied.

Respectfully,

(Signed by all the members of the Board).

Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

REPORT ON FIRE INSURANCE DISTRICTS.

Alderman Brown, from the Committee on the Assessor's Department on the part of the Board of Aldermen, to whom was referred the communication from his Honor the Mayor in relation to the division of the city into fire-insurance districts, as required by the eighteenth section of chapter 375 of the acts of 1872, having carefully considered the subject, would respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That, with the approval of the Insurance Commissioner of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the city of Boston be divided into thirty-one fire-insurance districts, as shown on the plan prepared by the City Surveyor, dated May 1, A. D. 1873, the specifications of said districts being as follows:

[Districts 1 and 2 are comprised within the territory of East Boston, and divided by the line of the Eastern Railroad; districts 3, 4 and 5 are in the territory of Ward 2; district 6, Ward 3, as at present defined; districts 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 in Ward 4; 13 to 19 in Ward 5; 20, Ward 6; 21, Ward 8; 22 and 23, Ward 7; 24, Ward 12; 25, Ward 10; 26, Ward 9; 27, Ward 11; 28, Ward 15; 29, Ward 14; 30, Ward 13; 31, Ward 16.]

The order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Stebbins, the report of the Committee on Claims on the claims of Holohan & Maguire and Smith & McGaragle, for work on the smallpox hospital destroyed by fire, was taken up, when he moved to accept so much of the report as related to the claim of Holohan & Maguire.

Alderman Power inquired what effect its acceptance would have on the other claim of Smith & McGaragle.

Alderman Quincy and Stebbins each said it would not affect any action on the claim of Smith & McGaragle, and, at the request of Alderman Power, the Chair ruled that it would have no effect.

Alderman Clark stated that one member of the Board was absent who took much interest in this subject, and desired to vote upon it, and although he might not vote as he should on one branch of the claims, as far as he was personally concerned he was ready to act, but thought it would be better to lay the subject over.

Alderman Power said that in accordance with the ruling of the Chair, as this will not affect the other claim, he could not see any impropriety in passing it now, as there was no objection to it, and the gentleman who was absent could vote on the other at another time.

Alderman Sayward inquired if the passage of this part of the report would cut off the other, and Alderman Brown desired to make two separate questions.

Alderman Quincy stated that there would be no difficulty in the proposed action, for the difficulty in the former case was in the proposed substitution of the report of the minority for that of the majority. There could be no objection so far as related to the claim of Holohan & Maguire that it may be passed.

Alderman Gibson believed that action should be postponed in the absence of a member of the Board, and moved that the report be laid on the table.

Alderman Stebbins stated that the Board were unanimously in favor of paying the claim of the plumbers, who were in need of the money, and there could be no objection to the passing of that portion of the report.

Alderman Quincy stated that in a conversation with the absent member, he was convinced he would vote for the order.

The Chair stated that his ruling had not been changed, but the question was different. The adoption of this motion could not prevent any one from putting in an order for the payment of the other claim. But should this be passed, it would go to the Council, and it might be as well to have the whole go together.

The motion to lay on the table was carried.

ORDER OF NOTICE.

Order authorizing seven music stands to be procured, at an estimated cost of $1500.

The second order was amended by substituting "Newbury" for "Marlborough," as it was written, which Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said was an error, unaccounted for.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Jefferson D. Merritt, to be compensated for injuries to his property caused by an alleged defect in Conant street. Referred to Committee on Claims.

William Pope and others, for a bathing house for women and girls at Commercial Point. Referred to Committee on Bathing.

South Boston Iron Company, Fulton Foundry and others, for a hose company in Engine House No. 15.

W. H. Mumler, with reference to a telegraph system in connection with steam-fire engines.

Severally referred to the Committee on Fire Department.

J. T. Gurney, for leave to construct hoistways and platforms outside of a building No. 24 Warren street. Referred to Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

S. Weld and others, for an investigation into a contract in relation to city official. Referred to Committee on Health.

Petitions of P. H. Rogers and others, for acceptance of Whitney street, and of Matthew Gateley, for the grading and improvement of Mechanic street, were ordered to be sent up.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 presented the petition of J. M. Merrill and 108 others, that Madison square may be graded, fenced, etc., and on his request the petition was read, setting forth that in consequence of representations made to them that the city would place said square in an improved condition, they had invested their money there in houses. Instead thereof they find it impossible to induce people to become occupants of the houses there. The appearance of a block of houses badly built and nearly falling, the failure to fill up and grade the square have caused the property to depreciate to such an extent as to ruin many who embarked in the enterprise. They therefore request that measures be adopted to hasten the improvements proposed to be made.

Mr. Shaw made a statement of the condition of the square, and of the land and buildings in the vicinity, the land sinking and uneven, sidewalks out of order, buildings settling, etc., of which he had no knowledge until recently. For the purpose of having the whole condition of the territory investigated, he moved a reference of the petitions to the Committees on Streets and Common.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 said he saw no necessity for referring the matter to the Committee on the Common.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 also objected to referring the matter to two committees, when it would be better considered by one committee.

Mr. Shaw said he hoped that by referring to the two committees the whole subject would be better understood, and all the improvements required would be provided for, but he would modify his motion to a reference only to Committee on Common.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 said he had noticed that two blocks of buildings had been closed by order of the Board of Health, and were to be moved, and he could not see what the Committee on the Common could have to do with that part of the improvements in that neighborhood.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 15 said he was very familiar with that neighborhood, and knew that it requires a great deal of looking into. The sidewalks were in the worst possible condition, and settled out of shape, and the buildings were settled.

Mr. Jones of Ward 13 inquired if the streets in that vicinity had been accepted.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 replied that the streets had not been accepted, and further, that the Committee on Streets had nothing to do with sidewalks, which belonged to the Committee on Paving.

The reference to Committee on Common was carried.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The following orders from the School Committee were read:

Ordered, That the City Council be requested to purchase a lot of land and erect thereon a primary-school building, of not less than four rooms, in the vicinity of Blue Hill avenue and Quincy street.

Ordered, That the City Council be requested to provide additional accommodations for the primary school in Francis street, in the Comins School District.

The orders were referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

CITY TREASURER'S ACCOUNTS.

A communication was received from F. U. Tracy, City and County Treasurer, transmitting his accounts as Treasurer for the financial year ending April 30.

The accounts as Treasurer, show receipts and expenditures to the amount of $18,096,295 90, with cash on hand April 30, of $2,803,597 36, and a balance of $886,601 54. As County Treasurer, the receipts and expenditures amounted to $337,319 85, with a balance of $200,190 72, which with $686,410 82, make the balance as above, 886,601 54.

Referred to the Committee on the Treasury Department.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Page of Ward 9, from the Joint Standing Committee on Armories, to whom was referred the petition of Captain M. J. Dunne, Company B, Ninth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., for an increase in the allowance for rent of armory of said company, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid the sum of $600 per annum, from April 1, 1873, until otherwise ordered, for rent of armory of Company B. Ninth Regiment of Infantry, M. V. M., in hall No. 577 Washington street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

The order was read once.

Mr. Burt of Ward 16, from the Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department, to whom was referred the petition of Isaae P. Clark and others, that a horse hose carriage be located in Longwood, Ward 15, after a careful consideration of the subject, are of the unanimous opinion, that the prayer of the petitioners ought to be granted, and would respectfully recommend that the Committee on Public Buildings be requested to purchase a lot of land, and erect thereon a suitable house for a horse hose company. Accepted, and referred to Committee on Public Building.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred the order from the City Council to procure plans and estimates for a new police station house on land belonging to the city, on Fourth street, between K and L streets, South Boston, made a report, as follows:

They are in favor of the adoption of the same plan as used in the erection of the new station house, No. 9, Boston Highlands, it being well adapted for the purposes of the South Boston district. They have consulted with the Committee on Police, who are favorable to using the plans, as proposed. The committee estimate that for the erection of such a building the sum of $45,000 will be required, and would recommend the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to erect a police station house on Fourth street, between K and I streets, on land belonging to the city, from plans used in the erection of Police Station House No. 9, Boston Highlands, at an estimated cost of $45,000.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $45,000; the same to be applied for the erection of a police station house in South Boston.

ORDER PASSED.

On motion of Mr. Burt of Ward 16—

Whereas, Messrs. Gershom Sherman and Eben Witherell, acting as members of the Fire Department and attached to Engine Company No. 5, were seriously injured at the fire on Commercial wharf, July 26, 1872, while in the discharge of their duty—

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Gershom Sherman and Eben Witherell each the sum of $200, on account of injuries received while in the discharge of their duties as members of the Fire Department; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for the Fire Department.

COLUMBUS-AVENUE EXTENSION.

On motion of Mr. Barnes of Ward 11, the order to pay the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation $225,000, due as set forth in the indenture between the city of Boston and said corporation, dated September 30, 1871, was taken from the table.

Mr. Barnes advocated the passage of the order, for the purpose of securing the completion of the extension of Columbus avenue, which he believed would be done should the order be passed.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 hoped the order would not be passed, for he had seen no reason to change his mind from the opinion expressed by him last week. There was nothing in the order which was desirable on the part of the city, and it was more than ever his opinion that it was entirely wrong to take the position in which the order places the city. He would challenge contradiction from any legal gentleman that the city has any right to pay one cent to the Providence Railroad Corporation until the contract made with that corporation by the city is entirely completed, and he would ask any reasonable person present if his position was not correct.

By what right, he asked, have we as a branch of the City Council to vote to pay $225,000 on trust, to that corporation, for it was nothing else but a payment on trust, not in accordance with the contract? By the terms of the contract, which he found in City Document No. 78, it was as plain as possible—as plain as the English language could make it—that they could not record their votes to defeat the terms of the contract, for it was nothing short of that. These conditions, he read, and remarking upon them, he said the head house of the depot was in the way of the extension of Columbus avenue, and the land was only to be paid for under a proper surrender of it. He wished to know why such a claim was made, and could not consent to vote for the order.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 wished to know of the Committee on Streets, whether on a passage of the order they could have the extension of Columbus avenue, for it was high time that the street should be extended for public convenience, and involving the improvement of so much taxable property, it was time that something should be done.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 stated in reply that the extension of Columbus avenue was laid out, and runs through this land, and if the surrender was made, as proposed, the extension of the avenue would be completed this season.

Mr. Pickering of Ward 6 said he could not agree with the gentleman from Ward 5 as to the effect of the passage of the order. The railroad corporation wishes to surrender a portion of the land, and retain another small portion for a year, for which they are willing to pay $6000 as interest. Comparing the price to be paid with sales on the Back Bay not so eligible, he did not think it an unreasonable price, and instead of being a violation of the contract, it was simply a modification of it, for which the corporation is willing to pay an equivalent.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 declared that the railroad corporation was not entitled to a cent, and instead of giving the city the use of $100,000, for a year, the city was in effect loaning the corporation $225,000 for a year. Columbus avenue cannot be extended without the removal of the head house of the depot; and by the terms of the contract, a copy of which he had procured today, they were obliged to surrender the entire property on or before the 29th June next. It would be better for the city to insist upon the fulfillment of the contract, for the order was nothing more than to give them another year for its fulfillment.

Mr. Pickering said he did not say that the corporation was entitled to pay until the property was surrendered; but the question was whether they were willing to take a surrender of a part and pay for that much, leaving a portion for which interest will be paid.

Mr. Shaw said he hoped no one would be misled by the statement of interest to be allowed, for there was not a word about interest in the contract. The passage of the order would put back the improvements proposed for one year, and already property had depreciated in value in that vicinity, on account of the delay in carrying out the extension of Columbus avenue and Eliot street. An estate had recently been sold for $26,500 which cost upwards of $30,000, involving a loss of from $5000 to $10,000, and he had been assured by one who knows, that the head house is directly in the way of the extension of Columbus avenue.

The question was, must the city succumb to this corporation? must we submit to their ipse dixit, or act upon our own interests? Unless it can be shown where it is beneficial to the city, and it was not shown or attempted to be shown that it was for the city's interests, he could not vote for the order. It was simply for the convenience of the railroad corporation that this demand was made to put back this needed improvement for one year. It may be two years, for should it be late next year before the surrender is made, the improvements cannot be made during the year. Practically it would be a delay of two years, and he would desire to know if the gentlemen from Wards 8, 9 and 10, who are so much interested, are willing to consent to this delay. It did not affect him, but he urged whether they had not better hold on to what they have and not submit to the demands of this corporation.

Mr. Flynn said the gentleman was continually harping upon the extension of Eliot street; yet there had not been a petition for the extension of Eliot street, and the committee had fully considered the subject, and were of the opinion that nothing would be done towards the extension of Eliot street this year. It was the determination to extend Columbus avenue this year, and it would be done on the passage of this order. The city's interests would be protected in the matter, and whatever was done would be made satisfactory to the City Solicitor.

Mr. Pickering replied to the statement relative to interest, that it was true interest was not mentioned in the contract, for it was not contemplated that the payment of interest would be required. But how was the fact? The city would retain $100,000 under the order. The question was whether they should pay it now or next year, and not to pay it now was as good as having money at interest.

Mr. Page said the statement made did not represent the condition of things. It was not retaining $100,000 but paying $225,000, which was not due until the head house was removed, until every brick and stone upon the land has been removed. As to paying them money, they were not legally entitled to any until the contract is completed. By the provisions of the contract, they were to remove the building and surrender the land in eighteen months after Columbus avenue is laid out, and a portion of Church street is discontinued. That laying out was on December 29, 1871, and the eighteen months will expire on the 29th June. The land belongs to the city on the 29th June, and the corporation cannot call for their pay and cannot collect a cent before the building is removed.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 said it appeared to be clear, then, upon the statement just made, that on the 29th June the land is to be surrendered, and that the city is to pay at that time, by the terms of the contract, $325,000. This sum they have literally got to pay in a few weeks. But the Boston & Providence Railroad Company, instead of requiring the city to pay $325,000, ask that the city shall pay $225,000 on condition that they shall be allowed to retain a portion of land which the city does not want at present. As a consideration the city may extend Columbus avenue, and retain the payment of $100,000 twelve months by allowing the railroad corporation to continue in possession of their head house for that period of time. It did not require a very clear head to understand the advantage of the proposition.

It appeared to him that the advantage was altogether on the part of the city. The city would gain in not being required to pay more than $225,000, for the extension of Eliot street was not contemplated the present year, and the extension of Columbus avenue would not require the removal of the head house. As a representative of Ward 9, he had an interest in the extension of Columbus avenue today, and it was for the interest of the city and the ward. There was not a shadow of doubt that it was for the interest of the city to make this change in the contract, and he had no hesitation in voting for it.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said the gentleman had expressed his views in the matter exactly. Until it could be shown that the land upon which the head house stands is needed, he had no objection to the passage of the order, and should vote for it.

Mr. Shaw said the matter was as plain to him the other way as it was to the gentleman from Ward 9, as he viewed it. It had been said there was no petition for the extension of Eliot street, but there was no necessity for it, for the extension of Eliot street was a part and parcel of the whole plan. It was said too, that it would be made satisfactory to the City Solicitor, but that would not justify them in stultifying themselves. In the extension of Columbus avenue, it would be necessary to fix the grades of that and the adjoining territory, to lay the edgestones and the sidewalks, but this could not be done until the entire territory was surrendered.

To say that the city has an interest in the passage of the order, is more apparent than real. The expense attending the delay will make a greater difference than the allowance of the use of the money. He had gone over this matter with the Street Commissioners, and the cost to the city would be nearer $10,000 than $6000. A delay of two years in carrying out the proposed improvements would be a disgrace to that part of the city. He could not see where anything could be saved, or in what single item the city would be benefited. The corporation had received a high price for its land, and should be satisfied to fulfill its contracts. The city has enough to do to pay its own debts, and it may be that this corporation will have to pay some not contemplated. There is more need of widening some streets than there was of widening Water street, and as work which should be done and imperatively needed, he referred to Beach street, in its bad condition, which required repaving.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 said there appeared to be a discrepancy in the statements as to the time of the fulfillment of the contract. If the land was to be surrendered in September, it would be too late to do anything during that season, but if the contract is completed by the 30th June, he believed it would be best to carry out the original contract.

Mr. Flynn said the Committee on Streets had never claimed that the railroad corporation was entitled to pay until the land was delivered. They came to the City Council with a petition, and after a most patient hearing, the committee were of the opinion that they might be allowed to retain the head house, which comprised 5600 feet of land of the value of $55,000 for a year, for which the city would retain the payment of $100,000. This was agreed to by the committee, with the approval of the City Solicitor. Under the passage of the order Columbus avenue may be extended immediately.

Mr. Page said, substantially, the extension of Columbus avenue is a matter of considerable consequence to a large number of the people whom I have the honor in part to represent, and it is because in my opinion the passage of this order will delay the extension of the avenue for a year, or perhaps more, that I oppose it. In order that I might know the exact condition of matters I procured today a copy of a portion of the original contract between the city of Boston and the Boston & Providence Railroad Company, and it appears that the railroad company are obliged to remove its buildings of every kind and nature on or before eighteen months from the day that Columbus avenue was extended by the City Council. That was done on the 29th of December, 1871, and if I can figure correctly, by the terms of that contract the railroad company are obliged to vacate the premises purchased by the city on or before the 29th of June, and if they neglect to remove their head house before that time it is forfeited to the city. Now, the 29th of June is but a short time to wait, and I think the best thing the city can do is to wait until that time and see what the state of affairs will be then, for I believe the passage of this order, instead of being an advantage to the city and advance the extension of Columbus avenue, will, on the contrary, be a serious disadvantage to both, and as the railroad company are not entitled to any money until the premises are vacated by them I see no good reason why the city should not insist upon the full enforcement of the contract. In regard to the fact as to whether or not the head house interferes with the extension of the avenue, I have been informed by a gentleman in City Hall, who has considerable to do with streets, that Columbus avenue cannot be properly laid out and graded while that head house remains in its present position.

Mr. Flynn said he had the assurance of the City Solicitor that the extension of Columbus avenue would not interfere with the building.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 said there could be no doubt in the matter in relation to the extension of the avenue, and that the surrender of the land proposed would be all that was necessary at present.

Mr. Pickering said that the matter of interest seemed to lay heavy on the gentleman from Ward 5. If he had got to pay $100,000 which could be paid off to next year, he might be willing to give $6000 for the delay, and in this case the delay of payment was a saving of interest. The subject had been made very clear by the gentleman from Ward 9 (Mr. Denny), and he did not need to say more.

The order failed of a passage, by a vote of 15 to 24.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR WATER.

The following communication was received from the Water Board:

BOSTON, May 19, 1873.

To the City Council—The Cochituate Water Board respectfully represents that a special appropriation of $115,000 is required for the extension of main pipes in Wards 13, 14, 15 and 16. As those wards are rapidly increasing in population there is an immediate necessity for the appropriation.

The act of the Legislature authorizing the city of Boston to take land on Parker Hill, Boston Highlands, for the construction of a reservoir has received the Governor's approval. A copy of this act is inclosed with this communication.

The report of the City Engineer, which has already been submitted to the City Council, states that the approximate cost of the reservoir will be $234,000. If being of great importance that work upon the reservoir shall be commenced without delay, in order to insure its completion before the coming winter, we would respectfully ask that the above sum be appropriated for that purpose.

JOHN A. HAVEN,
President Cochituate Water Board.

Referred to the Committee on Water.

The following order and ordinance were passed:

Ordered, In addition to the rights heretofore granted to the Metropolitan Railroad Company to lay down tracks in several of the streets of the city of Boston, said company shall have the right to lay down an additional track in Shawmut avenue, from Cliff street to Bartlett street; also a single track in Bartlett street, from the tracks in Shawmut avenue to a point two hundred feet west of the westerly line of said Shawmut avenue, with a curved track from said single track into the estate owned by said Metropolitan Railroad Company, on said Bartlett street. Said company shall also have the right to construct a curved track from the present track in Shawmut avenue, opposite the foot of St. James street, into the estate owned by said company, on the westerly side of said Shawmut avenue. The right to lay down the tracks located by this order is upon the condition that the whole work of laying down the tracks, the precise location of the same, the form of rail to be used, and the kind and quality of pavement used in paving said track, shall be under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Committee on Paving and the Superintendent of Streets, and shall be approved by them. Also, upon the condition that the position of the track now located in Shawmut avenue between Cliff and Bartlett streets shall be so changed that when the two tracks are laid down, the outer rail of each shall be equally distant from the centre line of said Shawmut avenue.

Also upon the condition that the said Metropolitan Railroad Company shall accept this order of location, and agree in writing to comply with its several conditions and file said acceptance and agreement with the City Clerk within thirty days of the date of its passage; otherwise it shall be null and void.

Ordinance to establish the almshouse at Deer Island as a suitable place of detention for neglected children under sixteen years of age.

PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The petitions of the South Boston Iron Company and others, William Pope and others, J. T. Gurney, William H. Mumler, S. Weld and others, Jefferson D. Merritt, and of J. H. Morrill and others, were severally referred, in concurrence.

The annual accounts of City Treasurer for 1872-73 were received, and referred to the Committee on Treasury Department.

The request of School Committee for additional accommodations for the Francis-street School; also, for a new schoolhouse (primary) on Blue-Hill avenue and Quincy street, was referred to the Committee on Public Instruction, in concurrence.

The report in favor of erecting a house for horse hose carriage on Longwood avenue was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings, in concurrence.

The following orders were passed, in concurrence:

Orders to pay G. Sherman and Eben Wetherell $200 each, for injuries received while in the discharge of their duties as firemen.

Order authorizing plans and estimates to be procured for construction of an English high and Latin schoolhouse, upon land purchased for the purpose on Warren avenue.

Order authorizing seven music stands to be procured, at an estimated cost of $1500.

The order authorizing plans and estimates to be procured for construction of a primary schoolhouse on Marlborough and Exeter streets, coming up amended by striking out "Marlborough" and inserting "Newbury," on motion of Alderman Gaffield it was laid on the table.

Alderman Gaffield offered the following order:

Ordered, That the order passed May 2, 1873, authorizing the Treasurer to borrow $60,000 to be applied to the purchase of land for a primary school in Ward 6, be amended so as to read "Ward 9."

Alderman Gaffield stated that a clerical error was made in the report in relation to the location, which this and the amendment to the other order corrects, growing out of a change from the former proposed location of the schoolhouse.

Alderman Stebbins inquired whether it was designed to build the schoolhouse the present year, and stated that he had some difficulty in making out the location, the land not being completely graded.

Alderman Gaffield replied that it was not expected to do more than procure plans and estimates the present year, much time being required for the erection of such a schoolhouse.

The order was passed, and the other order was taken from the table and passed, as amended.

SMALLPOX-HOSPITAL CLAIMS.

Alderman Quincy moved to take from the table the reports of the Committee on Claims on the claims of Holohan & Maguire and Smith & McGaragle, for work done on the smallpox hospital.

The motion was carried, when Alderman Quincy asked leave to make a supplementary minority report.

Alderman Stebbins raised the inquiry whether the question in order was not on his motion to adopt so much of the report of the majority of the committee as provides for the passage of the order to pay the claim of Holohan & Maguire.

Alderman Quincy said he had asked leave simply to introduce a supplementary minority report. On its introduction, then a motion to substitute a portion of the report could be acted upon. As no action had been taken on the subject, he believed it to be in accordance with parliamentary usage to allow the submission of a supplementary report.

Alderman Stebbins said he made a motion at the last meeting of the Board to accept so much of the report of the majority of the committee as allows and pays the claims of Holohan & Maguire.

The Chair stated that Alderman Quincy had asked permission to introduce a minority report.

Alderman Sayward inquired if there was any motion pending.

Alderman Stebbins stated his motion again, and that its action would not affect the question of the claim of Smith & McGaragle.

Alderman Quincy said he did not now intend to make any motion in relation to the report, except to ask leave to introduce an additional report.

The Chair stated that leave would be given if no objection was made.

Alderman Stebbins objected.

Alderman Gaffield stated that if the presentation of the report would only occupy five minutes, he hoped that objection to its introduction would be withdrawn.

Alderman Quincy said he was in favor of paying the claim of Holohan & Maguire even if his report should be accepted.

Alderman Stebbins urged the disposal of the claim of Holohan & Maguire, and then they could act upon the other upon its merits.

Alderman Sayward said they had now majority and minority reports, and he wished to know if the committee wished to make another report.

Alderman Quincy replied that he did not.

Alderman Sayward wished further to know if the Alderman had not signed one minority report.

Alderman Quincy replied that he had not.

Alderman Power said he did not understand the ground of objection, since it was stated that the introduction of the report would not affect the question under consideration one way or the other, and he hoped the introduction of the report would be allowed.

Alderman Stebbins withdrew his objections.

Alderman Quincy then submitted his report, as follows:

The undersigned, a member of the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petitions of Messrs. Smith & McGaragle and Holohan & Maguire, respectfully asks leave to present the following additional minority report:

In order clearly to present the grounds upon which the undersigned bases his conclusion, it is essential to briefly review the facts as they were brought before the committee.

By a contract under seal, the builders undertook to complete this work within a specified time, and the city contracted to pay them therefor the sum of $16,200 at such times and in such sums as the committee would approve. By a stipulation common to all such contracts, the builders were held to insure the building for the benefit of the city as soon as the roof should be on. As the work approached completion, the city, with the builders' consent, put in some stoves in order to hasten and help along the work of drying the walls. One or two other articles were put in by the city, and a watchman stationed there during the night, with the builders' consent.

On the night of the conflagration Mr. Smith, before leaving the building, made a careful examination of all the stoves in which there was fire, intending, as he states in his petition, to surrender the building to the city the next day, when it would be complete. Before morning it burned down, and the first question is, upon whom the loss beyond what is covered by insurance should fall. A short time previously the builders had requested an advance, and were told by the committee that to get it they must comply with the insurance claims. They did so, taking out policies to the amount of $10,000, worded as follows: "William Smith & Co., on their interest as contractors in (describing the building) payable in case of loss to the city of Boston."

Thereupon the city advanced them $5000, and whenever the insurance money shall be paid, according to the policies, they will have an undoubted right to the balance, making $10,000, the full amount insured. Had they chosen to insure up to the full contract price, they would have received it from the underwriters. But they preferred to take the risk, on which, having lost, they are now claiming to be made whole by the city. Now either the building when destroyed was incomplete and in the contractors' possession, or it was (as claimed) to all intents and purposes complete and in the city's possession.

In the first case, the contractors can claim the insurance; in the latter the contract price. By their present petition they would seem to endeavor to do both; that is, they claim the insurance, and thereby assume that their "interest as contractors" had not ceased, and such further sum as shall make it up to the full contract price, thereby assuming that their interest had ceased, and the risk was the city's. Now as the undersigned is informed, the underwriters are shrewdly postponing payment until they see what attitude the city will take. For if we, by granting the petition, acknowledge the possession and risk to have been the city's, then the contractors' risk and interest, and not the builders', was the thing insured; and these risks had ceased and the policies are void.

The question seems to resolve itself into this: "Shall the insurers pay a part of this loss, as they agreed to, or shall the city pay the whole, as it never agreed to?" The undersigned cannot find, in view of the claimants' own testimony, that the building was completed and delivered when destroyed, though undoubtedly it would have been so the next day. But the builders must have understood the advantages and disadvantages of their contract. On completion and delivery within the specified time a handsome gain was to be made, but on the other hand, until such completion and delivery, whatever they did not see fit to insure was at their risk. On this contract they have lost; on other lucrative city contracts they have gained, and the undersigned cannot see upon what principle they can now claim to be made whole out of the public treasury, even could this be done, without discharging the insurers, unless by assuming that in such contracts as this all the chance of gain is to be on one side and all risk of loss on the other.

The case of the plumbers was somewhat different. There was no contract in writing and no delivery necessary on completion, inasmuch as the work was on a building in the possession of others. The additional piece of evidence which induced the committee to change their report was the fact, that in rendering a subsequent bill the firm had credited the city with the unconsumed material of the first job, and the city had the bill accepting such credit. On this point the City Solicitor's opinion is as follows:

"The fact that the plumbing materials saved from the conflagration were appropriated to the use or benefit of the city is evidence tending to show that those who received them for the city supposed that the contractors had completed their job, and if the persons so acting for the city had authority to accept the work when completed their action as described would tend pretty strongly in favor of the contractors' claim."

Assuming that the plumbing job was not quite complete, yet in the absence of any written contract or necessity for delivery, the undersigned cannot but think that a claim for days' work and materials might be sustained. If the verbal contract was proved, then the acceptance of the credit would with a jury tend strongly in favor of the contractors. For these reasons the undersigned concurs with the majority in their recommendation of payment of the plumbers' claim. On the petition of the builders, regarding the claim for $5000 of the insurance when collected, as well supported in law and fact, he recommends the passage of the accompanying order.

S. M. QUINCY.

Ordered, That all sums in excess of $5000 collected by the City Treasurer on certain policies of insurance on William Smith & Company's interest as contractors in the smallpox hospital on Swett street, destroyed by fire, be paid over to William Smith & McGaragle, the contractors aforesaid.

The question then recurred upon the motion of Alderman Stebbins.

Alderman Clark said the question had been long enough under consideration and the claim of Holohan & Maguire should be paid. The plumbers wished them to cease talking on the subject and pay their claim. The City Solicitor had given it as his opinion that the city was legally and equitably bound to pay the claim, and he moved that so far as the report recommended the payment of the claim of Holohan & Maguire, it be accepted.

Alderman Gibson referred to the statement that the City Solicitor had given his opinion that they were legally bound to pay the plumbers' bill, yet the chairman of the committee had said the contract was not completed; if the City Solicitor says it was done we are bound to pay it, but when he asked the chairman of the committee he said it was not done, and he would like to know where the City Solicitor found the evidence that it was done.

Alderman Sayward replied that he did say the work was not done, but the City Solicitor had changed his opinion from what it was, and if they waited a week or two longer, perhaps he would change his opinion in regard to the other claim.

Alderman Gibson wished the evidence to be furnished whether the work was or was not done; if it was done, he was willing to vote to pay for it; but if not, he should vote against it.

Alderman Sayward said he did not know what reasons the City Solicitor had of judging of the matter, for he did not get them from his statements. But it appeared to be the opinion of the City Solicitor that a verbal contract was better than a written one. They were both parallel cases. The work was not done in either case, for there were four hours, or two or one hour's work to be done, and the work of one was delayed by the other, and in both the work to be done was extra work outside of their contracts.

Alderman Clark stated in relation to the opinion of the City Solicitor, that it was formed, as he states, from facts submitted to him.

Alderman Gibson said it was hard to produce the evidence. He had asked for the facts on which the City Solicitor had given the opinion that the work was done: and now the chairman of the committee says it was not done.

Alderman Sayward stated that the evidence was not from him, but from the Committee on Claims.

Alderman Gaffield, in defence of the Committee on Claims, replied that at the first meeting of the committee the City Solicitor was not present, and gave his opinion from statements to him; but at the second meeting he was present, and his opinion was formed on the statements drawn up by Mr. Bugbee. The difference in opinion between the two cases was that Holohan & Maguire had their work done in a building not theirs, while Smith & McGaragle owned the building.

Alderman Clark stated that there was a misunderstanding in regard to the facts which were submitted to the City Solicitor. These facts were communicated, not by a member of this Board, but by a member of a past City Government, not here to explain. That gentleman devoted a great part of his time to the work of building the smallpox hospital, and it was due to the great efforts of Dr. Jenks that it was completed in so short a time. If he were present he could answer every question of the Alderman. It was Dr. Jenks and not Alderman Sayward, as it was sometimes supposed, who was chairman of the committee.

The question was taken on the order to pay Holohan & Maguire $1240 for plumbing work done on the first smallpox hospital, and it was passed.

Alderman Stebbins moved to substitute for the remainder of the report of the majority the following order:

Ordered, That the City Treasurer be authorized and directed to transfer and assign to William Smith & Company all the city's interest in three policies of insurance effected by said Smith & Company on a building which they had contracted to erect for the city of Boston as a smallpox hospital, and which was destroyed by fire on the 26th of December, 1872, before it had been delivered by said contractors.

Ordered, That the City Clerk be directed to attach a certified copy of the foregoing order to each of said policies of insurance.

Alderman Stebbins stated that he was willing to have the order lie over, and stated as the effect of it to give the claimants $10,000, which was less than the amount of the contract.

Alderman Quincy moved that his additional report be printed, which was carried.

Alderman Sayward moved a suspension of the rules, for the passage of the orders at this time.

Alderman Gaffield objected to passing the orders at this time, believing an important question to be involved, in relation to insurance.

Alderman Gibson said there was one member of the Board absent, which was a good reason why there should be delay in the action upon the orders.

Alderman Quincy said he should have no objection to one reading of the orders, but he wished the additional report to go to the other branch with the orders when they go there.

Alderman Sayward believed there could be no objection to action today, and they were ready any day to act upon the subject. There had been report after report, and any objection to action was merely for delay. Besides he did not know but what he should be absent at the next meeting of the Board.

Alderman Gaffield stated that new facts and phases had been developed, which made it an object to delay action.

Alderman Power said he could not see how the fact of the settlement of insurance could be affected by the passage of the orders. The question had been delayed long enough, and the claim should be paid.

Alderman Gaffield stated that conflicting statements had been made, that the policies of insurance had been proved, and not proved.

Alderman Stebbins replied that the sixty days for the approval of the policies had not expired.

Alderman Brown said he understood that the claim under the policies was filed on the 15th April. They were as well able to settle the question of payment of the claim now as at any time, and he hoped the orders would be passed.

Some further debate took place in relation to the insurance policies, and of the advantages which might be taken in quibbles affecting such policies.

Alderman Gaffield desired that Smith & McGaragle should obtain all their rights under their insurance policies, but he thought the action proposed might complicate the matter. As a friend to Smith & McGaragle he took the course which he had.

The question was taken on the second reading of the order, which was carried, by a vote of 6 to 4.

The orders were read again and passed, by a vote of 6 to 5, as follows:

Yeas—Brown, Clark, Emery, Power, Sayward, Stebbins.

Nays—Bigelow, Cutter, Gaffield, Gibson, Quincy.

Alderman Sayward moved a reconsideration, which was lost.

THE PROVIDENCE RAILROAD CONTRACT.

Alderman Clark presented the following petition from the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation:

The city of Boston having declined, by the action of its Common Council, to accept the proposal of the Boston & Providence Railroad Company to surrender the land required for the extension of Columbus avenue before the time fixed by the existing contract between the city and said corporation, said corporation hereby withdraws its offer so to surrender the same, and respectfully asks leave to withdraw its petition presented to your honorable Board, April 28, 1873, and asks that no further proceedings be had thereon

G. W. RUSSELL,
Solicitor for Boston & Providence Railroad.

Alderman Clark stated, in explanation of the action of the committee, that in a conference with Mr. Russell, attorney for that corporation, it was found that the completion of the contract for the extension of Columbus avenue had five or six months to run; it was not supposed by the committee that the extension of Eliot street would be required this year, there being great expense to be incurred in the widening of other streets, and there would be no occasion for the removal of the head house. The Providence Railroad Corporation, as they believed, made a liberal and fair proposition, under which, instead of requiring the city to pay $325,000, when all the building is torn away, they would, for the use of the head house for a few months, consent to the withholding of the payment of $100,000 for one year, which would be allowing $6000 for the use of property which would be of no use to us.

When the original agreement was made, they were not obliged to surrender the entire property until the end of two years, which would be on the 9th of December. It was discovered, however, when the matter went to the other branch, that in order to obtain betterments for abutters, the time was shortened to eighteen months, which would make the contract to expire about the middle of June. The Committee on Streets did not believe the land occupied by the head house to be needed at present, and thought it would be a nice thing to save the payment of the money, and they did propose to save it, but the order was defeated in the other branch.

But there was another side of the question. The deed given by the city to the railroad corporation for that portion of Church street discontinued and conveyed to them, was that it was free from all incumbrance. There was, however, a large sewer there, which is the main drain for all that territory. The corporation under that deed may compel the city to take up that sewer. If so, and the corporation is disposed to take advantage of a quibble, they may put the city to an expense of $10,000 to $15,000.

Alderman Brown inquired if it was proposed to continue the sewer in that street.

Alderman Clark said he made the statement simply to show that there are two sides to the question, and that the corporation have a right to ask for a removal of the sewer. There was a mistake in the contract in deeding the fee of the land to include the sewer, and whenever it may be demanded the city will be obliged to take up the sewer.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the request of the corporation to withdraw their proposal was accepted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets, reported leave to withdraw on petition of Edward Perkins and others, in regard to the assessment of betterments on Sturgis street. Accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Fanenil Hall, reported in favor of granting the use of Fanenil Hall to the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company June 2. Accepted.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Charles L. Beal to be compensated for injuries in body and estate by being taken to a smallpox hospital without cause, made a report recommending that the petitioner have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Fleming, for compensation for grade damages on Fourth street, No. 142; Thomas H. Carbrey, to be paid for grade damages at 22 Athens street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Power, from the Committee on Sewers, to whom was referred the petition of C. B. Barrett and others for a sewer in Clinton street from Blackstone to Commercial street, reported, that as a sewer already exists in Clinton street, therefore no action is necessary. Accepted.

Alderman Power, from the same committee, reported leave to withdraw on petition of John Wolf for a sewer in Russell place, Ward 15, Russell place being a private way. Accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the committee to whom was referred the petition of Henry Poor & Son and others, that the time for building on Fort Hill lots may be extended for one year, etc., made a report that as the Special Committee on Fort Hill Improvement by a vote of Dec. 6, 1872, granted the extension of time asked for by the petitioners, no action thereon is necessary. Accepted.

Alderman Cutter, from the Committee on Paving, on the petition of Francis Brown and others, that Waltham street be paved, and the railroad tracks be removed from said street, reported an order of notice for a hearing on Monday, June 9, at 4 P. M. Accepted, and the order was passed.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses as follows: William Coffey, to give a dramatic entertainment at Institute Hall, May 30; James W. Bailey and others, to hold a fair at No. 3 Winter street, May 22-24; Chauncy Hall Battalion, to exhibit a drill of said battalion at the Boston Museum, May 22; A. Rubinstein, to give a concert in Tremont Temple, May 19; also, licenses to E. H. Shackford and Moses H. Libbey as auctioneers; also, to sundry persons, of wagon licenses, dealers in second-hand articles, as victuallers, and for transfer of hack and wagon licenses. Severally accepted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on petitions for licenses as victuallers, as follows: Ernst Gottschalk, 5 Essex street; Fred Paradise, Nos. 1421 and 1423 Washington street; M. J. Kane, 8 Merrimac street; Joseph Lambrecht, 148½ Hanover street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, reported in favor of stables, as follows: Nathan Holbrook, to occupy a frame stable for six horses on Chickatanbut street, Ward 16; H. Richardson, to move a stable for four horses on Savin-Hill avenue; Wilson & Brother, to occupy a wooden stable for nine horses on Athens street, between A and B streets; Graban Hall, to occupy a wooden stable for one horse on Munroe street, No. 71; Engene McKenna, to occupy a wooden stable for seven horses on Third street, between A and B streets; also to W. B. Wilbur, to occupy a brick stable for fifty horses on Fourth street, No. 336, on condition that the frontage of said stable shall be of face brick, with brown stone trimmings, and placed eight feet from the line of said street. Severally accepted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on petition of George E. Clark & Co. for leave to occupy additional stalls for three more horses on Ward street, corner of Ward court, and of Eliza J. Ellingwood to occupy a wooden stable for one horse in Codman park, near Townsend street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Health, to whom was referred the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad for extension of time in which to build their stable on Shawmut avenue, made a report recommending an extension of ninety days from the expiration of permit granted, Feb. 24, 1873. Accepted.

Alderman Clark, from the Special Committee on Fort Hill Improvement, to whom was referred the accompanying petition by the occupants of the city's land on Fort Hill, asking to be released from paying rent for the use of said land, made a report that when permission was given these parties to erect temporary structures on Fort Hill soon after the great fire of November, it was agreed and clearly understood by the parties that they were to pay to the city as rent for said land at the rate of six per cent per annum on the taxable value of the land occupied by them, and printed permits were granted to the parties with the express provision, as follows, viz.: "The said occupants to pay the city of Boston for the use of said land at the rate of six per cent, per annum on the taxable value of said lot as estimated by the Assessors for the current year."

The committee cannot understand why these parties ask to be released from an obligation so clearly agreed upon by them and distinctly set forth in the printed permits.

They therefore unanimously recommend that the petitioners have leave to withdraw.

Read and accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Martin Hayes for an extension of time in which to build on the corner of Albany and Newton streets, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the time for building upon two lots of land on Albany street and Newton street, as sold by the city to Martin Hayes, in June, 1871, be extended to July 1, 1874, upon condition that he pays to the Superintendent of Public Lands the sum of $200 within ten days from the passage of this order.

The order was passed.

Alderman Emery, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of M. M. Ballou trustee, for change in condition of sale of land on Washington street, near Chester square, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be and he is hereby authorized, in behalf of the city, to execute and deliver to Maturin M. Ballou, trustee for M. A. Ballou, an instrument releasing from lot numbering 111 on Washington street, as shown upon a plan recorded with plans of city lands sold, book 2, folio 4, in the office of the Superintendent of Public Lands, so much of the fifth condition set forth in the deed from the city to Paul D. Wallis, recorded with Suffolk deeds, lib. 698, fol. 75, as requires that the building erected upon said lot shall be used for no other purpose than as a dwelling house for the term of twenty years from June 12, 1855, provided that he gives to the city a bond made satisfactory to the City Solicitor, agreeing to hold the city harmless from all damages, costs, expenses and payments to which it may be liable, directly or indirectly, by reason of the premises. The order was passed.

Alderman Emery, from the same committee to whom was referred the petition of Richard Leeds, for an extension of time in which to build on the corner of Albany and Sharon streets, made a report, recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the time for building upon two lots of land on Albany and Sharon streets, as sold by the city to Richard Leeds in June, 1871, be extended to July 1, 1874, upon condition that he pays to the Superintendent of Public Lands the sum of $200 within ten days from the passage of this order.

The order was passed.

Alderman Emery, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of William R. Clark for leave to purchase the strip of land and dock, known as the "Town Slip," at the foot of Beleher lane and between Rowe's and Foster's wharves, made a report, as follows:

The committee find on examination that in February, 1872, Andrew C. Wheelwright petitioned the City Council for the purchase of this same strip of land and dock, which petition was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, who visited the premises and were unanimous in the opinion that it was not for the interest of the city to sell the same, and so reported leave to withdraw, which was accepted by the City Council on the 1st of May, 1872.

The city then leased to the Rowe's Wharf corporation the said strip of land and dock for a term of ten years at the rate of $500 per annum, reserving the right to use the same for drainage purposes.

The committee, in view of the facts as above set forth, are clearly of the opinion that it is inexpedient to sell said strip of land, and would recommend that the petitioner have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of William R. Clark and others, trustees, for conveyance to them of a piece of land in Ward 16, made a report as follows:

The committee upon examination find that the records of the town of Dorchester show that on the 16th September, 1839, the inhabitants of the town of Dorchester, at a legal town meeting duly called and held, passed the following vote:

"That a piece of land be given to the proprietors of the Lyceum for a site for a hall on the Meeting House Hill, bounded on the south by the street running to the shore called East street, and on the north by the parish land; on the west by the road running front of the meeting house, called Winter street, and extending easterly so far as the parish lot extends."

The committee also learn from persons who were present at said meeting that the vote recorded was not correct, as the one submitted contained the words "to be used for public purposes only," and was so understood by all who subscribed to the stock for the erection of the present building, and the numbers were very large, but of late years have become so reduced that at the present time it is owned by five or six persons, who were anxious to obtain from the city a deed of the premises, so as to enable them to sell said property, believing that they possess at the present time all the title which was intended by the vote of Sept. 16, 1839.

The committee would therefore recommend that the petitioners have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Alderman Emery, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Benjamin Clapp for leave to purchase a lot of land belonging to the city on Norfolk and Madison streets having visited the premises and fully considered the same, are convinced that it is inexpedient to sell said land at the present time. They therefore recommend that the petitioner have leave to withdraw. Accepted.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Williams the sum of $200, in full compensation for all damages caused to St. Joseph's Church estate, Circuit street, by the lowering of the grade of said street, as ordered by the Board of Aldermen Sept. 26, 1871, upon the usual conditions; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Paving.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Sewers be directed to construct a common sewer in Fountain street, and to report a schedule of the expense thereof to this Board.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the salaries of the teachers of the Normal School, so called, as established by the School Committee, be allowed and paid up to the first day of June, 1873.

Alderman Gaffield replied to an inquiry of Alderman Stebbins that the order was designed simply to pay the salaries for services rendered, and not beyond the time named, which would be the end of the school.

The order to amend the police rules and regulations in certain particulars was taken from the table and passed.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Committee on Police be authorized to print one thousand copies of the rules and regulations for the government of the Boston Police and bind a portion of the same in such form as may be convenient for daily use by the officers; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for the Police Department.

Alderman Clark submitted the following orders to pay, which were severally passed, to be charged to the Burnt District Loan:

Order to pay James Leeds $40,052, for land taken to widen Franklin street; also, to pay James Leeds $88,000, for land taken to widen Congress street.

Order to pay Joseph B. Moors $14,500, for land taken to widen Congress street, and to pay said Moors $1530, for land taken to widen Matthews street.

Order to pay Rufus G. Norris $7500, for land taken to widen Congress street.

Order to pay James Tucker & Co. $1575, for land taken in the name of G. W. and F. Smith, for the widening of Federal street.

Order to pay Charles F. Shimmie and A. G. Van Zandt $3750, for land taken to widen Hawley street.

Order to pay George H. and W. P. Kuhn $75,738 for land taken in the name of the heirs of Freeman Allen for the widening of Franklin street.

Order to pay William Faxon and W. C. Elms $1949, for land taken to widen High street.

Order to pay R. C. Waterston $5894, for land to widen Milk street.

Alderman Clark offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Common and Public Grounds be authorized to erect an iron fence around the square on Commonwealth avenue, between Dartmouth and Exeter streets; also to raise the grade of said square, cover it with loam and sod, and lay out walks over the same; the expense, not exceeding the sum of $8000, to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

Alderman Gibson opposed the passage of the order, as unnecessary, when it is becoming the practice in New York and elsewhere to remove iron fences and leave such grounds uninclosed, and as a high price for a fence around the space to be inclosed.

Alderman Clark stated that the order was to carry out the plan which had been commenced in enclosing the ground in the centre of Commonwealth avenue, and was agreed upon in Committee on Common. The expense was not entirely for the fence, which would cost but $2000, but included grading, curbstones, etc. At a proper time he should advocate the removal of the fence of the Common at Tremont street, and the setting of a curbstone inside the mall, but would not interfere with the fencing of Commonwealth avenue. On this portion of the avenue, a large number of expensive houses had been put up, of a taxable value of a million dollars, and the ground should be inclosed to correspond with that already inclosed.

Alderman Sayward believed there was no necessity for the fences, which should be removed, as in New York around the squares.

Alderman Clark stated that it would cost three times the expense of this inclosure should the other fences be removed, in the setting of new curb stones, the old ones being rendered useless from the holes in them for the iron, and the fence would only sell for old iron.

Alderman Emery opposed the erection of more iron fences, and believed the removal of the existing ones the sooner the better.

Alderman Power said he was not present when the committee voted in favor of the order, and hoped it would be laid over.

Alderman Gibson further urged that light was coming in in relation to such matters, and that ninety-nine in a hundred would prefer the appearance of grounds uninclosed, as was shown in the removal of fences in New York.

Alderman Clark said he could not object to laying the order over if it was desired, yet the Superintendent of the Common was anxious to begin the work of grading the grounds, which was now late, and he did not wish to begin a new project which would involve a large expense in the removal of the fences already put up.

Alderman Sayward objected to putting up fences which it might be desirable to remove in another year.

Alderman Clark said it might be well enough to remove fences from little squares in New York, yet he did not doubt the Aldermen would hate to see the fences removed from the squares in East Boston, on Meetinghouse hill and on Independence square.

Alderman Power said he thought the time had gone by when public grounds were improved by fences so far as beauty is concerned, and as allusion had been made to the selling of the fences for old iron, and the expense of new curbstones, he would be willing to put down new curbstones, and take his pay in the fences.

The order was rejected.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield, the report and order for a loan of $20,000 to be added to the amount already authorized for erection of grammar schoolhouse, Dudley District, were taken from the table for consideration.

Alderman Clark inquired whether the plans were satisfactory to the committee, for from the former discussion he did not feel sufficiently enlightened to vote upon the subject.

Alderman Gaffield replied that the order was laid on the table on his motion, for the purpose of further consideration of the question of lighting the rooms. It was not designed, however, to make any change, and he had in his possession a letter from a distinguished oculist, Dr. Williams, in relation to the effect which the lighting of rooms would have upon the eyesight of the pupils.

Alderman Sayward stated that it was voted unanimously in the Committee on Public Buildings in favor of the plans proposed. The windows were much larger than in any other schoolhouse, and well fitted for trying the experiment of lighting the rooms on one side. Yet the whole end and aim of the opposition was the object of the enlargement of the schoolhouse.

The order was passed.

COMPLIMENTARY TO THE CITY CLERK.

Alderman Stebbins said it gave him great pleasure to offer the following order:

Ordered, That in consideration of the valuable services rendered to the city by Samuel F. McCleary, during the period of nearly twenty-two years that he has held the office of City Clerk, and also in consideration of the fact that he has been prevented by the pressure of official duties from taking the customary vacation granted to other city officers, there be allowed to him a vacation of three months, beginning on the first of June next, and that his salary be continued during that period.

Alderman Stebbins, in support of the order, said that while it would be a surprise to the City Clerk, it was due to him for his long and faithful services, and it had the approbation of the members of the committees, of the City Council, and of the whole community. Arrangements had been made by which the duties of the office would be performed by Mr. Bugbee, and there would be nothing to prevent his obtaining that recreation and release from his arduous duties, which he so much needs.

Alderman Power stated that since he had had the honor of a seat at this Board, no order had ever been offered that he saw the duty and pleasure of voting for so clearly as this one. There was no honor that this Board has the power or privilege of voting to Mr. McCleary that he has not proved himself worthy of, and for a whole life of faithful devotion to the interests of the city, he was sorry that they had not the privilege of paying him a more substantial token of their esteem than the one proposed in the order offered. Anything further which he could say would be superfluous.

Alderman Gaffield said it gave him peculiar pleasure to second the order. Referring to his long acquaintance with Mr. McCleary, commencing nearly forty years ago, while they were in school together in the Latin School in Schoolstreet, he knew him as a faithful student, and paid a high compliment to his fidelity and worth in the discharge of the duties of his office. In its public officers, particularly the Treasurer, Auditor and City Clerk, he deemed the city to be very fortunate, and in the last-named office, it had ever been in the same family. No more just and grateful duty could be performed than in the passage of the order, giving to one who has served the city faithfully for twenty-two years without a single month's vacation an opportunity to get relief from the duties of the office. The vacation should be a longer one, and he would wish that it should be for six months.

Alderman Clark said this was but a small tribute to a faithful public officer, whose services they could not very well spare, and one whose services they hoped to retain for many years to come. He trusted that his modesty would not prevent his accepting the vacation, which would allow him three months in which to go abroad and prove beneficial to his health. It would have the hearty approval of the present Board, and of the members of every Board who had ever sat around this table. He was happy to have such an opportunity to vote for the order.

Alderman Sayward said it would perhaps be better that no one should say anything more, for if they did say much more, the City Clerk would not be willing to go away. He had thought the present City Government was very illiberal, but if this order should be passed, he should think better of it.

Alderman Gibson heartily indorsed the order, and gave his testimony to the faithful services of the City Clerk during the six years of his connection with the City Government.

Alderman Quincy referred to the remark of Dr. man B. Eaton of New York, at the late meeting of the Social Science Association, in relation to the corruption of city governments, and of the selfishness of city clerks, and cited the reply of ex-Mayor Quincy, that there was no change of city clerks in this city, their average term of service being forty or fifty years. That was the secret of our good City Government.

The question was taken on the passage of the order.

Mr. McCleary asked leave to address the Board, and expressed his obligation to the Board for the vote, the order being totally unexpected to him. Yet it would be impossible for him to accept the offer to take a vacation and he hoped the order would not be passed. He could not avail himself of their kindness for it would be impossible for him to go away, and he could not get rid of the care which the duties of the office imposed upon him.

Alderman Clark urged that the order was designed to give the City Clerk an opportunity to regain his health, and it was hoped that he would live long years to come.

Alderman Gibson suggested that the order might be modified to meet the wishes of the City Clerk.

Mr. McCleary replied that he could not be happy away, and that it was a rule with him that no one should complain of his neglect of business.

Alderman Sayward was not surprised that the City Clerk wished to be where his work is to be done, but he hoped he would change his mind on the subject, and moved to lay the order on the table, which was carried.

Alderman Clark called attention to the order relating to Commonwealth avenue, which had been rejected, and after some remarks by him and Alderman Power, the rejection was reconsidered, and the order was laid on the table.

Alderman Clark said he had a letter from Alderman Hulbert, who was obliged to go to Europe on account of the sickness of his son, and in this letter he expressed a willingness to resign his seat at the Board if it was thought necessary. He did not believe it to be necessary, and took this occasion only to refer to the necessity of the absence of the Alderman, which it was hoped would not be for a great length of time.

Adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,
MAY 22, 1873.

The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held this evening at 7½ o'clock, E. O. Shepard, the President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The petitions of John S. Weeks and of Thomas W. Carter were severally referred, in concurrence.

The petition of the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation being under consideration, Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 said the petition presented a singular case, not being addressed to the Common Council, but simply to the Board of Aldermen. It presented a case of a good deal of novelty before us. The corporation asked that a petition on which a report and order had been made and action had been taken and rejected, may be withdrawn. The petition and the accompanying papers are not now before the Board, and it would be impossible to withdraw the petition.

Willing to give the Board of Aldermen credit for courtesy in sending a petition here which was not addressed to this branch, he yet contended that no such action could take place as was asked for. As well might they ask to take from the Senate or the House of Representative papers on file there. He supposed that the only object of the railroad corporation was to get themselves out of the predicament in which they found themselves, and he saw no other way in which it could be done, except by an indefinite postponement of the whole subject, and such a motion he made.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 said he was not present when the subject to which the petition related was under consideration, and did not know how he might have voted had he been here, yet he did not see any difficulty in relation to the withdrawal of the petition. It was not an unusual thing for a committee upon which his friend before him acted to report leave to withdraw on claims submitted to them, and if the committee could report that the petitioner have leave to withdraw he did not see why a party could not ask to have his petition withdrawn. It would be a discourtesy to refuse the request, and he hoped leave to withdraw would be granted.

Mr. Shaw replied that there was no comparison or shadow of comparison between the case now before the Council and the cases referred to by the gentleman from Ward 6. In this case the Council decided to reject the petition, and it could not be withdrawn, for they had not got it, and there were no papers to withdraw. There was no parallel at all in the cases. They could not dissever the petition from the rest of the papers. The petition was presented, action was taken, and consequently all the papers were rejected. The petition could not be taken from the order, for such a thing was unheard of in history. The record was for all time, and was already made by the clerk upon the papers, and the petition could not be given to the Providence Railroad. It could only be by a motion for reconsideration of the action taken that it could be reached; otherwise the Council would stultify itself. It was a well-known axiom in parliamentary law that you cannot do by indirection what you cannot by direct action, and consequently there was no course to pursue but either to non-concur or by indefinite postponement.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 questioned the course of reconsideration, for the railroad corporation did not wish to have the matter an open question; therefore it was that they had asked leave to withdraw the petition. The Board of Aldermen had acted upon the petition, and the question was, whether the Council would concur or non-concur. It was a perfectly proper course to give them leave to withdraw at their request, and not only so, it was but courteous to do so.

Mr. Shaw wished them to look at the consequences of the proposed action. If they non-concurred the matter would go back; if they concurred it would be proposing to do what they could not carry out. They could not give back the rejected paper, for to attempt to do it would be an unheard-of thing, and make them the laughing stock of every legislative body in the land. The only way to do was to refuse to agree to a thing which they could not legitimately do.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 believed the matter to be perfectly plain. The former request of the corporation required concurrent action, and inasmuch as this branch did not concur, the corporation ask to withdraw their request.

Mr. Shaw stated as the position of the corporation, that they wished no further action. The Council could do nothing unless they reconsider their former action, and it could be done only at a proper time and by a proper party. No further action had been taken, and there could be none, because no one had taken a step towards it.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said that while there was something in the reasoning of the gentleman from Ward 5, he could not see a necessity for the action proposed by him. The Council having passed adversely upon the claim, and it being rejected, it was alive no longer. This would be supposed to send them back to their original contract. By some means the solicitor of the corporation does not seem to think that the rejection of the order places them back upon the contract, and asks to withdraw the petition, that they may stand as originally. They think there is some question of it, and if we think they now stand on the original contract, there can be no objection to their withdrawal, that they may both stand as originally. Although it is a common thing to report leave to withdraw, it is never physically so, for he had never known parties to take back their petitions. It was a legislative measure to say that they could give nothing, and the parties say they are ready to take nothing. It was therefore right and proper to concur in the action of the Board.

Mr. Shaw said that in this stage of the proceedings he wished the Chair to rule on the subject.

The Chair stated that there was no point of order to be ruled upon.

Mr. Shaw said he would raise a point of order.

The Chair stated that the petition and nothing else was before the Council.

The question was taken on the motion to indefinitely postpone, and it was lost.

The Chair stated the question then to be on concurring in the action of the Board to give the parties leave to withdraw.

Mr. Shaw wished to know of the Chair what the consequence would be to concur in this stage of the question, for it was not competent for the Council to attempt to carry out the terms of concurrence, in severing the petition from the other papers. He wished to raise this point of order, what the effect would be if concurrence should be carried.

The Chair stated as to the effect of this action, that it would have no effect whatever. There was nothing to withdraw, and there could be no effect either way.

The question was taken on concurrence, and was declared to be carried, when a doubt was raised by Mr. Shaw.

A count showed a vote of 31 to 1.

The reference to Committee on Water of a request of the Water Board for an additional appropriation of $115,000 for extension of main pipes in Wards 13, 14, 15 and 16, and of $234,000 for reservoir on Parker Hill, was concurred in.

The following reports were accepted, in concurrence:

Reports of leave to withdraw on petitions, viz.:

Of Benjamin Clapp, to purchase land on Norfolk and Madison streets.

Of William R. Clark et al., for conveyance to them of a piece of land, Ward 16.

Of William R. Clark, for leave to purchase Belcher's-lane slip.

Of Charles L. Beal, to be paid for being taken to smallpox hospital without cause.

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Report and order for extension of time to July 1, 1874, for Martin Hayes to build on two lots of land on Albany and Newton streets.

Report and order for extension of time to July 1, 1874, for Richard Leeds to build on two lots of land on Albany and Sharon streets.

Report and order authorizing the release of a certain condition on lot 111, on a plan of city lands, on Washington street, on the terms and conditions set forth in said order.

Order amending the order authorizing the Treasurer to borrow $60,000 for the purchase of land for primary schoolhouse, Ward 6, so as to read "Ward 9."

The order to allow and pay the salaries of Normal-School teachers up to June 1, 1873, was read once.

REPORTS ON SMALLPOX-HOSPITAL CLAIMS.

The following reports were considered:

Report and order to allow and pay to Holohan & Maguire $1210, for plumbing for smallpox hospital on Swett street, destroyed by fire. (City Doc. No. 64, 1873.)

Orders to transfer and assign to William Smith & Co. the city's interest in three insurance policies effected by said Smith & Co., on a building which they had contracted to erect as a smallpox hospital, and which was destroyed by fire before it was delivered by the contractors; and for City Clerk to attach a copy of the above order to each of said policies.

Minority report on claims of Smith & Co.

Mr. Blackmar of Ward 11 inquired how the question stood for action.

The Chair stated the question to be on giving the order on the claim of Holohan & Maguire a second reading.

Mr. Blackmar further inquired whether the matters as reported upon in the majority report were to be acted upon separately?

The Chair stated that the question first was on giving the order appended to the report a second reading. If there was any objection the question could be put in two forms—first on accepting the report leave to withdraw on petition of Smith & McGaragle, then on the passage of the order, or by action upon the order first.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 moved to substitute the order appended to Alderman Quincy's minority report, for that portion of the report in Document 64 giving Smith & Co. leave to withdraw.

The Chair stated the question to be on the adoption of the substitute.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 said the report of Alderman Quincy had no reference to Document 64, and asked if it was meant to substitute No. 73 (Alderman Quincy's) for the order on page 5, No. 64.

Mr. Wells replied that the substitute was for that relative to Smith & McGaragle.

The Chair stated that the question would first be taken on the order relative to Holohan & Maguire, and then on the report relative to Smith & McGaragle.

Mr. Wells withdrew his motion.

The order to pay Holohan & McGuire $1240 was ordered to a second reading.

On motion of Mr. Wells, the rules were suspended, and the order was passed.

The question was then stated to be on the acceptance of the report (leave to withdraw) on the petition of Smith & McGaragle.

Mr. Wells moved to substitute for the report the order appended to Alderman Quincy's report, No. 73, as follows:

Ordered, That all sums in excess of $5000 collected by the City Treasurer on certain policies of insurance on William Smith & Company's interest as contractors in the smallpox hospital on Swett street, destroyed by fire, be paid over to William Smith & McGaragle, the contractors aforesaid.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 inquired if this was not an order different from that passed by the other Board.

The Chair stated that there was another order in reference to assignment of policies of insurance.

Mr. Blackmar said he hoped the order proposed as a substitute would prevail. It had the sanction of the Committee on Claims, and had all the facts in the case been known to the committee when their report was made, it would have been reported by them.

The motion to substitute the order for the report (leave to withdraw) was carried.

The order was read and ordered to a second reading, and under a motion of Mr. Blackmar for a suspension of the rules it was passed.

The Chair stated that there was another order, that which was passed by the other branch.

Mr. Perkins of Ward 6 suggested whether, in passing the other order, they did not dispose of this one.

Mr. Wells moved to reconsider to bring before them the other order.

The Chair stated that the motion was not in order.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 believed some gentlemen did not understand the question. They could not properly pass both orders, to transfer the policies of insurance and pay $5000 besides to Smith & McGaragle.

The Chair stated, in answer to an inquiry, that the question was on the second reading of the order.

Mr. Blackmar said the question stood exactly right now; they had passed the order to pay the plumbers, and it was exactly right, as the gentleman from Ward 9 says, to pay, as proposed, to Smith & McGaragle, the excess of $5000 collected on their insurance policies. This order, then, ought not to pass.

To a question of Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9, whether the order passed was the same which was passed by the other Board, the Chair stated that it was not.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 believed the order which was passed was passed under a misapprehension, and moved to lay this order on the table for the purpose of reconsidering the passage of the other, but subsequently withdrew the motion.

Mr. Shaw stated as the difference in the matter, that while one party made the insurance the other held the policies of insurance. But why transfer the policies? Who insured the building, the city or Smith & McGaragle?

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 believed there was no technical difficulty in the way, and that the two orders might well go together. The order passed authorizes the Treasurer to pay over all the excess of $5000 collected on the policies. If there was none collected, there would be none to pay. These orders assign all the city's interests in the policies of insurance, and it was utterly immaterial so far as affected the policies. He was free to say that he was decidedly in favor of transferring to them all the city's interests in their policies.

Mr. Denny wished to know if the gentleman does not understand, that if the city assigns these policies of insurance, it gives up also the $5000 held as collateral for the money advanced to them.

Mr. Dean replied that he proposed by passing the order to give $5000 more than if the matter stands where it does now. It was a complicated case he was free to say, yet from the reports and discussions, he had come to the conclusion that this claim was a just and equitable one. The only question was, whether it was legal and justifiable to pay the amount. If there was no legal difficulty, where does it stand? The plumbers' case was different from this. The reason given was that the city made use of its settlement some of the burnt materials, which would be some evidence against the city in contesting it.

The petition of the claimants say, that they were to put the building in possession of the city on the succeeding day, and the evidence goes to show that the city was virtually in possession, having put stoves in the building, and had a watchman there, and perhaps the maintaining of fires had something to do with the fire which burned the building. For that reason he thought this was an opportunity to do justice, and to go as far as to pay all the claims.

Mr. Denny said he hoped the Council would see the matter in a right light. Pass the order to transfer the $10,000 in insurance policies and the claimants would get $15,000, and the city would have nothing. Reject the order, and the parties would come here with their petition as in other cases, and the committee would report on its merits.

Mr. Holmes of Ward 6 opposed the passage of the order, believing the city should hold some security. The parties ought to have insured the building for its full value, and in not doing so should bear the loss. The question, then, was whether we or the builders should bear the loss. By the city's bearing the loss, contractors would run greater risks in dealing with the city than with private individuals.

Mr. West of Ward 16 contended that this order should be rejected; then if the parties think they have a claim against the city, they can come by petition and get a decision on its merits.

Mr. Wells said that gentlemen don't seem to understand that it is the insurance these parties are after. They had not received $10,000, and only $5000.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 said it was clear that the question was not understood; he thought he did understand it, but he did not; he thought it should go over, and moved to lay it over.

Mr. Denny said it was a most common thing to loan money and take insurance policies as security. The city paid $5000 and took as collateral policies to the amount of $10,000. They had no right to retain more than $5000 of the proceeds. So much over belongs to the contractors, and to pay it over to them was exactly right. Having met with a loss, they can come to the city, and it can be acted upon directly. On the other hand, the transfer of these policies contemplates not retaining anything but the payment of the entire sum of $15,000, which will about liquidate their claim. This was a wrong way to liquidate it.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 said he did not understand the question as stated, and that it was believed the parties were not entitled to collect the insurance without the passage of this order. He thought the majority of the members believed they voted for the order as it came from the Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Shaw thought the matter to be clear, as might be learned on page four of Alderman Quincy's report.

Mr. Blackmar thought the subject had been thoroughly considered. The gentleman from Ward 9 was right in relation to the matter, and he believed the order was a measure of disguise for the payment of the claim in full. If it was admitted that the building was accepted, that ends the matter, and the policies cannot be collected. Should we pay $10,000 on the contractors' risks, and assign the policies, it will be a virtual acknowledgment of the acceptance of the building, and if not on the contractors' hands the insurers will never pay.

The argument would be if the building was the city's they would not pay, because they did not insure for the city, but for the contractors, and if it was the contractors, they would be liable. He repeated that it was an order in disguise for the payment of the whole claim. The plumbers' bill was paid because the circumstances were different. In this case they were sorry for the contractors as they were sorry for the loss of a large amount of property blown up in the great fire, in which the city was not liable because the law was not complied with. So it was in many other claims which came before the committee, of a poor woman in breaking an arm, yet the city was obliged to dispense by law what they take by law.

Mr. Wells could not see the matter as stated, for if the city did not own the building, it had no legal right to claim the insurance on it. If this order should pass, he would move to reconsider the former one.

The Chair stated the question to be on postponement of the order.

Mr. Denny said there was no doubt in regard to the right to assign policies of insurance. The city took insurance policies as security for a loan, and the city only could receive the pay on such policies, and sign a receipt for them. By the terms of the contract the policies are made payable to the city, not as an owner but as collateral security. It is the usual way of receiving surety in such cases.

Mr. Flynn thought the gentleman from Ward 11 must be inconsistent, since he signed the other minority report, No. 64, to give the petitioners leave to withdraw.

Mr. Blackmar replied that in either event the city was protected, and there was no inconsistency. If a good case could be made on its merits, then they would be paid. The insurance companies had not offered to pay these policies, and in his opinion they were waiting to see what the action of the city will be.

Mr. Dean believed it would be of no earthly consequence in the settlement of this question, should these transfers be made. He would make the payment as full as possible against all possible claims against the city. He denied that there was any disguise in the matter. The result would be that the city gives $10,000 and loses its collateral. There would be no difficulty in the collection of the policies.

Mr. Denny said the gentleman from Ward 12 had stated correctly that under this order the city would pay $15,000. If the Council was ready to vote to pay it they might do so, but they should not do it under a misapprehension.

Mr. Blackmar said if this was passed it gave it to the parties without a legal claim, which they had no right to do. He hoped they would not concur in the passage of the order.

Mr. Wells hoped the order would pass. He had no doubt the building would have been accepted if certain gentlemen on the committee had acted fairly and honorably towards the parties. [The Chair called to order for reflecting upon members of committees.] He was willing to pass this order.

Mr. Flynn inquired if the question was not required to lie over under the rule.

The Chair replied that as it was a question involving money transactions it would lie over.

To a question of Mr. Pease by the Chair, that it did go over, Mr. Pease withdrew his motion.

The question was taken on ordering the orders to a second reading, and was declared to be lost, when Mr. Flynn raised a doubt, and moved a verification of the vote by yeas and nays.

The motion was carried, and the orders were ordered to a second reading, by a vote of 25 yeas to 24 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Abbott, Anderson, Barnes, Bicknell, Burt, Catton, Collins, Dacey, Dean, N. Doherty, T. H. Doherty, Flatley, Flynn, Jones, Kingsley, Loring, Marston, McKenny, Risteen, Shaw, Thacher, Warren, Wells, Weston, Whiston.

Nays—Adams, Blackmar, Boardman, Bowles, Brackett, Brennan, Burditt, Cudworth, Darrow, Davis, Denny, Fine, Holmes, McCue, Page, Pease, Perkins, Prescott, Train, Upham, West, Wilbur, Woods, Woodward.

The report and "an ordinance providing for the care and education of neglected children" being under consideration—

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 inquired wherein it differed from the existing ordinance.

Mr. Dean replied that under the ordinance this class of children were subject to being sent among vicious children, but as they were not of that class, being the neglected, provision was made in this ordinance by sending them to the Almshouse.

The ordinance was read twice, and passed.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The following orders were severally read a second time and passed:

Report and order to place a horse hose carriage in the house of Engine No. 18, at an estimated cost of $1500.

Report and order to place a horse hose carriage in the house of Engine No. 7, at an estimated cost of $1500.

Report and order to place a horse hose carriage in the house of Engine No. 23, at an estimated cost of $1500.

Order to advertise for proposals for reporting and publishing an abstract of the business and proceedings of the City Council, for one year, at not exceeding $4500.

Report and order authorizing an expenditure of not exceeding $5000, for improving Independence Square, South Boston.

Order to pay the bill of Elliot Ritchie, of $4078 75, for furnishing five hundred and two tons of coal for the East Boston ferries.

The following orders were laid on the table:

Orders authorizing the purchase of 7600 feet of land on Dudley and Forest streets, at not exceeding $1 50 per square foot, as a site for Hook and Ladder House Four; and for a transfer from the Reserved Fund of $12,000 for the purchase of said land, and for plans of such house.

Orders authorizing the erection of a police station house on city land on Fourth street, between K and I streets, at an estimated cost of $45,000; and for a loan therefor.

Order to allow and pay $600 per annum for rent of armory of Company B., Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., in hall 577 Washington street.

PETITIONS PRESENTED AND REFERRED.

Prescott & Chapin, for permission to erect a wooden building for a coal shed within the building limits of the city on Liverpool wharf.

Tileston & Hollingsworth, for leave to erect a wooden building beyond the legal dimensions.

Joseph D. Fuller, for leave to locate a building within the building limits.

Severally referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

A communication was received from the Clerk of Committees announcing that he had appointed to fill the vacancy as assistant-clerk William W. Clapp. Ordered to be sent up.

A petition was presented from members of the Standing Committee of the Washington and Dudley School District, in relation to the plans for the new grammar schoolhouse on the City Hall lot, in which they represent that the plans have the unqualified and unanimous disapproval of the committee of the district, that the ends or corners of the building are to be occupied by stairways and offices and superfluous small rooms for teachers, and the schoolrooms are to be confined to the centre of the building, which arrangement allows them light and ventilation on one side only. After giving further reasons against the use of said plans, they ask that the proceedings may be stopped in the erection of the schoolhouse until the plans of the building shall have been modified in accordance with the views of the committee, or until they shall have had a further hearing on the subject.

Referred to Committee on Public Instruction.

REPORT ON THE BURRILL CLAIM.

The Committee on Claims submitted in print, through Alderman Cutter, as their chairman, a report that they were unable to agree on the subject of the claim of Charles Burrill against the city, and therefore ask leave to present several accompanying reports, expressing the views of the individual members of the committee.

The first report, signed by Alderman Quincy and Mr. Wilbur of the Council, states that at the hearing given upon the said petition, the petitioner's counsel did not reopen the case upon its merits, but argued in support of the position that the present City Council were bound to carry out the order for the payment of $40,000, in accordance with the act of the Legislature empowering the city so to do. The undersigned, under the advice of the City Solicitor, are of the opinion that the order in question, being for the payment of a claim which had been declared illegal by the courts, was beyond the power of the City Council and ab initio void.

The act of the Legislature could not therefore validate the original order, but could at most authorize the present City Government to pass another in conformity thereto. The claim having been declared illegal, and its payment a purpose to which we have no right to apply the taxpayers' money, the Legislature has undertaken to remove that objection to the extent of $40,000. We are therefore authorized, but in no sense bound, to carry out the decision arrived at by a former City Government, and in order to decide whether it is for the interest and honor of our city that the claim should be settled by the payment thus authorized, or by any payment, the undersigned have thought it their duty to examine and weigh the recorded evidence and arguments in the case, as the petitioner did not see fit to reopen the same upon its merits.

In an examination of the evidence in relation to the present attitude of the claimant, they refer to his refusing the offer of $125,000 in settlement of his claim, and his putting the city to the expense of defending two suits at law, in both of which he failed. They fail to perceive that he was entitled to any specially favorable consideration in the fact that he withdrew certain exceptions on which he might have carried his case to the Supreme Court, and in withdrawing them, he chose that in which his only chance remained of obtaining his claim. They therefore consider both the legal and equitable rights of all parties exactly as if no exceptions had been filed.

In an examination of the claim itself, it is stated that Mr. Lincoln, after some demurring to the indorsement of the list of back navy enlistments, on which to obtain their acceptance, complied with the request. On this they say, "had there been no contract, what would Mr. Burrill have considered to be his claim against the city resulting from this action of the Mayor? Clearly to be reimbursed the value of his services and legitimate expenses in preparing the list, and for the same services and legitimate expenses in getting the same accepted. That under the head of legitimate expenses might be included some $80,000 for lobbying a bill through Congress could hardly have entered his mind."

But Mr. Burrill was employed by the city, and did something both here and at Washington, and the result of his labors was the list of six thousand names which the city authorities decided to accept, on the assurance, as is testified on their side, that such acceptance should not prejudice their case—that is, should not be an acknowledgment that they were liable for $125 per man under the contract. Whether such assurance was given or not, it is now evident that such acceptance did not render the city liable under the contract. What, then, should the city pay Mr. Burrill? Nothing, says the City Solicitor, because the evidence shows a fraudulent attempt to obtain an enormous sum by applying the terms of a contract to a class of cases never contemplated, and by pretended payments which were never made.

They do not, however, agree that the city should not pay anything, and in settling the question they say the amount should embrace all legitimate expenses connected with the work which Mr. Burrill was employed to do. In looking at the list of expenses, as given on his own testimony in the Circuit Court, they find put down to Mr. Roberts for three weeks' services in the wards of Boston, $6000 or $7000; Mr. Sherburne, clerical work on the Ohio, $3000 to $5000; officer's clerk, name unknown, $1000 or $1500—making a total of $13,500.

Mr. Burrill afterwards remembers items as follows: Paid in Washington, $6850; verifying lists at naval bureau, $3300; petty expenses on board ships, $4500; paid enrolment in Boston, $18,000; total, $32,650. Of these two statements they feel bound to accept the first, and this amount, with such an allowance for the value of his own services, making the sum $15,000 they are inclined to offer for several reasons. His employment to obtain back credits, induce men in service to credit themselves to Boston, or even to persuade rebel prisoners to do the like, they do not regard as an action which can be considered as a source of pride, and in view of the fact that the continuance of the controversy is not likely to enhance the reputation of either party, and that the Legislature has undertaken to authorize a payment, they think it for the honor and dignity of the city to make the offer which they recommend.

They conclude with recommending the passage of the following preamble and order:

Whereas, The Legislature of this State did, on the fourteenth day of April, A. D., 1871, pass an act in the words following, to wit: "The city of Boston is hereby authorized to pay to Charles Burrill of Brookline, the sum of forty thousand dollars, in satisfaction for all services rendered and money expended by him in procuring credits upon the quota of volunteers of said city during the war of the rebellion, in conformity to the order passed by the City Council of said city, and approved September 12, 1870, and may raise said sum by taxation or otherwise."

Now, therefore, it is hereby

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Henry W. Paine, the assignee of Charles Burrill, the sum of fifteen thousand dollars in full settlement for all services rendered and money expended by him in procuring credits upon the quota of volunteers of the city of Boston, during the war of the rebellion, and that the same be charged to the fund appropriated for Incidental Expenses; provided, That such receipts and discharges shall be executed both by said Burrill and said Paine as shall be satisfactory to his Honor the Mayor and the City Solicitor.

Messrs. Blackmar and Train of the Council assent to the conclusions of the foregoing report, except in regard to the non-allowance of interest.

The next report, signed by Alderman Gaffield, is of much greater length. He refers to City Documents No. 98, 1869, and No. 53 of 1872, as containing the evidence necessary to a thorough understanding of the claim, and he remarks that it is evident the citizens in general do not understand the matter, because they have only heard partial statements, and formed conclusions which a full perusal of the evidence would entirely sweep away. Because Mr. Burrill and his counsel persistently urge and obtain a hearing, year after year, it is wrongly supposed by many good citizens that the city is endeavoring meanly to shirk the payment of an honest debt. * * * A careful study and digest of the case, as presented in the documents above named, must convince every candid man that the claim of Mr. Burrill is not only unjust, but that it was commenced, continued and prosecuted in fraud and iniquity. Mr. Burrill attempted a gigantic swindle upon the city, and did not succeed; and now, not being able to obtain what he intended, his claim thrown out of every court, he was anxious to have us pay him the expenses of carrying on the fraud.

In an examination of the case, the circumstances of the times are considered, and the manner in which bounties were paid, and while, as he says, Governor Andrew made successful efforts through his influence upon Secretary Stanton, and the members of Congress, to obtain credits for those who were enlisted into the navy, Mr. Lincoln was making every effort to get men, in order to avoid a draft. In doing so, with his usual kindness and patience, as he listened to their stories, he said to them—"Bring on your men, and we will pay for each one of them the legal amount of $125, as authorized by the Legislature."

Mr. Lincoln signed the document of May 31, 1864, with the understanding that rebel prisoners were to be obtained from Rock Island, and when it was found that he was not obtaining them from there, Mayor Lincoln and Mr. Norcross desired to have nothing more to do with the man who had deceived them.

The Mayor and Aldermen and citizens' committees kept on in the work of recruiting men for the army, and in connection with the prospective increase from navy credits, canvassed the whole city, from house to house, to obtain the names of those who at any time during the war had entered the naval service. At the same time, clerks were sent to the Navy Yard in Charlestown, to obtain a list of the men there enlisted from Boston during the war, in order to compare it with the aldermanic lists obtained from the different wards. This list was not obtained at Charlestown, because, under the direction of Governor Andrew, the naval records were being copied by State officials; and lists containing 22,000 names, or more, were thus prepared, which were used by the commissioners, Governor Andrew and ex-Governor Clifford, who were appointed by the United States Government to make a proper assignment of these men to the cities and towns who should properly claim them, and to divide proportionately among all the cities and towns those not so claimed. When the commissioners completed their work, on September 5th, Boston received a credit of 5224 men specially claimed on the list presented by Mayor Lincoln for the city, and 1072 men as Boston's proportion of the men not specially claimed by any city or town; and she was thus made free from all drafts, and had a surplus of thousands of men.

It is contended that Mr. Burrill did no more than copy or procure to be copied some six thousand names, and it is denied that he could have influenced Congress by bribes or in other ways to get the passage of the act to recognize naval cadets. The correspondence between Mr. Healy, City Solicitor, and Reverdy Johnson is cited in this connection, and the various claims and suits of Mr. Burrill are commented upon, and it is said that "here is a claim whose equity is denied by Mayor Lincoln, Mr. Norcross, Mr. Healy and others, whose legality is denied by the courts, and which, for the sake of getting rid of annual importunity, we are urged to settle by paying some amount of money from the city treasury."

Alderman Gaffield says that the proper performance of our duty leads us to the inevitable conclusion, and compels us to state, that the attempt at fraud, acknowledged in the preceding report as well as our own, debars the petitioner from all right to any compensation, no matter what services he may have rendered, or expenses incurred in his thus far unsuccessful attempt. We therefore respectfully recommend that the petitioner have leave to withdraw.

Alderman Cutter and Mr. Thacher of the Council assent to so much of the foregoing report as recommends that the petitioner have leave to withdraw.

Mr. Brackett, the remaining member of the committee, gives his reasons for dissent from the others, as follows:

He believes that Mr. Burrill, in preparing the list of six thousand five hundred and twenty-nine men in the navy belonging to Boston, and in preparing the proofs that they did belong to Boston,—without which proofs the fact that they so belonged would have availed the city nothing in diminishing its quotas under the various calls made upon it,—rendered the city a valuable service at a critical period; that the city, in accepting that list, with the proofs accompanying it, and presenting it as the list of the city, thereby accepted that service, whatever may have been the original contract or understanding under which it was undertaken; that, therefore, although Mr. Burrill may have abandoned his right to enforce payment for his services by legal means, and whatever may have been his chances of prevailing had he pursued his legal remedy, the city, having accepted the benefit of his services, is bound, morally and in honor, to pay him what those services were worth. The undersigned believes that the proposition that the city should pay a fair compensation for benefits rendered it and accepted, whether the party rendering them is able to enforce such payment or not, is one which will meet with the indorsement of a very large majority of our citizens, and, therefore, that we are justified, as their representatives, in recommending such payment in the present case.

Mr. Brackett reviews the question of services, and believes that the sum of $15,000 does not represent the value of those services. The action of the City Government and of the courts is cited, and the question of the value of the men at the time is considered. If anything was due Mr. Burrill, when did it become due? This is fixed upon as due September, 1861, when the work was completed, and if $30,000 represented the value of the services, the interest should be added, which would make the amount now due over $40,000. He therefore concludes with recommending the passage of the accompanying preamble and order.

Whereas, The City Council of this city passed an order in relation to the claim of Charles Burrill, on the 12th day of September, A. D. 1870, in the following words, to wit:

“Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Henry W. Paine, the assignee of Charles Burrill, the sum of $40,000, in full settlement of all services rendered, and money expended by said Burrill, in procuring credits upon the quota of the city in 1861, and that the same be charged to the fund appropriated for incidental expenses; provided, that such receipts and discharges shall be executed, both by said Burrill and said Paine, as shall be satisfactory to his Honor the Mayor and the City Solicitor”;

And whereas, Before payment was made, on the petition of certain taxpayers, an injunction was served upon the city authorities, restraining them from making said payment, on the ground that there was no legal authority to do so, and consequently said order was not carried into effect;

And whereas, The Legislature of this State did, on the fourteenth day of April, A. D. 1871, pass an act authorizing this city to pay said sum, in the words following, to wit:

“The city of Boston is hereby authorized to pay to Charles Burrill of Brookline, the sum of $40,000, in satisfaction for all services rendered and money expended by him, in procuring credits upon the quota of volunteers of said city, during the war of the rebellion, in conformity to the order passed by the City Council of said city, and approved September 12, 1870, and may raise said sum by taxation or otherwise”;

Now, therefore, it is hereby Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to the above-mentioned Paine, assignee of Charles Burrill, the sum of $40,000, as recited in the above-mentioned order passed September 12, 1870, in accordance with the terms and conditions therein mentioned, and as authorized by the act of the Legislature above referred to; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses.

Mr. Blackmar, who presented the report, moved that it be laid on the table, and he hoped the members would come to a more harmonious conclusion than the committee had.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Bicknell of Ward 4, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, made a report that there will be required to complete the hose house corner of P and Fourth streets, South Boston, about $2800. The original appropriation for this building was $20,000, which has been expended as follows: Land, $3600; plans and advertising, $475 64; extra iron work, $242 25; fuel, $20 40; contract for masonry, $8905; for carpentry, $6770. Total, $20,013 29. The additional amount of money needed is for heating apparatus, gas fixtures, plumbing, and for building retaining and fence walls. The committee, with the advice of the Auditor of Accounts, would respectfully ask for the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund for the completion of the hose house corner of P and Fourth streets, South Boston, an amount not exceeding $3000, the same to be added to the amount already authorized for the erection of a hose house, South Boston.

The order was read once.

Mr. Flatley of Ward 4, from the Joint Standing Committee on the Treasury Department, to whom were referred the accounts of the City and County Treasurer for the year ending April 30, 1873, made a report that they have made a careful examination of the accounts and have compared them with the records in the Treasurer's office, and they find that the entries correspond with the receipts and vouchers on file.

The business of the office during the past year amounted to $17,547,014 31—on city account, $17,209,694 36; on county account, $337,319 95. The amount of bonds held by the city for sales of real estate was $591,982 38. The amount of bonds for sales of estates purchased for widening streets was $648,433 31. The cash on hand was $686,410 82.

Accepted and sent up.

Mr. Eaton of Ward 11 offered an order, which was read once, that five members of the Common Council, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, be a Committee of Arrangements for furnishing music on the Common and other parts of the city, at an expense not exceeding $3000; to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

THE BASE-BALL QUESTION.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Ward 6, the report (leave to withdraw) on the petitions of Beacon Base Ball Club and others for the use of the northwestern portion of the Common as a play ground was taken from the table.

Mr. Perkins said he wished to make a point of order that the petition was not properly before the Council. By the amended ordinance providing for a Joint Standing Committee on Common, no power is given to the Council except by order or ordinance, the old ordinance providing that the care and management of the Common shall be in the hands of the committee. The joint committee had a hearing on the subject of the petition, but it should not have come to the Council, which has no jurisdiction of it.

The Chair ruled that the point of order was not well taken, for the right of petition was unlimited, and the petition was before the Council and must be acted upon, and this was the only subject now for action.

Mr. Perkins stated in explanation that the subject was before the Council because the committee were ordered to report. But inasmuch as the Council had no power in the management of the Common, action could not be taken on the subject of the petition.

The Chair ruled that the subject was in order, as it stands at present, but he had no time to examine the question legally.

Mr. Perkins said that holding the opinions which he did, the committee could act upon the subject as they saw fit. Unless an order or ordinance was passed, or without special instructions, they would not be bound by the action of the Council.

The Chair stated the question to be on the report of the committee to give the petitioners leave to withdraw, and the report was accepted in concurrence.

Alderman Quincy presented a petition, signed by George B. Emerson, John Amory Lowell, and 150 others, representing that elm trees spread their roots near the surface of the ground in search of air and moisture, which are essential to their growth; that the process of covering them with asphalt pavement, as is now being done on the Tremont-street-mall, is certain to produce the decay and ultimate destruction of the noble line of trees now standing there; that the gravelled walk, only frequented in fine weather, affords a great relief from the hard pavement of the streets—they therefore pray that this process may be immediately stopped, and the gravel restored to the part already done. Referred to the Committee on Common, with instructions to report thereon.

The following communication was received from the Mayor:

"BOSTON, May 26, 1873.

To the Board of Aldermen of the City of Boston: Gentlemen—It has been represented to me that certain parties are in the habit of removing gravel from Long Island to be used as ballast and for other purposes, claiming the right to do so under an order of your honorable Board, passed May 28, 1867. Owing to the length of time since the passage of that order, and my attention being called to the fact that further continuance of the practice may be injurious to the harbor, I desire to suggest your early consideration of the question whether the order should be revoked.

HENRY L. PIERCE, Mayor."

Referred to the Committee on Harbor on the part of the Board of Aldermen.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION.

Alderman Cntter, from the joint special committee appointed to make arrangements for the celebration of the ninety-seventh anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence made a report, that the committee had instructed him to request an additional appropriation of $5000 to cover the expense of an exhibition of fireworks on the Common, and a trans-Atlantic balloon voyage under the direction of Professor John Wise. The passage of the accompanying order is respectfully recommended:

Ordered, That the sum of $5000 be added to the appropriation heretofore made for the celebration of the ninety-seventh anniversary of American Independence, said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

The question being upon the passage of the order, Alderman Clark characterized the expenditure for the proposed balloon excursion as absurd, and a wasteful expenditure of money.

Alderman Gaffield replied that it was not necessarily absurd, for the possibility of success in the proposed balloon voyage was believed in by the principal scientific men of the country, and it was an experiment worthy to be tried. It would be well for this city to inaugurate such an honor, and if successful it would confer honor upon the city as well as upon those who make the experiment.

Alderman Clark said the same proposition was made last year, when the use of one-third of the Common was required in making the experiment and in the manufacture of balloons, and three months' preparation were required in getting ready. The committee did not think it advisable to make the attempt. It was proposed in committee to abandon the fireworks as a part of the celebration, but he was opposed to spending money uselessly for such a balloon excursion, and giving up fireworks. As well might they abandon the ringing of bells, firing of cannon and the delivery of an oration, for the use of fireworks in these celebrations was commenced in the time of the revolution and will continue until the country goes out of existence. If the appropriation was for fireworks he would vote for it, but not for the wild-goose experiment of attempting to cross the ocean in a balloon.

Alderman Brown stated that he was at first opposed to the appropriation for ballooning, because if the public were satisfied that the experiment could be successfully tried, State street or the public at large, would furnish any amount of money which would be necessary. He was not aware of the votes having been taken in committee, but believed the citizens of Boston were in favor of the fireworks on the Fourth of July.

Alderman Power said he was surprised at the course of the Alderman (Clark), when he voted for the appropriation in committee. As to the absurdity of the proposition, it was not more than any balloon ascension. All aeronauts agree that when once they get to a certain height, the currents are all one way, and the best scientific men are authority that it is so, and it would not be absurd in attempting to cross the ocean with the advantage of such currents.

But should the balloon ascension not be successful, it would be the most interesting one ever given. That it would not land in Europe, it was not for us to say. The committee would not pay $3000 for a balloon ascension, unless they thought it feasible, and that they will be likely to ascertain before the Fourth of July. A balloon ascension is essential to the celebration of the Fourth of July, and is a great source of enjoyment, it is attended with no danger, while yearly there are numerous persons injured by fireworks. Yet one of these need not affect the other, and it was not proposed to spend money for the balloon ascension, unless it is likely to take place.

Alderman Clark said he was opposed to spending $3000 for an excursion, when the balloon is likely to come down in Lynn or Marshfield. As to accidents, there were never any from fireworks when any one is employed who understands his business. The difficulty has been in receiving proposals and in giving the contract to the one who does it the cheapest, and the result was that it fell into the hands of those who don't understand the business. Balloons were of a more recent date, while fireworks had ever been connected with celebrations. He was willing to pay a reasonable expense for a balloon ascension, even when it collapses, but not such a sum as was proposed, with a probability that the balloon would come down somewhere in Essex, Norfolk or Middlesex counties.

Alderman Power said he was surprised at the remark of the Alderman, for on the score of antiquity balloons were older than fireworks. It had become well established that balloons may stay up as long as the aeronauts may see fit, for any length of time, and that at a certain height the wind blows only in one direction. The most scientific men encourage the experiment, and the best part of it is that there is never any danger from accidents as there is from fireworks. Then there will be no expenditure for the balloon ascension, unless the experiment is practicable and assured.

Alderman Clark believed that if the appropriation was made there should not be more than $500 expended for a balloon ascension, for they should not be so lavish of money when the balloon will land not more than fifty miles from Boston. He admitted that he did vote for the order.

Alderman Power said he was still astonished at the ignorance of the Alderman regarding ballooning, when it was known that 1500 miles had been travelled in a balloon, without accident.

Alderman Quincy said that at first sight it appeared to be a wild goose proposal to attempt to cross the ocean in a balloon; and yet it was not so. Some years ago it was demonstrated scientifically that a steamship could not cross the ocean, for coal enough could not be carried for consumption, and it would be necessary to have coal ships meet them about half way. If a bona fide experiment in crossing the ocean is to be made, and if that experiment is successful, that chance will be to our honor in aiding it; but even if not successful until the third or fourth, it will be to our honor in aiding in the first. The committee is not expected to act unless satisfied that in the view of scientific men it is feasible.

Alderman Clark further opposed the scheme as unreasonable, requiring not less than six weeks for preparation. It happened to him to know one of the party who attempted to come to the seacoast from Cincinnati and was tipped out in the State of New York. Before attempting a voyage a long distance across the ocean, and of throwing away money, it would be better to try it on the land, or where there was less water.

Alderman Power replied that the very gentleman who made the voyage referred to was to make this one, and he was satisfied that in going 1500 miles safely he could go double that distance as well. The committee, if not competent to judge of the matter scientifically, were competent to make a bargain, and they would not be so foolish as to throw away the money if it was not practicable.

Alderman Gibson suggested as an amendment that the sum should not be paid until satisfactory evidence was received of the arrival of the balloon in Europe.

Alderman Clark believed the suggestion to be a reasonable one, and he would add $3000 on the success of the experiment.

The order took its second reading by a vote of 9 to 1, and was passed by the same vote, as follows:

Yeas—Bigelow, Brown, Cutter, Emery, Gaffield, Gibson, Power, Quincy, Stebbins.

Nay—Clark.

H. Chadwick and others, and extending said Magazine street at a width of forty feet, over land of Owen Nawn and others, to Dudley street, as shown on a plan made by the City Surveyor, dated June 5, 1872, and report to the City Council an estimate of the expense thereof.

Read and accepted, and the order was passed.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Standing Committee on Water, to whom was referred the petition of W. F. Wade that water be furnished to his estates, numbered 146-150 Canal street, made a report recommending that the subject be referred to the Cochituate Water Board. Accepted.

RESERVOIR ON PARKER HILL.

Alderman Stebbins, from the Joint Standing Committee on Water, to whom was referred the request of the Cochituate Water Board for an appropriation to extend the main pipes in Roxbury and Dorchester, and also to purchase land and build a reservoir on Parker's Hill, having considered the subject, respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying orders. The expense of building the reservoir as authorized by the recent act of the Legislature, is estimated as follows:

Five acres of land at not exceeding fifteen cents per foot.....	$32,670
Building the reservoir.....	73,500
Laying 24-inch main to connect.....	33,500
Total estimated expense.....	$145,670
Add ten per cent. for contingencies.....	14,567

$160,237

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $115,000, to be added to the appropriation heretofore made, for the extension of the water works in Wards 13, 14, 15 and 16.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $161,000, said sum to be expended, under the direction of the Cochituate Water Board, for land and constructing a reservoir on Parker's Hill, and making the necessary connections therewith.

Ordered, That the Cochituate Water Board be authorized, as the agent of the city of Boston, to purchase, or otherwise take, such land or real estate as may be required for a reservoir, at or near the summit of Parker's Hill, in Ward 15; and also to purchase, or otherwise take, land or real estate necessary to maintain suitable lines of pipes for said reservoir, as authorized by the act of the Legislature.

Alderman Stebbins asked for the passage of the orders at this time, as it was important that the subject should receive the early attention of the City Council.

Alderman Power hoped the orders would be laid over, for it might assume a different shape when it comes up. People of good judgment had assured him that perhaps some other bill might be found necessary which would answer a better purpose for a reservoir. There was a hill close to Brighton, one hundred feet higher, and Parker's Hill might not prove to be high enough, in case of the annexation of the neighboring towns, while the taking of the former would obviate the necessity of taking others in the future.

Alderman Stebbins replied that the committee and the Water Board had in view the prospective wants of West Roxbury and Brookline, which he doubted not would soon be annexed. It was believed by the City Engineer that Corey's Hill would be too high for a reservoir, and if one was constructed there, it would be necessary to put it on the side, half way up, and its construction would be at an extra expense of $150,000. It would not be advisable to have the reservoir there, and they could not put it there except with authority from the Legislature. Perhaps nothing would be lost by laying the order over, yet Parker's Hill was believed to be the place of all others, nearest to the pumping apparatus, and to the territory to be supplied with water.

Alderman Gatfield said the gentleman from Ward 12 was engaged in his own duties, which he understood so well, in another department, and was unable to accompany the members of the City Council to Parker's Hill. The water question was faithfully discussed on the spot, aided by the City Engineer, who was present. They were willing to take his judgment on matters reported upon by him, and the Water Committee were satisfied that this was the best place for a reservoir. He thought it would be best to allow the orders to take their course.

Alderman Power said he would not wish to throw obstacles in the way of what the Water Board believed to be a pressing need, but he had heard within a day or two that Parker's Hill would not be high enough to furnish the supply of water which might be needed. The distance from Corey's Hill would be shorter from the Chestnut-Hill Reservoir, and would not require so great a distance for the water to be pumped; but if the matter was in such a shape that it would be a serious drawback, he would not press the question to lay the subject over. It was a great and important matter, and persons of experience and good judgment had urged it as a ground for delay that the matter might be more fully looked into.

Alderman Stebbins stated that the committee had reduced the estimated expense, believing the sum of $230,000 to be far too high. They were of the opinion that fifteen cents a foot was high enough for land on Parker's Hill, and none could be purchased in Brookline at a less cost.

The orders were passed by a vote of 9 to 1.

REPORT ON MADISON-SQUARE FILLING.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, to whom was referred the petition of Henry Doherty, to be compensated for filling Madison square, made a report, as follows:

On the 24th March, 1871, the petitioner entered into a contract with the city of Boston to fill Madison square by depositing thereon good clean earth or ashes, to an amount not exceeding 26,666 cubic yards, for the sum of forty-five cents per cubic yard, as measured on the ground by the City Engineer.

The contract required, among other things, that at best two hundred cubic yards should be delivered on each working day, and upon the failure of the contractor to deliver that amount, the city was authorized to procure other parties to do the work, and any excess in price was to be paid by said contractor.

The price named for the work was much below the market rate, and the petitioner was informed before signing the papers that he would lose money by the transaction. He persisted, however, in his desire to do the work, and gave a satisfactory guarantee for its faithful performance. Having failed to make the progress required, after being repeatedly notified, the contract was terminated on the 23d of May, 1872, and on consideration of his surrendering it and releasing the city from all claims under it, the obligation which he had given to pay the excess in price for the additional filling was not enforced.

He now claims compensation on account of the settling of the filling after it was deposited on the ground and before it was measured, and represents that the work was done at an expense of over $9000, and at a loss of nearly $5000. The contract, however, provided that the material should be measured after its delivery on the ground, and the contractor was aware that he would have to sustain the loss on account of the settling or shrinkage which might take place during the interval between the deposit and the measurement. On account of the peculiar character of the territory to be covered, justice to the contractor required that the filling should be measured within a reasonable time after it was deposited. Estimates of the amount deposited were made monthly by the City Engineer, on which eighty per cent. of the contract price was paid.

It appears from the official returns in the Auditor's office, that the amount of earth deposited by the petitioner to the 30th April, 1872, was estimated at 11,000 cubic yards. When the contract was terminated, twenty-three days later, the final estimate of the City Engineer showed only 9978 cubic yards. Here was a loss of 1022 cubic yards, notwithstanding the contractor had during that interval deposited, according to the Superintendent of Public Grounds, 926 loads, averaging sixteen cubic feet each. The explanation of this discrepancy is that the monthly estimates were made before the earth had settled, and the final settlement was made upon an entirely new measurement of the surface of the square. In this way the contractor was made to suffer the loss of all the shrinkage which had taken place during a period of fourteen months.

Although the petitioner has no legal claim upon the city, having signed a release when the last payment was made, the committee are of opinion that the monthly estimate of the City Engineer, instead of the final estimates, should have been taken as the basis for a settlement, and that to the last monthly estimate should be added the amount deposited in loads up to the termination of the contract. In this view of the case the amount due the petitioner would be as follows:

1022 cubic yards (being the difference between the estimate April 30 and May 23, 1872) at 45 cts.	$459 90
544 cubic yards (being the amount deposited according to the returns of the Superintendent of Public Grounds between 30th April and 23d May) at 45 cts.	244 80
	$704 70
Interest one year, 6 per cent.	42 28
Total	$746 98

The committee would therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Henry Doherty the sum of $746 98, in compensation for loss sustained by him on account of the settling of the earth deposited on Madison square, under and by virtue of a contract with the city of Boston, dated the 23d March, 1871; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Common and Public Grounds.

The order was read once.

OCCUPATION OF THE SOUTH BOSTON FLATS.

Alderman Clark, from the Joint Standing Committee on Streets, to whom was referred so much of the Mayor's inaugural address as relates to the occupation of the flats on the northerly shore of South Boston, having considered the subject, beg leave to submit the following report:

The circumstances under which the matter is presented to the Government at this time is clearly stated in the following extract from the address above referred to:

"A good deal of time was expended by the last City Government in adjusting a comprehensive plan for uniting the Commonwealth, the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, the Boston Wharf Company and the city of Boston in the work, already too long delayed, of improving the South Boston flats. The occupation of these flats is incidental to a great harbor improvement which the Commonwealth has undertaken, the first instalment of which will secure the removal of Anchorage Shoal, and some two hundred acres to the deep water of the upper harbor of Boston.

In view, also, of the uses to which this territory is to be put as terminal grounds at deep water of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, and without doubt of the new Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad Company, soon to be organized, it cannot fail to be seen that the prosecution of this enterprise has vital relations to the future development of the city. It was supposed that all interests had been reconciled in the indenture of four parts which the City Council, in November last, authorized the Mayor to execute. It failed, however, to settle the terms on which the Boston & Albany Railroad Company might use its land for railroad purposes, and the city maintain over the same territory highways safe and convenient for travel. The last year closed before the negotiations on this point were concluded. I recommend that the consideration of this subject be resumed at an early day, in order that this great improvement may be entered upon by the parties in interest during the coming season."

The representatives of the several parties in interest having conferred together have finally agreed upon the form of indenture, a copy of which is appended hereto. The only material alteration in the agreement, which the Mayor was authorized by the last City Council to execute, is the reservation to the Boston & Albany Railroad Corporation of the right, so far as its own territory is concerned, to lay its tracks at grade across Eastern avenue, the extension of B street northeasterly of Eastern avenue, and across Northern avenue; also to lay its tracks, not exceeding two, at grade along Northern avenue, and the extension of B street, northeasterly of Eastern avenue, as authorized by the fourth section of chapter 461 of the acts of 1869, the location of said tracks to be subject to the approval of the Surveyors of Highways (the Board of Aldermen) of the city of Boston. It will be perceived that no tracks are to be laid along Eastern avenue, and that in the case of Northern avenue and B street the reservation does not go beyond the authority already granted by the Legislature. The provision in the act referred to is as follows:

"And said Boston & Albany Railroad Company may lay and use railroad tracks along and across those parts of any streets in South Boston adjoining any lands or flats purchased by them of said Commonwealth, or taken with its consent."

As the improvement of these flats is due mainly to the enterprise of the railroad corporations, it is to be expected of course that the territory will be largely occupied for railroad purposes; and it is necessary to the success of the improvement that every facility consistent with the public safety and convenience should be afforded to them.

The committee would respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order.

The order contains the indenture of eleven printed pages. City Doc. 71.

Its passage was urged by Alderman Clark, but subsequently, in the belief that all the Aldermen were not familiar with the provisions of the contract, it was laid over.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That in addition to the work covered by the contract for rebuilding Federal-street Bridge, the Committee on Bridges be authorized to contract for the performance of such other work as may be necessary to put the said bridge in complete running order; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Rebuilding Federal-street Bridge.

Ordered, That John W. Morris be and he is hereby appointed as a Field Driver and Pound Keeper at East Boston, in place of John S. Underwood, resigned.

Ordered, That the Committee on Markets be authorized to close Faneuil Hall Market if they deem it expedient, on Decoration Day, the 30th inst.

Ordered, That the Committee on Fire Department be authorized to visit the several steam fire engine establishments, to better enable them to select the most efficient and approved engines, hose, and hook and ladder carriages for the city service, at an expense of $1000; the same to be charged to the appropriations for the Fire Department.

Whereas, it appears that much confusion and trouble arise in South Market street by the concourse of wagons which approach Faneuil-Hall Market in all directions in the afternoons, and that some means of regulating the approach and location of said wagons are necessary; it is therefore hereby Ordered, That the Superintendent of the Market or his deputy be and they are directed, with the approbation of the chairman of the Market Committee, to close up one end of South Market street against the passage of vehicles whenever they shall deem it expedient so to do, and for such length of time as may be judged necessary for the purpose intended.

Whereas, it will be necessary to take down or remove the old City Hall Building on Dudley street, Roxbury, to give place to the new Grammar School-house to be erected on that site, and that provision must be made for the accommodation of the Municipal Court for the Southern District elsewhere; it is Ordered, That the Committee on County Buildings, with the consent of the Committee on Police, be directed to provide in Police Station House No. 9 accommodations for the Municipal Court for the Southern District and of the necessary offices connected therewith; the expenses of the same, not exceeding $500, to be charged to the appropriation for the County of Suffolk; and that said court be transferred to the new premises when they are made ready.

On motion of Alderman Power—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Sewers be directed to construct sewers in Neponset avenue between Taylor street and Neponset River; in Taylor street between Neponset avenue and Wood street, in Wood, Walnut, Water, High and Ericsson streets, and to report a schedule of the expense to this Board, pursuant to law.

Ordered, That the Committee on Paving be authorized to cause the removal of the foot bridges over the Boston & Providence Railroad, at West Canton street and Berwick Park, and for that purpose to sell the same by public auction.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be authorized, under the direction of the Committee on Paving, to contract for the watering of those streets in the "burnt district" not now watered by persons duly licensed by the city; the expense thereof, not exceeding $850 per month, to be charged to the appropriation for the Burnt District.

Ordered, That there be paid to Ellen F. Gilley the sum of $4000, in full compensation for all damages caused to her estate on Howard avenue, Ward 16, by the lowering of the grade of said street, as ordered by the Board of Aldermen, September 12, 1871, upon the usual conditions; to be charged to the appropriation for paving.

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Streets be directed to pave Eastern avenue and Commercial street, at the head of Eastern avenue, with small granite blocks, at an estimated cost of $8000.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That the secretary of the School Committee be respectfully requested to furnish to each member of the City Council a copy of the report made to the School Committee, May 13, by the Committee on Schoolhouses and Grammar-School Sections, upon the expediency of rearranging the school districts in the central portions of the city.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

Ordered, That the Committee on County Accounts be authorized to make such arrangements with the Register of Deeds as they may deem expedient for the preparation of the classified indices to the Suffolk deeds for the year 1873, and also an index to the "sales of real estate for taxes," and to the plans filed in the registry during that time; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for the County of Suffolk.

Ordered, That the chairman of the Committee on Legislative Matters be instructed to communicate to the General Court now in session, this Board's approval of the bill now pending in the lower branch providing for the conveyance of Berkeley street to the city of Boston, and this Board's intention, should the same become a law, to request a deed, in accordance with the provisions thereof.

Alderman Quincy, in offering the above order, stated that a bill was pending before the Legislature, reported by the Judiciary Committee of the House, in which the committee propose to deed Berkeley street to the city at a width of eighty feet, but a minority report was made giving to the city a bill in equity, on the ground that it was not consistent with the dignity of the Commonwealth to offer deeds which the city neglected or refused to accept. The only deed which the city refused was to accept a street of sixty feet which had been laid out at eighty feet. It had been said as the attitude of this Board, that it was divided in opinion, and he desired the passage of the order to show that attitude.

The order was passed with no dissent.

An order to quit, was passed, notifying Henry Lee, heirs of James H. Foster, Warren A. Rogers, heirs of William H. Monroe, Justin S. Ambrose, Mary Chism, Elizabeth Child, Gilbert Evans and all others interested, as owners, proprietors, tenants, etc., to remove all obstructions on or over the line of widening of Bedford street, by the 1st of August next.

An order was passed to pay a jail requisition for $1628 27.

ELECTION OF AUDITOR.

The Board proceeded to the election of a City Auditor, when Alfred T. Turner was unanimously reelected.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

Ordered, That a message be sent to the Common Council proposing a convention of both branches of the City Council on Thursday, the 29th day of May, inst., at 8 o'clock, P. M., for the purpose of choosing a City Treasurer for the present financial year.

ORDERS OF NOTICE.

On the proposed construction of a common sewer in Fruit street, between North Anderson and Blossom streets. Hearing Tuesday, June 2, 4 P. M.

On the proposed construction of a common sewer in Alpine street, at the westerly end, and through land of Guild and others to Circuit street. Hearing Tuesday, June 2, 4 P. M.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the order to erect an iron fence around the square on Commonwealth avenue, between Dartmouth and Exeter streets; also to raise the grade and cover said square with loam and sods, and lay out walks, at an estimated cost of $8000, was taken from the table.

Alderman Power said he did not know what the residents on Commonwealth avenue might prefer, but good taste called for doing away with all fences around public squares. If the people there were in favor of such a fence, he did not know that he should oppose the passage of the order.

Alderman Gaffield inquired what would be the cost of a stone coping for such a place.

Alderman Clark replied that he did not know what the cost might be there, but judging from the cost at Mount Auburn and other places, the cost would be about double that of an iron fence, about $3 67 per foot, which would make for 1289 feet a cost of $4733 79. A stone fence there would cost double that of an iron fence, and the stone now down for the iron fence would be lost. He hardly thought that the people there would consent to the taking down of the fence which had been put up, which would cost $12,000 or $15,000, and although he had talked to but one person, who opposed putting up a stone fence, he believed that all the residents would prefer to have a fence similar to those already on the square. If it was to be done, it should be commenced at once.

The order was passed.

FURTHER WIDENING OF WATER STREET.

On motion of Alderman Clark, the order for the Board of Street Commissioners to report the estimated expense of a further widening of Water street to fifty feet between Congress and Broad streets, and of its extension at said width to Atlantic avenue, was taken from the table.

Alderman Clark stated that the order was laid on the table on his motion, for he did not suppose it possible that the people would consent to any further widening of Water street and extension as proposed, with all the expense of street widenings on their hands. He was not then aware who the member of the Common Council was who offered the order, and that he felt aggrieved because action was not taken on the order. He would make no objection to the passage of the order provided it would not revoke the permits to build already given, nor retard the work of building.

Alderman Gaffield wished to know if the parties interested would be hindered in their building.

Alderman Brown moved an indefinite postponement of the order.

Alderman Power said he did not know who was in favor or against this proposed widening, or whether it would interfere with permits granted. But some day or another he believed this measure would be carried out. They ought to consent to its passage in order to obtain something which would warrant them in the rejection of the project.

Alderman Power opposed the motion on the ground that he could not give any reason for his action. It might prove to be desirable; and without estimates of the cost they could not judge whether they would be warranted in spending the money which it would cost.

Alderman Emery opposed indefinite postponement, for he wished to ascertain the expense and whether it could be done now less than hereafter. It was the opinion of many large tax payers that it ought to be done, and the Street Commissioners would be better able to judge of the cost.

Alderman Gaffield said he had secured his object in bringing out the opinions of the Board.

Alderman Clark said he believed the proposed widening would be a useless expense, which would amount to half a million dollars, and was uncalled for. There was no occasion for it, by way of travel, for it had Central street on one side and Milk street on the other. If passed there should be a proviso that it should not interfere with permits, and if estimates are to be made there must be an order of notice of fourteen days, and not less than thirty days would be lost unless it was to be carried out. He failed to see any advantage in the measure.

Alderman Power did not believe it would retard the work, for if permits were given the work would not be stopped, and if they go ahead it would enhance the expense, making greater objection to the widening. He did not know what it would cost, but the Street Commissioners were in office for that purpose.

Alderman Gaffield suggested that the Commissioners be requested to report at the next meeting.

Alderman Power said that such a provision would virtually kill the order.

Alderman Clark said that it would hardly fail to retard the work. If the parties building are required to tear down what they have put up, it would greatly increase the expense, as they had the experience in the widening of Lincoln street. It would cost much more now than when the order was offered, and if the cost would be $500,000, it would be almost useless to make an estimate.

The motion to indefinitely postpone was lost.

Alderman Clark suggested an amendment, to which the Chair responded that any amendment which might be made would send the order back to the Council and cause further delay.

The order was passed.

Alderman Clark stated that there was on the table an order requiring a report to be made on the subject of a Home for the Poor.

Alderman Power stated that the chairman of the committee was absent, and it was but recently that he learned that he was expected to act as chairman. He had, however, called a meeting of the committee for next Thursday, and a report would be made at the next meeting of the Board.

On motion of Alderman Quincy—

The report referring to the Committee on Legislative Affairs the subject of placing the control of stables in the hands of the Board of Health, was taken from the table.

Alderman Quincy stated that it would be impossible to obtain any legislation on the subject from the present Legislature, at this late day, and on his motion the report was indefinitely postponed.

On motion of Alderman Gaffield—

It was voted that when the Board adjourns it be to Thursday evening next, to meet the Common Council in convention, and that the next regular meeting of the Board be on Tuesday of next week.

The order was passed.

The reference to the Committee on Finance of the Treasurer's accounts on Dochester Trust Fund was concurred in.

The Mayor's message, stating that James L. Hillard has been appointed Mayor's clerk, in place of E. Emerton, resigned, was ordered to be placed on file.

The message of the Board of Aldermen proposing a convention for choice of Treasurer, at eight o'clock this P. M. was concurred in.

CONVENTION.

The Board of Aldermen soon came in for a convention for a choice of City Treasurer, Alderman Cutter, the Chairman of the Board of Aldermen, presiding.

ELECTION OF TREASURER.

Alderman Clark and Messrs. Prescott and Dacey of the Council were appointed a committee to receive and count the votes for Treasurer, the result of which was as follows:

Whole number of votes.....	58
Frederic U. Tracy.....	55

and there was one vote for an ineligible person.

Mr. Tracy was declared to be elected, and the convention was dissolved.

The following reports were accepted, in concurrence:

Report referring to Water Board the petition of W. F. Wade, that water be furnished to his estate, 146-150 Canal street.

Report leave to withdraw on the petition of M. A. French to be paid for injuries from an alleged defect in Kneeland street.

ELECTION OF AUDITOR.

The certificate of the election of Alfred T. Turner as Auditor of Accounts was read, when the Council proceeded to an election, Messrs. Darrow of Ward 9, Kingsley of Ward 3, and Flatley of Ward 4 acting as a committee to receive and count the votes, when Mr. Turner was unanimously re-elected, in concurrence, receiving 49 votes.

The orders to rescind order (Nov. 1, 1872,) authorizing purchase, for $7500, of land on Adams street, from Old Colony & Newport Railroad Company, as a site for Police Station Eleven; and in lieu of said purchase, authorizing the purchase of 7500 feet of land, at not exceeding one dollar per foot, of J. H. Robinson, as a site for said station, were considered.

Mr. Page of Ward 9 inquired where this land was situated, that it should be worth $1 per foot.

Mr. West of Ward 16 replied that it was situated very near the other, but was a better location, the price being the same, the city not being able to get a clear title for the other.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 said that to give the location more definitely, it was on the corner of Adams and Anburn streets, at Field's Corner.

The orders were read once.

The following orders were severally read once:

Report and order authorizing the grading of Madison square, and the erection of a wooden fence around it, at not exceeding $3000.

Report and orders for a loan of $115,000 for extension of water pipes in Wards 13, 14, 15 and 16; also for a loan of $161,000 for Parker Hill reservoir; also to authorize the Cochituate Water Board to take the land necessary for construction of reservoir, etc. (City Doc. No. 77.)

The following orders were severally passed, in concurrence:

Order requesting secretary of the School Committee to furnish the City Council with copies of the report of the Committee on Schoolhouses, etc., upon the subject of rearranging the school districts in central portion of the city.

Order authorizing the removal of the foot bridges over Boston & Providence Railroad at West Canton street and Berwick park, and for that purpose to sell the same by public auction.

The order authorizing the Committee on the Fire Department to visit the several steam fire engine establishments, to enable them to select the most efficient and approved engine, hose and hook and ladder carriages, at a cost not exceeding $1000, was considered.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 inquired what the necessity was for visiting steam fire engine establishments after purchasing additional fire engines.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 replied that the Mayor, in his annual address, alluded to the fact that steam fire engines of a greater capacity were needed, and the Fire Commission had made a similar statement; yet it was believed the city owned engines as good as any made. To satisfy themselves and the community on this subject, it was believed to be best to visit such establishments. It could not be so satisfactorily done to leave it to a sub-committee, and it was believed to be better for the committee to make the visit as a whole, rather than leave a doubt in the community in relation to it.

Mr. Denny said he had great confidence in the gentleman that the matter would be well investigated, yet he wished to know if so large an expenditure was required, and if he was satisfied that it was a reasonable and judicious expenditure. An experiment was tried on Mount Vernon street two weeks ago, which showed that our present fire engines had great power, and he did not believe it would ever be necessary to throw water higher than the cupola of the State House. Yet if the gentleman believed this was a proper expenditure he would not oppose it.

The question was taken on ordering the order to a second reading, and was declared to be carried.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 raised a doubt, and asked for the yeas and nays in verification of the vote.

The Chair (Mr. Perkins of Ward 6) ruled that the motion for the yeas and nays was too late.

Mr. Dean said he did not propose to argue the matter, yet it was a most common thing to verify a doubt by the yeas and nays.

The Chair said he did not know of an instance in the practice of the Council in which a doubt was solved by calling the yeas and nays.

Mr. Dean replied that such was the practice elsewhere in all parliamentary proceedings.

The Chair stated that a verification would be made in the usual way, by a rising vote and a count.

Mr. Dean again asked for the yeas and nays.

The Chair ruled the motion out of order.

Mr. Dean appealed from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. Shaw of Ward 5 declared that such a motion was in order at any stage of a vote, by all parliamentary rules, before taking a question or on solving a doubt. A call for the yeas and nays was an inherent right of any member in a record of his vote. He would second the appeal. In all legislative bodies such a right was recognized, and the yeas and nays were always called to solve a doubt, when required.

The Chair cited Section 3 of the rules of the Council, as declaring that "if any member rises to doubt a vote the President shall cause a return of the members voting in the affirmative and in the negative, without further debate on the question." Under this the custom had been invariably to solve a doubt by a count.

Mr. Dean read Rule 6, which he believed sustained his views, but the Chair reminded him that the rule in question was a rule of the Board of Aldermen and not of the Council.

The Chair read also Section 30, which declares that when a vote is doubted the members for and against the question, when called on by the President, shall rise and stand until they are counted." The rule, he said, was distinctly laid down and it had invariably been the custom to solve a doubt only in that way, as long as the Chair had been a member of the Council, and of this there could be no doubt.

Mr. Shaw believed the Chair to be mistaken, and that he misinterpreted the idea conveyed by the rule. When a member rises and asks for the yeas and nays, and is sustained by a vote of one-fifth, he is entitled to a verification of the vote in that way.

Mr. Dean said, if he was not mistaken, a vote on the claim of Smith & McGaragle was settled in that way at the last meeting of the Council.

Mr. Blackmar believed the rules sustained the Chair in his decision.

Mr. Dean believed that he had a personal right to a call for the yeas and nays, on being sustained by a one-fifth vote, as provided in Section 7, whether before or after the previous question has been ordered, on all questions and motions whatsoever.

The Chair stated that he was familiar with legislation as provided in Section 12, relating to the main question, and that was not a new section. After a call sustaining the demand for the previous question, it was too late to call for the yeas and nays, and the question had never been raised in the two years in which he had been in the Council, whether the yeas and nays could be called to solve a doubt. Section 7 did not affect or modify Section 30, because Section 30 imperatively decided the manner of taking the vote to solve the doubt.

The Chair stated the question to be, Shall the decision of the Chair stand?

Mr. Dean referred to a change in the rule on this question, which was considered by the Committee on Rules and Orders this year, and he claimed that under the rules the right belongs to every member, if sustained by the requisite number, to have the question settled by the yeas and nays. That right was never closed under any circumstances. Even should the previous question be put, the strongest which could be had, it would not prevent the motion for the yeas and nays.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 sustained the views of the Chair, and the question he said was in this case simply the solving a doubt.

The Chair again stated the question to be, Shall the decision of the Chair be sustained?

Before a declaration was made of the vote, Mr. Flynn of Ward 7 called upon the Chair to enforce the rule, in requiring all the members to vote.

The vote was declared to be 26 in favor of the decision, 10 against.

Mr. Flynn doubted the vote and called for the yeas and nays on it.

The Chair ruled the motion to be not in order.

Mr. Flynn wished to know if the Chair refused to entertain his motion.

Mr. Shaw proceeded to inquire—

The Chair declared the gentleman to be out of order, and ordered him to take his seat.

Mr. Flynn moved that Mr. Shaw be allowed to proceed in his remarks.

The Chair ruled that it would not be in order.

Mr. Flynn wished to know if they were both out of order.

The Chair declared that they both were, the only question pending being that of solving a doubt.

Mr. Flynn said he was about moving—

The Chair repeated that there was no motion pending, but to solve a doubt, and stated the question.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 wished to know what the question was.

The Chair stated that the question was on ordering the order to a second reading.

The vote was taken, and the question of a second reading of the order was carried by a vote of 29 to 14.

ADDITIONAL FOURTH-OF-JULY APPROPRIATION.

The report and order for an additional appropriation of $5000 for the celebration for the Fourth of July, was read once, and the question being stated as being on its second reading—

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 wished to know what this additional expense was for?

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 9 replied that of this sum, $3000 was for a balloon excursion, and $2000 for fireworks.

Mr. West of Ward 16 stated that when that order was passed, it was believed $15,000 would be sufficient for the Fourth-of-July celebration, and unless he could be shown that it was not sufficient, he could not vote for this order. If $15,000 sufficed, as was supposed, why not take out of that sum sufficient for a balloon ascension and fireworks.

Mr. Denny of Ward 9 stated that when the committee came together there was a strong feeling in favor of fireworks, and it was voted in favor of them and in favor of a balloon ascension; but as all the other objects had been cut and pressed down, it was found that there could be no fireworks or balloon without an additional appropriation. It was asked that there be an appropriation of $3000 for a balloon, in which to try an experiment.

Mr. Harrington of Ward 8 believed that the gentleman from Ward 9 had a wrong impression, and that it was not as he states it. A proposition was made for $3000 for the balloon to go to Europe, but it was voted to give $1000 for a balloon ascension, in which the parties might go to Europe or anywhere else. The expenditure for the rowing regatta was cut down, and it was not $3000 to go to Europe—not at all.

Mr. Wells of Ward 3 stated that when he offered the order for the Fourth-of-July celebration, he said the sum of $15,000 was not enough. The rowing and sailing regattas and the children's festivals were all put down to the lowest point, and the fireworks and balloon were left out. Many of the committee wanted fireworks, and a certain portion wanted a balloon ascension. If the appropriation of $3000 is made on which the balloon is to go to Europe, he would vote for it. It should be remembered that the balloonist wished to take two or three members of the Council with him, and that is a consideration.

Mr. Flynn said the gentleman from Ward 9 expressed the general feeling of the committee, but the gentleman from Ward 8 did not. He voted to ask for $3000 for the balloon ascension, provided that the man does what he agreed to, and it was with that expressed understanding that he voted for it.

Mr. Barnes of Ward 11 said the gentleman had expressed the views of the committee, which was for an appropriation of $2000 for fireworks on the Common and nowhere else. Professor Donaldson came here with a proposition for a balloon backed by Professor Henry. The opportunity afforded to Boston should be availed of if possible, and if $3000 is needed for it, it will be expended. A sub-committee was appointed to make conferences on the subject, and they will not expend more than $3000. He had in his hand a postal card from Professor Wise, who was well known, which, with the permission of the Council, he would read. [The contents of this card have been published.] He believed the committee could safely be trusted with $3000 in their hands, and that it would be properly guarded. It would be an earnest endeavor to show that at a height of 1½ miles the wind blows only in one direction.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said it had been the impression that an expenditure of $20,000 or $21,000 for a Fourth-of-July celebration was not economical, and he could not vote for an additional appropriation of $5000 unless convinced that it was a judicious expenditure and was needed.

Mr. Pease of Ward 1 asked to have the question divided.

Mr. Bowles of Ward 12 wished to know what an experimental trip in a balloon had to do with the Fourth of July. One thousand dollars would be enough for a balloon ascension, and if hereafter it is necessary to test an experiment, let it be brought before the City Government on its merits alone, when it may be fully discussed. He was willing to vote for what was proper and right for a Fourth of July celebration, but nothing more.

Mr. Pease withdrew his motion.

Mr. Shaw said there were some people who believed there should be an expenditure on the Fourth of July for a balloon ascension. When the original order was up, he voted against making it $21,000, and now he was in favor of an increase, for reasons which he would give. When the committee met the other branch was fully represented, and this subject was not lightly but fully and freely discussed. A sub-committee reported upon the division of the $15,000, which did not include fireworks. This produced considerable dissatisfaction, and it was suggested that an increased appropriation be asked for. It was suggested also that a scientific man wished to make an experiment of navigating the air to the Old World. The programme and principles of the proposition were stated, and that it was in the nature of an experiment. He was at first in favor of a certain sum of $1000 for a balloon ascension, and believed the project to be a visionary one.

On further reflection, he believed the feat could be accomplished. It was in the interests of science, and it would be well to aid in the attempt to establish its truth. Perhaps it would not require $3000, but it would be better, if we do anything, to appropriate enough to make it a success, than by stinting it to make it a failure. It was the character of all great discoveries that they were at first looked upon as foolish, before demonstrated as sound. The idea of attempting to go to Europe in a balloon will attract thousands to this city, and there will be ten for every one otherwise who will be drawn here to see such a novelty. This experiment would be a gratification of the people, and what are the ringing of bells, the firing of cannon and other things, but to gratify the people? It would be a great novelty, and no less so even though he should come down in Chelsea, Lynn, Marblehead or Swampscott. But he feels confident, and comes here because he believes this to be a scientific place. If he was satisfied the project was feasible, he would make the appropriation as much as was necessary.

Mr. Daegy of Ward 2 said he voted against the appropriation in committee, and he should vote against it here. Admitting that the project is feasible, why not allow scientific men to put it through. Money would be put out, and the balloon would probably land in Lynn. The city should not invest in such projects, and it was no argument to say that it would draw crowds of people, for there were plenty of humbugs which could do the same.

Mr. Burditt of Ward 16 said that when they voted $18,000, it was from motives of economy. He did not believe this was in the interest of science, and there was no evidence that men of science back it up. He moved to amend the order by making it $2500 instead of $5000.

Mr. Pease would not vote that sum for the balloon ascension, for he would not be guilty of aiding men to commit suicide.

Mr. Flynn hoped the order would not be amended. If it was designed to cut off the balloon ascension, why not make the sum $2000, for if that was to be struck out, why not do it man fashion, and not beat round the bush?

Mr. Burditt said he wished to have a fair appropriation for fireworks, and a moderate one for the balloon ascension; he did not propose to beat round the bush, for he would not cut off either.

Mr. Dean of Ward 12 said that when the balloon project came up, he looked upon it much as did the gentleman from Ward 1, yet he should not be surprised to find it to be successful. He was not in favor of an aerial trip, yet he was in favor of an increase in the appropriation. Much to his surprise, it was very difficult, if not impossible, to get along under the appropriation. Everything had been stopped at the lowest point, and the committee were on the whole of the opinion that they could not get along without more money. It would perhaps be a better way to give $5000. There could be no doubt that it will be well expended; for if not satisfied the committee will not expend it. His judgment was much as was that of the gentleman from Ward 5, but it had been carried against his will.

Some persons might wish to use the appropriation for different purposes from what he would. All the members of the committee were not satisfied without an increase of the appropriation; they want to celebrate the day for the gratification of all the citizens. The celebration was for the purpose of having a good time, for cheerfulness and pleasure and to forget that we have had a great fire. In a good many of the divisions of the celebration the appropriations are too small. They were all cut down, and not only cut down to meet the size of the cloth, but there was not cloth enough.

Mr. Brackett of Ward 10 hoped the amendment would be voted down and the amount of appropriation asked for would be granted. A balloon ascension for the Fourth of July was a perfectly legitimate object of expenditure. What was the object of such expenditures but to entertain the people? A large class are not now entertained, but seek to leave the city. A large class would be entertained by the proposed ascension—men of science and others, who would like to see the experiment tested. With regard to coming down in Chelsea, even should it prove so to result, it would not be conclusive against the theory to be tested. Every new invention designed to facilitate the progress of mankind is at first stigmatized as visionary. So it was with the use of steam and railroads. Even at the rate of eighteen miles an hour, it was said that a man might as well be shot out as a congreve rocket, and the first steamboat which crossed the Atlantic brought with it a treatise demonstrating that such a trip could not be made.

It was, perhaps, on this account that he was rather inclined to favor schemes which were called visionary, because people were badly taken in by their opposition to them. If this succeeded it would be of much credit to those who aid it, just as in the past aid had been given in any invention for the welfare of man. Let us give our aid to the project, if those who engage in it think they will succeed.

Mr. Suaw referred to the early days of railroads, when the projectors in this country designed only to use horses as a motive power, and when he was first in the Common Council great opposition and ridicule was made to the use of the first steam-fire engine, the Miles Greenwood. The starting of the first train of cars was witnessed as a wonder of the age, and he believed the air would be navigated. He should regret to see the balloon land at East Boston, yet he doubted not the gentleman from Ward 1 would give all the aid he could should the aeronaut come down on that island.

Mr. West of Ward 16 said he was in favor of expenditures to a reasonable amount for gratifying the people. The gentleman from Ward 5 opposed the expenditures of last year, as to a considerable amount not for the benefit of the people. If it was but a reasonable amount it would be nothing to him; but he objected to fooling away of the people's money. The fooling away of $1000 last year might just as well have been saved.

Mr. Boardman of Ward 6 said the history of inventions was not the question, that question being purely one of a scientific nature. In the expenditure proposed $3000 was for going to Europe, and could not be considered as an expenditure solely for the Fourth of July for spectacular appearances. The balloon would soon be out of sight, and so far as the spectacle was concerned for the gratification of the people, an ordinary ascension would afford the same gratification. There would be the same attraction as in going to Europe, and he did not, therefore, think the appropriation was germane to the celebration of the Fourth of July.

Mr. Bowles of Ward 12 said he desired to be put on record as loyal to the Fourth of July, but not for such appropriations as this was designed for. It was not for them to make a Fourth-of-July appropriation to test a scientific question. He desired to be recorded in favor of the full sum of $5000, not to test a scientific question, but to celebrate the Fourth of July and interest all the people.

Mr. Caton of Ward 11 moved the previous question. The Chair stated the question to be, "Shall the main question be ordered," and it was carried.

The first question was on the amendment of Mr. Burditt, to reduce the appropriation to $2500, on which the yeas and nays were ordered on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 7.

The amendment was rejected by a vote of 19 yeas to 33 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Adams, Blackmar, Boardman, Burditt, Burt, Caton, Cudworth, Dacey, Darrow, Holmes, Kingsley, Loring, Page, Pease, Perkins, Powers, Train, Warren, Woodward.

Nays—Abbott, Anderson, Barnes, Bleiler, Bowles, Brackett, Dean, Denny, Edwards, Flatley, Flynn, Hall, Harrington, Hine, Hughes, Kelley, Lamb, Marston, Martin, McCue, McKenney, Morse, Prescott, Risteen, Shaw, Thacher, Upham, Wells, West, Weston, Whiston, Wilbur, Woods.

The question was put on the question of ordering the order to a second reading, which was carried, by a vote of 30 to 17.

Mr. Barnes, of Ward 11, moved a suspension of the rules for the second reading of the order, which was declared to be lost, by a vote of 29 in favor, 16 against—not two-thirds.

Mr. Flynn raised a question as to the count, he having made but 15 in opposition, and moved its verification by yeas and nays.

The Chair stated that he counted himself as voting in opposition, making the 16.

Mr. Flynn doubted the vote.

The Chair stated that a decision had been made.

Mr. Flynn wished its verification by yeas and nays.

The Chair stated that a decision had already been made; that the yeas and nays could not be taken on a verification of the vote, and it could not be except by general consent.

Mr. Dean stated that when this question was up before, he could not get access to the book on parliamentary law, and he proceeded to read from Cushing to show that the yeas and nays could be called on verification of votes, and giving the origin of the motion.

The Chair stated that if a verification was wished he would take another count; and a count being taken, the vote was 33 to 18—not two-thirds.

The following additional papers from the Board of Aldermen were acted upon:

The petition of Emma H. Crosby was referred, in concurrence.

The following orders were passed, in concurrence:

Order to allow Thomas W. Carter to make an alteration to a building on the hospital wharf.

Order that the estimates for the widening of Beach street, of May 4, 1868, be taken from the files and referred to Committee on Streets.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The order to allow and pay the salaries of Normal School teachers up to June 1, 1873, was read a second time and passed.

The following orders were severally laid on the table: Order authorizing a transfer of not exceeding $3000 from reserved fund to the amount authorized for a horse house at corner of O and Fourth streets, South Boston.

Order for a joint committee to be appointed to arrange for music on the Common and in other parts of the city, at a cost not exceeding $3000.

The order to transfer and assign to William Smith & Co., the city's interest in three insurance policies effected by said Smith & Co., on a building which they had contracted to erect as a smallpox hospital, and which was destroyed by fire before it was delivered by the contractors; and for City Clerk to attach a copy of the above order to each of said policies, was read a second time and assigned to half-past eight o'clock next meeting.

Severally referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

ANNUAL REPORT OF TRUSTEES OF MOUNT HOPE CEMETERY.

To the Honorable City Council—The Trustees of Mount Hope Cemetery have the pleasure to submit their annual report, it being the fifteenth since the cemetery became the property of the city. As will be seen by the financial statement presented herewith, the receipts for the sale of lots, graves, and for labor during the year, amount to $22,400, which is $5000 in excess of the receipts of any previous year. This increase is due to the more equitable prices obtained for the lots, as well as to a greater number having been sold. It was the policy of former Boards of Trustees to have one uniform price for lots in the cemetery; this policy was continued until a recent date, when a graded scale of prices was fixed upon, lots favorably situated being held at higher rates than those not so well located. This change has been of great benefit to the city, and has met the approval of those purchasing lots in the cemetery. The present prices are, however, far below those in any of the older cemeteries near Boston. This fact, together with the natural beauty of the grounds and the fostering care of the city, will ever commend Mount Hope to those desiring to secure a resting place for their dead.

Nothing adds so much to the general attractiveness of the cemetery as the frequent cutting of the grass, and extra labor bestowed upon the ground within the enclosure of the lots. To secure this, the Trustees have recently invited the attention of all the proprietors of lots, whose addresses could be ascertained, to the importance of making provision for the annual or perpetual care of their respective lots. This suggestion has already met with a gratifying reception, and the Trustees feel confident that their effort to secure a permanent fund for the care of the cemetery grounds will be entirely successful.

Since the last annual report, the amount of labor performed in the cemetery exceeds that of any previous year. This work covers important improvements on Greenwood, Union, Elmwood and Walnut avenues, as well as the usual miscellaneous work upon all the avenues, walks and grounds throughout the cemetery.

During the year twenty-three half lots have been made upon Lowell walk, and sixty-seven full-size lots have been laid out between Central and Channing avenues, and will be completed early in the coming season.

About 140 tablets, headstones and monuments have been erected during the year; many of them of beautiful design and workmanship.

The number of interments made during the year, exclusive of those in the City Cemetery, was 775. The total number to May 1 was 6140.

In conclusion the Trustees acknowledge with pleasure the generous cooperation of the City Council by their appropriation for the maintenance of the grounds the ensuing year, thereby enabling them to make this cemetery one of the most attractive of the many beautiful "gardens of the dead" with which the vicinity of Boston abounds.

The Trustees mention with satisfaction their recognition of the valuable services rendered by their superintendent, Mr. Samuel A. B. Bragg, and those of Mr. N. A. Apollonio, the City Registrar, who is ex officio secretary of the Board.

For the coming season, additional facilities for conveyance to the cemetery have been made, and the Trustees believe that the increased accommodations will meet the wants of the public.

The report of the Committee on Accounts of this Board is appended.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE MAYOR RELATING TO THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The following communication was laid before the Board:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, CITY HALL,
BOSTON, June 3, 1873.

To the City Council of the City of Boston: Gentlemen—In my address at the inauguration of the present City Government, I called attention to the importance of increasing the efficiency of the Fire Department by providing additional apparatus, enlarging the water supply, and making such changes in the organization of the force as might upon examination be found necessary.

In view of the disastrous fire which occurred on Friday last, I deem it my duty to ask your attention to this subject again, and to urge immediate action, more particularly in providing additional apparatus for the protection of property in the business portion of the city. It is evident that the present means are insufficient. This fact has been recognized by your honorable body in making the appropriations necessary to enlarge the force. In order that the proposed increase may be made without further delay, I recommend that temporary accommodations be furnished at suitable points until permanent stations can be established.

The organization of the department is a matter which requires careful revision. The present system is clearly defective. Some changes in its details have already been recommended, but they are not sufficiently comprehensive to meet the emergency. To secure proper training and discipline, it is necessary that the officers and members of the department should be appointed for a term of years or during good behavior, and that the management should be placed upon a more permanent basis than is afforded under the present system. In my opinion the public interests would be subserved by increasing the permanent force of the department so that there shall be a sufficient number of men always on duty to work the apparatus on all ordinary occasions. When they are not attending fires, the hosemen can perform the duties of a fire patrol and also furnish much valuable information to the chief officers in regard to unsafe and dangerous buildings.

The recent act of the Legislature amending the Building law provides among other things that if any building in the city of Boston shall appear upon examination by the inspector of buildings to be specially dangerous in case of fire, by reason of insufficient thickness of walls, overloaded floors, defective construction or other causes, such building shall be held and taken to be dangerous, within the meaning of the provisions of the act, and the inspector of buildings, besides proceeding as in ordinary cases, may affix a notice of the dangerous character of the structure to a conspicuous place on the exterior wall of the building. Unless provision is made for such examination by members of the Fire Department, it will be necessary to make a temporary increase, at least, to the force in the Inspector's department, in order to furnish this information within a reasonable time.

Every effort should be made to induce the owners and occupants of buildings used for manufacturing, mechanical or public purposes, to provide additional safeguards against the spread of fire. The use of portable apparatus should be encouraged, and information as to the manner of using it to the best advantage by those employed in private establishments, should be disseminated as widely as possible. In many instances where serious loss has been occasioned in this city, it might have been prevented by timely action on the part of those who first discovered the fire, either in giving the alarm, or making a determined and intelligent effort to extinguish it. It is necessary that public opinion as well as the influence of the municipal authorities should be brought to bear to arouse a more general feeling of personal responsibility in this matter.

Among the most serious disadvantages under which our department labors at present is the inadequate supply of water in cases of emergency. In the old portion of the city many of the street mains, which were laid when water was first introduced, are too small to meet the requirements of the present time. They have become reduced by corrosion. The buildings they were designed to supply were two or three stories in height. A large portion of the territory is now covered by warehouses from five to seven stories in height, and filled with combustible materials. Even this inadequate supply of water is not used to the best advantage. It is furnished to the department through the old-fashioned hydrants, one of which is capable of supplying only a single steamer. The pipes and hydrants should be of such capacity as to discharge the requisite quantity of water to meet every emergency in every locality. Any measures adapted to these ends will receive my hearty approval and coöperation.

HENRY L. PIERCE,
Mayor.

Alderman Brown moved that the communication be referred to the Committee on the Fire Department.

Alderman Clark hoped that if it should be so referred, it would be with instructions to the committee to report on the origin of the fire, and the efforts made for its suppression.

The motion to refer was carried.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

The annual report of the Overseers of the Poor was laid before the Board in print. The report states that the duties of the office have been about the same as usual, somewhat increased by the growth of the city and the great fire, but not so much from the latter as might have been anticipated, owing to the efficiency of the Relief Committee, and the abundant funds so generously put into their hands by our citizens. They say, "Another year we may feel more sensibly in our department the effect of the fire, if any considerable number of the sufferers have become permanently poor through its influence; but so far, as has already been intimated, no large expenditures have been caused on this account. There is, however, a considerable increase from year to year in the military settlement of cases growing out of the late war. By recent acts of the Legislature, a soldier or sailor who served a year on the quota of any city or town, and received an honorable discharge, thereby acquired a legal settlement in the place to which he was credited. This carried with it, of course, a claim for relief for his widow and children if they should be in want."

The action of the City Government, extending Washington street, caused the taking by authority the market estate in Elm street, in which the Overseers of the Poor have an interest from the gifts of David Sears, known as the Fifty Associates Charity, and the Searstan Charter House. The question growing out of the title led the board, in connection with the heirs of Mr. Sears and the Fifty Associates Corporation, to a re-examination of the whole subject, with a view to a final determination of the respective rights and prerogatives of all parties. While engaged in this friendly conference, we were called to lament the sudden death of Mr. David Sears, the eldest son of the founder, and there has been a delay of the settlement in consequence. It is hoped that during the present year we may be able to adjust the matter in conformity with the benevolent intentions of the generous donor, and for the lasting benefit of the poor of the city.

During the year, through the vigilance of the City Solicitor, we have come into possession of some real estate on Cambridge and Joy streets, bequeathed "to the city of Boston for the benefit of the poor," by Mrs. Lucy Bullman, by her will dated Dec. 26, 1828, and the present income from the estate is about $1860 per annum.

The special reports of the Secretary and Treasurer, which are included in this document, present in detail the receipts and expenditures for the past year, with some statistics as to the class of persons assisted, which may be of interest.

The total amount of all expenditures is—

From city appropriation.....	$73,065 40
From income of various trust funds (not including investments).....	12,557 26
Total.....	$85,622 66

It should be remembered, however, that the first amount is more than the actual cost to the city, as it is our duty to advance the sums necessary to meet the wants of those who have settlements elsewhere in the State, and also of those State paupers who are too sick to be removed to the almshouse, which sums are repaid to us and afterwards returned to the city treasury. During the past year, $24,387 77 was paid back from this and other sources, so that the net expenditure of the city for our department was but $43,677 63.

The board state that in addition to their duties as Overseers of the Poor, of expending money raised by taxation, they have in charge certain trust funds, amounting April 30, 1873, to $301,793 15, exclusive of the Bullman estate, which has been given by charitable individuals for the relief of the poor, particularly for those who have seen "better days." To some of these funds are annexed certain conditions, while others are left to the discretion of the board. The Boylston Fund is divided into two parts; one for relief to adults, and the other for the education of destitute children. The income from the first is annually distributed. But a small portion of the second is used, it being the policy of the board to leave it to accumulate until its capital shall amount to such a sum that the income will be sufficient to carry out, in an efficient manner, the wishes of the donor.

The number of beneficiaries on the trust funds is 293, of whom 105 are between 60 and 70 years, 113 between 70 and 80, 32 between 80 and 90, 2 of 90 years, and 1 of 93 years.

The statistics of the Temporary Home do not vary materially from those of last year. Great care is used that it shall not degenerate into a city poorhouse, with permanent inmates. The definitive purpose of its establishment as a Temporary Home is always kept in mind in the administration of its affairs and in the control of its inmates. Of the admissions, there were 216 American females, 853 foreign females; 548 children under 12 years of age, and 6 births, making a total of 1623. There was one child adopted, 215 lost children restored to parents or guardians, 23 nurses furnished with situations, 421 persons furnished with employment, 38 adults and 41 children sent to Tewksbury, 134 persons sent to their friends, and 6 deaths. There were 12,644 single meals furnished.

The societies occupying rooms in the Charity Building are the same as last year; with the addition of the German Emigrant Aid Society, which was admitted in March. This society affords relief to those of German birth needing assistance, the more affluent of this nation with commendable pride seeking to aid their own countrymen rather than that they should be thrown upon the Provident Association or other of our local societies.

It is stated that some expense will be necessary for whitening, painting and other repairs, and alterations are contemplated in the Home, so that the inmates may be more secure of safety in case a fire should occur at night.

"The system of a thorough examination of all cases receiving aid is continued, with satisfactory results. We have now seven thousand three hundred and thirty-four papers, giving in brief an account of the personal history of the applicants, with their immediate ancestors. To these reference is made when successive applications for aid are presented. In addition to this an occasional call is made by one of our visitors, so that their present condition may be ascertained. During the year three hundred and ninety-eight new papers have been filled to meet the claims of new applicants. A tabular statement of the social condition of the families represented in these papers is appended to this report."

The Board of Overseers close their report with a feeling that the interest committed to their charge is in as satisfactory condition as the nature of the work will warrant."

In regard to begging and indiscriminate alms the board say they are limited by the laws which gave them an existence, and remark, "In the progress of time the laws of settlement may be so modified by the Legislature as to extend and enlarge the class entitled to its benefits, but at present we must conform to the existing statutes of the Commonwealth, without any power on our part to change them. The great problems of poverty and crime and their relations to each other, especially in the great centres of population, are not foreign to our thoughts, and we sympathize with those who are investigating their causes and seeking a remedy for their evils. We feel encouraged in our own city that poverty at least does not increase in a ratio corresponding with its municipal growth. A stop has been put in a great measure to begging, formerly so common in our streets, and we do not believe, if it is true in England, it is the same with us, 'the fewer beggars, the more robberies.' Work, in this community, is generally furnished to those who seek it; the real poor are those who by the infirmities of age are deprived of the strength to earn their livelihood, or those of middle age struck down by disease with a family of children dependent upon their exertions. To aid such is not only our duty but cheerful pleasure. 'Out-door relief' does not deprive the recipients of their homes or break up their families, but enters their dwellings and administers to the comfort of their inmates in their great extremity."

In the number aided directly from the office there were 612 having tax settlements in Boston; 371 having military settlements in Boston, and of those aided elsewhere there were 77 having tax settlements and 69 military settlements in Boston, making a total of 1129 cases having settlements here; 300 were aided residing here, having settlements elsewhere, which aid was refunded; 359 sick paupers were aided, which aid was refunded by the State, and 65 non-settlement cases temporarily aided, making the whole number 1841, representing 5532 persons.

The amounts of the several trust funds are now as follows: Pemberton or General Fund, $96,342 74; Boylston Education, $80,775 11; Boylston Relief, $18,856 07; Mason Fund, $8009 80; Dexter Fund, $2065 26; Jeffries Fund, $1831 31; total, $208,156 39, showing an increase during the year of $5839 96.

The hearings on orders of notice on the proposed construction of sewers in Alpine street and in Fruit street; also on the petition of David R. Whitney for leave to locate and use a steam boiler and engine on New street, East Boston, were severally taken up. No person appeared in relation thereto, and the several reports were recommitted.

Alderman Sayward, from the Committee on Licenses, reported in favor of licenses, as follows: Mrs. R. K. Stoddard, to exhibit spiritual manifestations at Nassau Hall, June 9; Murray's Circus Company, to give exhibitions in the city proper, East Boston and South Boston; to John A. Jones, as an auctioneer; to sundry persons, as victuallers, to keep billiard saloons, wagon licenses, and for a transfer of a wagon license. Severally accepted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on petitions for license as victuallers, as follows: George W. Reynolds, 317 Hanover street; Owen Head, 121 Cambridge street; Edward Carrigan, 806 Washington street; John F. Beck, 1190 Tremont street; John Klein, 44 Harrison avenue; Lot Boody, 241 Hanover street; William H. Bullard, 202 Hanover street; Cyrus Jones, 61 Richmond street. Severally accepted.

Alderman Quincy, from the Committee on Ordinances, to whom was referred so much of the Mayor's address as relates to the appointment of a commission to revise the city charter, made a report recommending the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to appoint a commission consisting of five persons, to examine the act incorporating the city of Boston, and all other general and special statutes now in force concerning the government of the city, and report in print to the City Council what, if any, changes are or will become necessary or expedient in view of the prospective increase in the area and population of the city; the expense attending such examination and report to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Alderman Quincy read that portion of the Mayor's address which referred to the revision of the charter, and stated that the reasons of the Mayor in respect to a revision of the city charter were well founded, in view of the proposed addition to the city by annexation. The committee do not assert what changes are necessary, but believe it to be a subject for a commission, rather than as work for the committee, even if they had time for it. It was believed to be properly work to be done outside of the City Council, and whatever might be reported upon, it bound them to nothing.

The order was passed.

DISCHARGE OF CANNON ON THE COMMON.

Alderman Quincy offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be instructed to report an ordinance prohibiting the discharge of cannon on the Common unless authorized by vote of the City Council.

In support of the order, Alderman Quincy addressed the Board as follows:

I am aware, Mr. Chairman, that the measure which I advocate will excite no small displeasure in many quarters. But having convinced myself that the time has arrived when in the interest of the public the step should be taken, it seems to me that I should not decline the responsibility of taking the initiative—the rather, perhaps, as it has been suggested that those of us whose ears are known to have been somewhat accustomed to the sound will have the advantage of not being suspected of weak nerves or want of patriotism.

I was present last Wednesday on the parade ground and watched the artillery evolutions and practice with great interest and pleasure. If in military appearance the batteries hardly came up to the standard which I was taught to require when it was part of my duty to inspect artillery, yet the pieces were excellently handled and the firing by battalion admirable, and all the more objectionable on that account. Why, Mr. Chairman, no such concussion as that is heard on the field of battle. If much artillery is engaged a solid roar fills the air, but as the firing is at will it never happens that twelve or more guns close together go off at the same instant. When the Common and Public Garden were only inclosed on three sides by brick walls, and the sound waves at least in one direction had free course, it was bad enough then, but now that it is corked up in all four quarters by dwelling houses, the continuance of the practice becomes, in my opinion, an outrage and an absurdity.

I repeat, Mr. Chairman, that, in a military point of view, I was much pleased with the firing of Major Follett's command on Wednesday last, and that which I heard yesterday, and presume was executed by that larger artillery organization, of whose services we, conservators of the jury box, know something, I doubt not, was equally creditable to them. But if, sir, it is made to appear that artillery firing in the heart of a city is no longer justifiable even to train and exercise our soldiers, it certainly follows that for the anniversaries of any private associations it is still less admissible.

There remains then the question of the patriotic salutes ordered by us for the celebration of the Fourth of July, and other national anniversaries. It must of course remain in the power of every City Council to determine where they shall be fired, and I therefore only venture to express the hope that we or our successors may find, if not now, at some future time, a more appropriate spot. I would suggest, for instance, that from the commanding eminence of Parker Hill, which we recently visited, cannon would be heard farther and by more individuals than those fired on the Common and would, in point of fact, give more pleasure and less pain to the citizens. Be that as it may, the power of the City Council to regulate, or, if necessary, to abolish entirely the use of the Common by the militia has been declared to be undoubted by our City Solicitor. The services of the batteries have, as is well known, been obtained to celebrate party triumphs as well as private anniversaries, and thus to embitter political strife by dining the victor's exultation into the ears of the vanquished—a use to which, in my opinion, neither the Mayor nor even the Governor should have the right to devote our Common. I would spare them the disagreeable task of refusing such requests by simply putting the whole power where it belongs—in the hands of the City Council, without whose direction artillery firing should, in my opinion, be absolutely prohibited upon Boston Common.

That this is the appropriate moment for the City Government to take action in the matter results from the fact that we can now do so without any apparent antagonism to the military authority of the Commonwealth. Under the new Militia law the old May training on the Common is done away with and the question of where and how the newly organized force is to be trained is an open one. Now then, as the old custom has ceased and the new departure is not yet entered on, it is the opportunity for us to decide, without any disrespect for the State authority, that this use of our Common by the Commonwealth's soldiers must not be resumed, without our consent.

The order was passed.
Alderman Sayward, from the Joint Standing Committee on Public Buildings, to whom was referred the order to procure plans and estimates for the erection of two primary schoolhouses in the Chapman and Prescott districts, made a report, that they have had plans prepared and procured estimates for doing the work, and find that the sum of $80,000 will be required for the two buildings. In view of the limited accommodations in the above school districts, the committee would recommend the passage of the accompanying order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to erect two primary schoolhouses in East Boston, for the accommodation of the Prescott and Chapman School districts, at an estimated cost of $80,000.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $80,000, the same to be applied for the erection of primary schoolhouses, East Boston.

The orders were read twice and passed.
Alderman Sayward, from the same committee, to whom was referred the order to procure plans and estimates for a city stable on land belonging to the city on Highland street for the accommodation of the Health and Paving departments, made a report that they have procured estimates for doing the work, and submit the lowest, which will be $85,000. They would recommend the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to erect a stable on the city lot on Highland street, for the accommodation of the Health and Paving departments, at an estimated cost of $85,000.

Ordered, That the Treasurer be authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of $85,000; the same to be applied for the erection of a stable on Highland street.

Alderman Clark wished to know what necessity there was for this stable, and whether its erection could not be postponed, for if it was not absolutely required, and they could save $100,000 at this time, it was their duty to do so.

Alderman Sayward replied that there was a necessity for this stable both for the convenience of the Health and Paving departments, and there had been for several years. There was also a necessity for accommodations for these departments at South Boston, but it was not proposed to ask that they be provided for at present. The committee would not have come here with this report if there was not an urgent necessity for the construction of the buildings.

The orders were passed.

ORDERS PASSED.

On motion of Alderman Gibson—

Ordered, That the Superintendent of Fire Alarms, under the direction of the committee on that department, be directed to place a clock on the tower of the Ticknor Schoolhouse, Washington Village, at an expense not exceeding $1000; the same to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Alarms, Bells and Clocks.

On motion of Alderman Sayward—

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to sell at public auction the old City Hall and other buildings remaining in the city lot, in order that the building of the schoolhouse for the Dudley District authorized may be commenced, the proceeds of said sale to be paid the City Treasurer.

On motion of Alderman Clark—

Ordered, That there be paid to Seman Klous $10,656 for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Summer street; also to pay Seman Klous $20,990 for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Devonshire street, upon the usual conditions; the same to be charged to the Burnt District Loan.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR FEDERAL-STREET BRIDGE.

The Committee on Bridges would respectfully report that an additional appropriation of $5100 will be required for the widening of Federal-street Bridge.

The cost of the repairs and widening of the bridge, and of building two draws, will be as follows:

F. A. Richardson's contract.....	$79,500 00
New trucks under draws.....	1,659 76
Extra track stringers, strengthening trusses, protecting machinery, repairing old office, strengthening easterly pier, and various smaller items.....	6,585 24
Gas pipe and plumbing.....	214 70
Printing and advertising.....	66 30
Engineering.....	1,531 24
Changing gear to quicken motion of one draw, and duplicates of parts most likely to be broken (estimated).....	512 76

Appropriation..... $90,100 00

Deficiency..... $5,100 00

This deficiency has been occasioned mainly by the following variations from the original design and additions thereto:

1. The substitution of trucks of an improved pattern for those furnished under the contract.
2. The laying of an additional set of track-stringers, made necessary by changes in the position of the foundation piles to meet the requirements of the Harbor Commissioners.
3. The strengthening of one truss of each draw and also of the most exposed part of the easterly pier.
4. The substitution of new material for old, in repairing the bridge to a greater extent than was considered necessary at the time the appropriation was made.

The plan of building two draws side by side is entirely new, and their construction involved many small expenses not foreseen and provided for in the estimates.

It is also designed to procure and keep on hand duplicates of the parts of the draw machinery most liable to accident.

The committee would, therefore, respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order, authorizing a transfer of $5100 from the Reserved Fund.

For the committee, L. R. CUTTER, Chairman.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to transfer the sum of five thousand one hundred dollars from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Widening Federal-street Bridge.

The order was passed.

ORDERS RELATING TO THE RECENT FIRE AND FIRE APPARATUS.

Alderman Clark offered the following order, which was passed:

Ordered, That the Committee on the Fire Department be requested to investigate the cause of the fire which occurred in this city on the 30th ultimo, and the efforts made to suppress it, and report the results of their investigation to the City Council.

Alderman Power offered the following order:

Ordered, That the Board of Street Commissioners be requested to report to the City Council plans and estimates for the widening of Washington street to sixty feet, between Summer street and Essex street.

Alderman Stebbins inquired if he understood aright that the order proposed widening from Summer street to Essex street. If the widening was from Avery street he was in favor of it, but not from Summer street, which would cost millions of dollars.

Alderman Power replied that the order referred to the widening from Summer street, for it was desirable that it should be done to prevent other fires; but if it was thought best to wait until the whole distance was burnt down, then perhaps it would be better to wait. But for the narrowness of the street, there was no doubt that millions of dollars of property would have been in existence which was not now. If they did not wish to have more extensive fires, then it would be well to have their attention turned to it, and that the street be made wide enough to have it safe. The order called for plans and estimates of the cost, and as no harm could come from obtaining them, he could see no objections to passing the order.

Alderman Clark said there could be no objection to getting estimates except that the Street Commissioners have now more work than they can do, nor would it make any difference if they were made every thirty days, for it was not likely that such a widening would be made this year or the next. Plans have been already drawn for the widening of Washington street from Essex street to Avery street, and it would be putting labor uncalled for upon the Commissioners. Such a widening as was proposed by the order would cost nothing short of $2,000,000 or $3,000,000, and to put that on top of the $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 now required could hardly be warranted. There could be no objections to making estimates for widening all the streets; School street, for instance, and Tremont street, which needed widening as much as any street, and would cost but $25,000 or $30,000. To devote thirty or sixty days to a widening job which they could not carry out would be labor wholly unnecessary.

Alderman Power said he was not arguing for wider thoroughfares, but for the safety of the city. The cry and fear throughout the city was for some means to be taken for the public safety, and there was no way so surely to meet that want as in widening Washington street and all others like Washington street. When the subject of widening Washington street was up before, the necessity for the widening was very apparent, but much more so was it now. If they chose to wait until the rest of Washington street was burnt up, then do so, and the responsibility would rest where it belonged. There was no street which needed widening so much as Washington street, even if there was no fire, but it would prove to be very costly should it be burnt down. The general desire was to have the street widened, and he hoped the rules would be suspended and the order would be passed. If it should cost $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 for the widening, it would not be much more than the loss by the late fire, and if high buildings were again put up there, further danger may be expected in burning over the territory again.

Alderman Clark said it was contemplated to make the street sixty feet in width where the late fire was. But until more effective means were taken to prevent such fires, the widening of streets would be of little avail. So long as buildings are allowed to be put up six or seven stories in height, two hundred and twenty-five feet in depth, with rooms filled with varnish, naphtha, excelsior,—the buildings put upon leased lands with thin walls, etc.,—it could not be expected that they would be safe. In this case the walls fell on the other side of the street and set fire to the buildings on the opposite side, and no power on earth could have prevented the spread of the fire. There have been other fires on Washington street where the walls were good and substantial, and the fires have been confined to them.
